THE WAY OF THE WORLD. Incidents Showing Fact to be Stranger Than Fiction.

While laboring under temporary aber-ration of the mind, Mrs. Alice Williams, of Alpine township, cut her tongue nearly out with a razor. Mrs. Williams is a de-vout Catholic, and felt it to be her duty to make some sacrifice for the Lord.

It is announced on high authority that the new administration at the White House will keep a cow. Mrs. Hayes steps down and out, and milk punch again stands a An Auburn, Me., man packed 14,000 dozen eggs the past season, and is now selling them for double what the quotations were when he bought them. He will be considerably wealthier after the spec than before. There have been few years when egg speculators have had such a big chance. It is said that one man in Bel-grade made $30,000 in egg speculation. Egg sellers get their own price now.

A negro women of Athens was reduced to such an extremity for fuel during the recent cold spell that she opened a shuck mattress on which she slept and used the shucks for fuel, burning only a small handful at a time to make them last as long as possible. Deep Snow in Colorado.

The snew in Mosco Pass is so deep that it is almost impassable. A gentleman just arrived from Crestone says that in coming through the pass he found a man with a team of horses who had been two days and nights trying to find his way to the Cliff, but the snow was so deep and the storm so severe that he was completely lost and almost frozen. A few hours longer and himseif and team would have

The foolhardy fellow who jumped into the Harlem river from the high bridge last summer, and who has since made an en gagement to jump from the Niagara Falls suspension bridge next May, is sure to give the newspapers another Sam Patch tragedy one of these days, unless some way is found of heading him off.

Simon Brolasky's Death. Simon Brolasky, a well-known dry goods merchant and real estate dealer, died in Philadelphia on Friday. Mr. Brolasky was a helpless cripple and had built in his house an elevator to carry him from floor to floor. A few days ago he fell down the for the purpose in the church vestibules. well" of the elevator, a distance of These boxes, which we made of stout oak, twelve feet, and the shock proved fatal. It is said that there will be a lively fight for his property, which is worth over $500,000. He was seventy-seven years

A Witch's Cabinet of Odd Things. An old woman at Davenport, Iowa, known as "Mary, the witch," was found dead in her lonely hovel the other day. It was a witch's place, indeed, being found to contain a cat's skull, a chicken's head or skull, bats' wings, toads' feet, spiders' webs, various bones of various his theory of benevolence is the correct animals, dried blood and eyes of owls and one. But he believes that he is in advance cats deposited in various places wrapped in papers. Under the old woman's pillow were the witch's stone and a pack of ordi-

Attempt at Suicide, Jennie Donahue, a ten-year-old girl, the residence of her parents, in North Clark street, Chicago, by swallowing a quantity of morphine. The child had for some time looked forward to being present at a birthday party given by a schoolmate, but, she having contracted a severe cold, her parents considered it advisable for her to remain at home. The morphine was kept in a drawer, and she was cautioned not to touch it. Immediately after taking stives. the drug she told her parents what she had done, and they sent for a physician, whose timely arrival saved her life.

Forty-Seven Murders and No Executions. John Miller, a drunken teamster of Havana, Ill., murdered a little four-yearold child of his mistress, and it was only through the exertions of the officers who arrested him that the infuriated citizens were prevented from lynching him. He first sent the woman out of the house on some pretended errand and then choked and kicked the girl until life was extinct. This makes the forty-seventh murder which has been committed in that county, but there has never yet been an execution The longest term of imprisonment that any of the guilty wretches have suffered for their terrible crimes has been but ten years in the penitentiary. A Bright Dog and Stupid Doctor. A prominent Main street merchant of Charlottesville owns a large, but striking-ly unhandsome dog. Besides being an ex-cellent guardian of his master's goods he is very sensible. A few nights ago his mas-ter's child was taken ill and the dog, by some means or other, found it out. Straightway he went to the office of a physician who usually practiced in the family and scratched at the door. The physician arose and drove the canine messenger off, but he returned again and renewed the invitation. The doctor did not understand the actions of the dog, and only on the following morning, when the master told him his child was sick and he had summoned another physician, was the strange conduct of the dog explained.

How they Received the Word. The Mescalaro Indians are a bad lot, but no worse than many other tribes of noble red men in the West. Some religious body in the East thinking that the soil at that agency was ripe for receiving the seed of the gospel of glad tidings, sent forth a missionary to labor in the vineyard. He reports these Indians as without the first idea of morality, and as this is the foundation of all true religion they have absolutely nothing to build on. When he told them of the murder of John the Baptist, and his head in a soup tureen, their eyes kindled with savage delight. The story of the sufferings of the Saviour on the cross elicited a war whoop, and at the story of Herod slaying all the little chil-dren the tribe flourished their scalping knives and tomahawks and began a war dance. So he stood not on the order of his going, but went at once.

He Rode Out His Dollar. A jolly old fellow came down from the mountains just before Christmas to spend was gone. He therefore came to his own the holidays at Sacramento. Becoming tired of footing it about the city he got trescue, mounted his horse, penetrated the into a street car, and when shown by the driver the box in which he should deposit his fare, he dropped therein a trade dollar. Then he demanded his change, but the driver informed him that he could not give him any unless he had paid the coin to him. For a time the old man was in a dilemma. His dollar was in the box, and he had no show to get it out. Finally he solved the problem of getting even with the railroad company by notifying the driver that he would use up the money he moustache, very pretty teeth, and was well remaining on the cars for twenty trips, and armed with a flask of whisky and a lunch of crackers and cheese, the old man had a picnic all to himselt.

What Obstructs the Mississippi. Among the facts brought to light by the ecent United States survey of the great lakes and Mississippi river is the existence of moving sand waves from the stream. Those near Helena, in water from thirteen to thirty feet deep, the report says, are moving down the river at an average rate of eighteen feet per day. These sand waves have an average length, counting from crest to crest, of about 330 feet, an extreme length of about 500 feet, and an average height of about five feet, and an extreme height of eight feet from valley to crest. The existence of sand waves of such crest. The existence of sand waves of such large dimensions, and moving with such velocity, does not seem to have been ob-served before on the lower Mississippi.

A Freak of the Frest. A striking illustration of the force exerted by water in the act of freezing may be seen in St. Lawrence cemetery, Charleston, S. C. The Werner monument, which stands near the entrance, rests upon a heavy iron slab, which in turn is supported by several large spherical iron globes, about eight inches in diameter and about a-half inch thick. These hollow iron balls have small openings at the top, and during the rain which preceded the very cold spell one of them became filled with water. The water then froze in the ball, and in so doing burst it in two and threw the fragments several yards off into one of the paths. A solid ball of ice which fell and out of the globe when it burst was found near one of the fragments.

Charity Not Puffed Up. An eminent British clergyman was severely opposed to what he called sensational methods of gathering collections. He denounced the practice of passing collection boxes or baskets through the congregation and said it was a single congregation. gregation, and said it was unscriptural. He believed that giving ought to be done on principle, without special impulse and without appeal to the feelings. He determined to put his views into practical operation in his own way. So he told his people that for one year they might put their donations for missionary work into two large, strong boxes, which he placed were securely locked, and would not be opened until the close of the year, when he hoped they would be full of money. He wanted people quietly and anostenta-tiously to deposit their gifts in the openings in the tops of these boxes, in the sight of the Lord and not "to be seen of The boxes were recently opened. On carefully counting the contents of both, I me eminent clergyman still believes that his theory of benevolence is the correct one. But he believes that he is in advance of his age, for he is persuaded that the people will not put his view into practical operation.

A Discovery Just Made in Time. Anna E. Upcroft, a gentle and pretty sixteen-year-old country maiden of Hanniestine Contals, employed in the Hebrew orphan asylum, at Fifty-seventh street and First avenue, New York, about 10 o'clock had been understood that they would soon Friday night, told a fellow-domestic that be married, but the other day about noon she intended to commit suicide and went young Blake called at her house and wantshe intended to commit suicide and went to an outhouse for that purpose. She then piled up a large quantity of wood, stationed herself in the middle of it and set the whole on fire. When discovered she was enveloped in flames, but made no attempt to escape and was only removed by force. It was then found that she had been fetally burned.

young Blake called at her house and wanted the wedding to take place that night. She consulted her parents, and, though the notice was short, they consented and made all preparations for the wedding, inviting in the neighbors and preparing a supper. A room full of guests assembled, and at the proper time the nair entered and stood up before the the pair entered and stood up before the minister to be married. The clergyman looked quizzically at Blake and asked made an attempt to commit suicide at whether he were not already married. He answered no, and the minister pressed the question. Blake denied any previous marriage, but the minister refused to proceed with the ceremony. An investigation disclosed that three days before Blake mar ried Miss Betsy Foster, of the town of Lysander, only eight miles distant, and that the wedding took place in the presence of about sixty guests, including his own rel-

> > The Buzzard Brothers.

A Little Fact and a Great Deal of Fancy.

Leaders of the Welsh Mountain Gang . Wild Harry Birt and his Adventures.

Churchtown Correspondence New York Sun The five Buzzard brothers have all served out different sentences in prison during the last five years. Joseph and Isaac labored eighteen months in the Lan-caster jail for horse stealing; Jacob was in the same prison five years for burglary; Abraham was sentenced to four years for burglary, escaped, and was recaptured; Martin has also made a similar record, and his terms have numbered more than one. In February of last year the five were in the Lancaster jail together, serving out their sentences, but during 1880 their various terms expired, and they were released. They at once repaired to their old haunts, the Welsh mountains, a strip of wild and barren backwoods country and forest lying along the borders of Berks, Lancaster and Chester counties. Rising out of a recky and scrub oak stretch of barrens is the Welsh mountains, with its paves of limestone rock, caverns and dreary, yet safe and secure hiding places, where officers of the law never visit. Prior to their departure for their old haunts they made many vows and promises that they would never again "take to the road" for a living, and they pointed to the fact that notwithstanding their absence from their hunting grounds, the robberies, burglaries and high-handed outrages had continued the same as ever. Old Martin said to the sheriff:

"You see we are not to blame, because we weren't thar! Now, if these stealings t on to us !" Martin Buzzard had spoken truthfully for when his brothers and himself had been tried and convicted a young and hardsome man assumed charge of the then almost panicstricken gang of thieves. His true name was Henry Birt, although he had many aliases. He was a daring and intrepid outlaw, and always had charge of running the stolen plunder into market after the gang had captured and delivered it in a neighboring county. When the five Buz-zards had been run down and the band scat-tered and disheartened. Birt's occupation

He was not an educated man but his conversation was entertaining, and his The girls liked his brusque, careless manner, and, after he had won his way into their affections, he took good care to take sufficient points to enable him to work his way into the house a few evenings afterward on a mission of plander instead of sufficient points to enable him to work his way into the house a few evenings afterward on a mission of plunder instead of love. A volume might be written of the romances of this modern Clands Daval romances of this modern Claude Duval. He could write fairly, and many of his love letters found their way into the homes love letters found their way into the homes of the richest farmers in that section of country. So far as is known his conduct to the young women was perfectly honorable. When he was at last run down and arrested, and his many sweethearts heard of it, they not only denounced the officers and pronounced the charges untrue, but carnestly entreated their friends and relatives to go to his aid. Birt was captured with a load of plunder and committed to of it, they not only denounced the officers and pronounced the charges untrue, but earnestly entreated their friends and relatives to go to his aid. Birt was captured with a load of plunder and committed to the jail in Reading. His red necktie, velvet coat confunction and to beste were vet coat, corduroys and top boots were changed to prison stripes and he served a long term, after which he went to Mexico.

The Buzzard boys, after their liberation, found the gang nearly broken up and very poor. It was some time before they were again mustered and organized. Martin Buzzard went to his hut on the mountain at what is called "Buzzard's Roost," and commenced making baskets. He was determined to reform and quit the road. All of the present winter the burylaries, have of the present winter the burglaries have gone on. Nearly every night the bold band has been abroad. Churches, stores, stations, offices and private houses, to say nothing of barns, stables, and smoke houses, have been broken and smoke houses, have been broken open and burned. Vigilance committees, horse thief detective associations, and other companies for the prevention of crime and for the assistance of the constabularly, have been organized, but the burglaries go on. Many farmers are afraid to take active part in the prosecutions, lest their barns may be fired. Indeed, many notices, similar to the "Molly Maguire" warnings, have been sent, cautioning farmers to beware how they volunteered to give evidence against certain parties to give evidence against certain parties

The Buzzard brothers are middle-sized, broad-shouldered men, ranging from 27 years of age to 45. Isaac is the youngest and Mart the oldest. They have red complexions and brown hair, gray eyes and heavy shaggy eye brows. Their boots are of coarse hide, and their cordurof pantaloons are stuck in the tops. Generally they wear short, heavy pea jackets which enable them to ride more freely. Three are married and have several children each, all living in small cabing.
