and the second second

The mass of the stocks selling below cost is so great that we may say there is no change from last week, except that a very few lines are exhausted-not enough to mention.

Large and complete stocks of new clothing of all grades, from common to fine, are here, going for less money than their original cost.

Remember, though, that still larger, though not more complete stocks are not marked down at all. You can buy out of either, as you may prefer.

These stocks have been separated for convenience in selling; but they are made together, in the same way, for the same purpose, and after the same standards.

Bring back whatever you don't want at the price.

A RARE CHANCE! The Greatest Reduction ever made in FINE WOOLENS for GENTS' WEAR at H. GERHART'S

It may be conceived that a nation may have such facilities for ship-building that, although it has no commerce and does not engage in the freighting business, it may make shipbuilding a profitable specialty; and lastly, it would not be an impossible supposition that a nation comprising expert seamen might have neither commerce nor shipbuilding to any extent, and yet might engage in a lucrative business of transporting the goods of a commercial people in vessels bought from those whose principal occupation it is to build them. For the purpose of making the distinctions clear these propositions are thus broadly stated. The first is very nearly true in a literal sense as to the foreign commerce of the United States. It is carried on for the benefit of others in vessels which we cannot afford to build and are not permitted to buy. The first, second, and third combined apply to England. She has her own commerce and that of other nations carried in ships which she builds and owns. Germany represents the last. She has little commerce of her own and little ship-buil ling, but she buys ships of England and carries the goods of all na-tions over the sea. Would it be good policy for her to deprive herself of the car- through another. She was old enough to
