" More Destructive than Reported." G. H. B." in Washington Republic The fire which destroyed Mr. Keene' Newport villa was more destructive than at first reported. Besides the house, which cost $65,000, and pictures, plate, furniture and miscellaneous bric-a-brac worth as much more, there was included in the general ruin what Sam Ward described as a "divine wine cellar." Uncle Sam ought to know, for it was to his taste, judgment and experience as well as to the million aire's money it owed its existence. Among clarets, there were Lafittes, Latours and Chateau Margaux beyond criticism; the king of white wines, Chateau Yquem, of various years, and it is even whispered sadly among men who had a hope of being asked to dine with the great speculator next summer that there were a hundred bottles of 1847, said to be the grande annee of the famous vineyard on the Garonne river. Sam Ward said: "Never mind the pictures, the statues or the carpets. Artists and looms are always to be had for money, but 1847 can never be recalled." Besides these, there were royal Burgundies and high-bred brandies, which were violet to the scent and oil of velvet to the taste. Champagnes, of course, without end, but there is no marked character to them. A dry goods clerk, a fast actor or a shyster lawyer can drink as dry and as good champagne as a man of taste or a millionaire if he is willing to pay for it. There was a large quantity of it, though, in Mr. Keene's cellar laid down in '79, when a scarcity of champagne was apprehended and orders were doubled on all hauds, especially from England and America. All these rare cordials and high priced juices were licked up by the thirsty flames, and although it will be only the affair of a few cargoes of wheat for Mr. Keene to restore the Axminsters, Tiffany's masterpieces of plate, Eastlake furniture and the copies of the "Greek Slave," "Duscent from the Cross," " Madonnas," etc., it is doubtful if he will ever regain the social pre-eminence which had been cheerfully accorded him when it became known at the Union, Manhattan, New York, Athenæum and Century clubs that he had the power to

Poisoned Bird Flesh. Philadelphia Inquirer

There is danger in cating quail, or any other wild bird from the neighboring country at the present time. The deep snow cuts off from the birds their usual supply of seeds and small berries, and forces them to feed on the berries of the " poison oak," a climbing plant which lifts itself above the snow level. A Washington paper prints a surmise that the mys terious poisoning of a large number of persons at a hotel in that city at the time of Buchanan's administration was caused in this way, as the previous winter had been a very severe one, and the host had provided for his guests a large number of quail whose flesh had been rendered poinous by the berries. A winter like this is always hard on small game, and is always followed by a scarcity of birds, rabbits, etc. Large numbers of them freeze to death, while many more are starved. Benevolent and provident farmers feed the insectivorous birds, to their own direct profit, but such farmers are much fewer than they should be.

"How Are You My Old Friend?" Asked a bright looking man. "Oh! I feel miserable, I'm billous and can't eat, and my back is so lame I can't work." "Why in the world don't you take Kidney-Wort; that's what I take when I am out of sorts, and it always keeps me in perfect tune. My doctor recommends it for all such troubles." Kidney-Wort is the sure cure for billousness and constipation. Don't fail to try it.—Long Branch News.

Can't Preach Good. No man can do a good job of work, preach a good sermon, try a law suit well, doctor a patient, or write a good article when he feels miserable and dull, with sluggish brain and unsteady nerves, and none should make the attempt in such a condition when it can be so easily and cheaply removed by a little Hop Birters.
