

Lancaster Intelligencer.

TUESDAY EVENING, DEC. 14, 1880.

"Only asleep" - what a calm, sweet repose! What she is dreaming of on earth knows...

"Only asleep" - with her blue eyes closed tight, but they have opened in heaven's bright light...

Lips so compressed, here their cooling is o'er, sweetly they sing on the "Golden Shore"...

Dear little shoulders, so fat and so fair, white wings upon them are flying up there...

Oh will I seek thee, oh! seek thee in vain, 'Ne'er will you brighten this dark world again...

"Only asleep," yet what anguish is mine, Thank God, little angel, such ne'er can be...

Sleep calmly, sleep in the dear saviour's arm, away from this world of grief and alarm...

How peaceful her sleep! I'd not take her from him, And bring her back now, close to heaven she's been...

But as every day o'er her absence I weep, God grant I may think she is only asleep.

NATURE'S LOVES. BY MARIUS N. HUNTER. For the INTELLIGENCER.

Oh singing bird with forty nest, and plume brown and plain, and summer sun will pass away...

And yet thou knowest no pain, "God careth for us all," she says, "He gives us joys and sorrows..."

I hear the singing of my mate, In the apple bough above, Beautiful cloud above the hill...

Hide not the shining orb of silver lining bursting out, And embolden thou but afford...

Of all the love and joy and merriment, One little ray for me, On heavenly cloud, 'twould be a path...

To lead my soul to thee! Thou happy brook with smiling face, That tells of ceaseless joy, Well may thy laugh be low and sweet...

And life seem but a toy, All day thou art kissed by the sunlight's glance, And flash back ray for ray, And the nodding flowers upon thy face...

See love's reflections play, Beautiful lily, fairest of flowers, What tales of love canst thou tell?

Of the sigh of love, of the sigh of thy heart, And how thy love's been true, Thy cup is full for the fairy sprite...

When the moon begins to wane, That softly sleeps in her fragrant nest, Till moonlight comes again, Glorious Nature, earth's own queen, This is a royal crown!

And rare are the gems that with lavish hand In love thou scatter'st down, But what are all to our dimmed eyes, When hearts no kinder know?

Like Autumn leaves they fall unseen, And lie beneath the snow, Entirely inexorable, New York Times.

As is generally known, Sir John Lubbock associates exclusively with ants. This is, of course, creditable to him...

Long ago Solomon urged that large and influential class of his subjects, the sluggards, to cultivate the society of ants, and what is good for a sluggard is good for other people...

If Sir John has by honest and honorable means obtained admission to the best circle of ant society, he is acting wisely to keep up such intimacies with leading ants...

As he may have formerly, when, however, he proceeds to meddle with the social and private affairs of ants he takes an unpardonable liberty. He would not go into a fellow British baronet's house and dismiss his housekeeper or in other ways interfere with his domestic arrangements...

Neither would he dream of crossing over to France and upsetting the republic and placing a king or an emperor on the throne. His sense of delicacy would prevent him from thus meddling with British baronets or neighboring nations, and he must know that a man is bound by the laws of politeness whether he associates with ants or human beings. Nevertheless, he has taken it upon himself, to meddle in the most inexcusable way in the private and public affairs of ants, and it is impossible of the indecency of his course that he has actually written a book describing his rude and lawless conduct and mentioning his habit of eavesdropping in order to listen to the conversation of ants. This is simply shameful and unwarranted. If Sir John has any human friends, and if how the could permit him to publish so disgraceful a book.

There really seems to be nothing which Sir John Lubbock does not consider himself at liberty to do in connection with ants. He tells us that he has repeatedly broken into a royal ant palace and kidnapped the queen. This he had done merely in order to see what the ants would do without a queen. He found that after the first excitement following the discovery of their loss had subsided the ants established a republic. In every instance the republic proved successful, and the ants became warmly attached to it. They found that queens were an expensive luxury, and were in no sense necessary, and they soon exercised a hearty dislike of effete monarchical institutions. Sir John, however, would not let them enjoy their republic in peace. He placed foreign queens, kidnapped by him from distant ant communities, in the heart of his ant republics, and evidently hoped that their authority would be recognized. The republican ants, however, never failed to kill the invading queens, and so fierce was the republican spirit displayed by them that not a reactionary ant ventured to show any sympathy with the royal martyrs.

What could be more atrocious than Sir John's conduct in this matter? Not only did he wantonly bring about revolutions in quiet and contented kingdoms, but he also tried to produce a civil war between orderly republics. What can be said in defense of his treatment of the innocent queens whom he first dethroned and kidnapped and afterward lured to a violent death by inducing them to place a queen in their stead? If the man can find any possible excuse for himself, the sooner he produces it the better it will be for his reputation among upright and honorable men. Sir John has also forcibly expelled republican ants, apparently for no other crime than that of accepting republican institutions after he himself had forced them to do so. On several occasions he removed a colony of ants a long distance from their original home, and when they were demoralized by their calamity he suddenly unfurled the standard of royalty by placing a queen among them. In these circumstances the demoralized ants instantly accepted the royal pretender as a saviour of society, and implored her to rule them with strong and wise hands. Thus, ants that were republican by conviction were led to accept monarchical institutions as the only alternative to anarchy. Were Sir John to go over to Paris and create a state of anarchy which would lead the frightened Frenchmen to revive the empire, he would know that he was guilty of violating international law and of meddling in matters which did not concern him. He does not seem to have the least idea that he is acting in an equally reprehensible way toward confiding and helpless ants.

Sir John also tells us that the ants are habitual liars, and that one will not believe another's word. He has often hid behind a curtain bush and listened to an ant trying to convince his fellows that he had found a valuable dead beetle. So little the confidence does an ant place in the veracity of another ant that in nine cases out of ten the reply to the information about the beetle would be "Oh, that's too thin," or like expressions of incredulity. Sometimes the ant thus insulted would succeed in inducing another to follow him and see if the dead beetle was a reality or a mere campaign story. The incredulous ant would need to be coaxed along, and his want of faith in his conductor would be plainly expressed by his careless and irresolute manner. Finally the pair would come within sight of the beetle; the incredulous ant would brighten up, and remark, "Well I should smile," and would instantly rush to cut a good sized beetle steak and to take it home to his family.

Very likely this is all true, but the question is, ought Sir John, after being admitted to an ant hill, to abuse the hospitality of his hosts by telling stories reflecting on their veracity? What if the ants are so much in the habit of lying that no ant will believe another's word if unsupported by evidence? Is it the part of an honorable man to arrive at the knowledge of this fact by eavesdropping and then to publish it to the world? Sir John Lubbock ought to be heartily ashamed of himself, and if he had his deserts he would be invaded by swarms of red ants and bitten until he should openly acknowledge his fault and promise a thorough reformation.

Its Action is Sure and Safe. The celebrated remedy Kidney-Wort can now be obtained in the usual dry vegetable form, or in liquid form. It is put in the latter way for the especial convenience of those who cannot readily prepare it. It will be found very convenient and will act with equal efficacy in either case. Be sure and read the advertisement for particulars. Price 25c per bottle. Wholesale and Retail, 415-2nd St.

It Seems Impossible. That a remedy made of such common, simple plants as Hops, Buchu, Mandrake, Dandelion, &c., should make so many and such marvelous and wonderful cures as Hop Bitters do, but when old and young, rich and poor, Pastor and Doctor, Lawyer and Editor, all testify to having been cured by them, you must believe and try them yourself, and doubt no longer. See other columns. 415-2nd St.

Medical. There is no civilized nation in the Western Hemisphere in which the utility of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is not known and appreciated. While it is a medicine for all seasons and all climates, it is especially suited to the complaints generated by the weather, being the purest and best vegetable stimulant in the world.

Brandy as a Medicine. The following article was voluntarily sent to me by H. E. Slaymaker, Agent for Reigart's Old Wine Store, by a prominent practicing physician of this county, who has extensively used the Brandy referred to in regular practice. It is commended to the attention of those afflicted with Indigestion and Dyspepsia. BRANDY AS A MEDICINE. This now much abused Alcoholic Stimulant was never intended as a beverage, but to be used as a medicine of great power in the cure of some of the destructive diseases which sweep away their annual thousands of victims. With a purely philanthropic motive we are presenting to the favorable notice of invalids—especially those afflicted with that insidious disease, Dyspepsia, a specific remedy, which is nothing more or less than

Brandy. The aged, with feeble appetite and more or less debility, will find this simple medicine, when used properly,

A Sovereign Remedy or all their ills and aches. Be it, however, strictly understood that we prescribe and use but one article, and that is

REIGART'S OLD BRANDY. Sold by our enterprising young friend, H. E. SLAYMAKER, 56 North Queen Street, Lancaster, Pa. This Brandy has stood the test for years, and has never failed, as far as our experience extends, and we therefore give it the preference over other Brandy, no matter with how many law-breaking French titles they are branded. One-fourth of the money that is yearly thrown away on various impotent dyspepsia specifics would suffice to buy all the Brandy to cure any such case or cases. In proof of the curative powers of Reigart's Old Brandy, In cases of Dyspepsia, we can summon hundreds of witnesses—one case in particular we cite. A hard-working farmer had been afflicted with an exhaustive Dyspepsia for a number of years; his stomach would reject almost every kind of food; he had sour eructations constantly—no appetite—in fact, he was obliged to restrict his diet to crackers and stale bread, and as a beverage he used McGran's Root Beer. He is a Methodist, and then, as now, preached at times, and in his discourses often declaimed earnestly against all kinds of strong drink. When advised to try Reigart's Old Brandy, In his case, he looked up with astonishment, but after hearing of its wonderful effects in the cases of some of his near acquaintances, he at last consented to follow our advice. He used the Brandy faithfully and steadily; the first bottle giving him an appetite, and before the second he was able to eat a good meal, and in a stomach capable of digesting anything which he chose to eat. He still keeps it and uses it occasionally, but he has no more of his disease. He has been of very little pecuniary benefit to the doctor.—A FRAGRANT PARAGRAP.
