We do know, however, that the impress

Mr. Mackey left upon the politics of this state was a most scandalous and disgrace. ful one. We do not wish to defame the memory of the dead, but the less the name of Robert W. Mackey is said Simon Cameron was the first man to resort to the use of money in Pennsylvania politics. If so, Mr. Mack ey must have been his first and most promising pupil. Occupying an honorable position in a large banking institution he entered the political arena only to smirch everything with which he came in con-

The prospect is that there will be no change in the system of nominations for this year at least. The primary meetings will most likely be called in May, as is customary, and the rules now in force will govern them. The committee on "re-
