Anecdotes of Animals. Some Strange Things About the Lower Orders of Creation. A new dish is offered for the epicure to pass his opinion upon that of English sparrow on toast. As a representative of an Albany paper was passing one of the city markets he observed a string of small birds hanging outside which resembled the common English sparrow. Upon inquiry he was informed that the birds were sparrows, and could be either stewed or served on toast. They sold for eight cents a pair.

The novel exhibition of a hundred head of cattle sliding down a steep hill for a distance of fifty yards or more, was one of the incidents of the sleet storm at Oxford, Ind. On arriving at the brow of the hill John Moore, the herder, endeavored to stop them from going over, but was too late. Almost instantly the whole herd were on their knees, then, falling over on their sides, they shot off down the hill with frightful velocity, many of them assuming the most grotesque attitudes in their descent. In his efforts to head them off the herder slipped and fell, and never stopped until he brought up with a thud against a huge steer at the bottom of the hil. None of the cattle were seriously injured.

Littleton Dennis writes to the New York Sun as follows: Ex-Senator Dennis does not derive any income from the sale of terrapin, as al leged by the Atlanta Constitution. fact he finds it difficult to procure enough for his own table, the "varmints" being quite scarce in his neighborhood. Terrapin do not breed in captivity, and there is no such thing as a "terrapin farm" in the state of Maryland. There are "terrapin pounds13 (holes dug in the ground and filled with sea drift, and into which ditches leading from the salt water are turned) where they are placed and fed until wanted for use, after having been caught by means of seines, or otherwise; but no one has yet attempted terrapin farming. The terrapin thrive better in these places, where they are fed on chopped clams, than in boxes or on floors, as they are less liable, in scrambling after the food, to scratch one another's legs, and are kept cooler. The ex-senator is a large landholder, and one of the most successful and enterprising farmers in the state, and at his home he is surrounded by almost every comfort one could wish for, but the story of his "terrapin farm" is bosh.

A singular encounter between a dog and a donkey occurred recently in Blackpool, England. The dog rushed at the donkey as he was standing in a field, and fastened on his nose. The donkey shook him off, bit him about the head and shoulders, and tossed him wildly about. The dog again seized the donkey, and the combatants could not be separated. After the fight had lasted half an hour, the owner decided to have the dog shot, as it had by that time fastened with a firm hold on the donkey's nose. A gun was procured, but so key's nose. A gan was procured, but so are developed because the blood is poisoned with the shumors that should be expelled nat shoot one animal without killing the other also. At last aim was taken a bullet was pat into the dog's head, and it dropped to the ground. When the smoke cleared away the dog was dead, but the infuriated donkey had returned to the charge, kicking, biting and tramping on the dog. It was with great difficulty the donkey was at last driven off.
