A Lost Boy Found.

The superior of the monastery of St. Francis, at Loreto, on the summit of the Allegheny mountains, near Crescon, Pa., says that on Thursday last two tramps, accompanied by a lot of dogs, years ago, came to the monastery in quest of their dinner. The appearance of the boy aroused the suspicions of Brother Francis. He interrogated the tramps and their evasive answers left no doubt on his mind that something was wrong in regard to their youthful companion. The brother announced his intention of having them arrested, whereupon they decamped, but were soon pursued by the doughty monk divested of his habit and mounted on horseback. The tramps fled into the grounds of the monastery, and the boy, accompanied by his dog, almost beside himself with fear, was easily captured. Brother Francis procured the aid of some constables and coming up with the tramps seized them and placed them in quod in custody. The boy, however, was proved to be Charlie Green, the son of a gentleman in Brooklyn, in which city he had been kidnapped while on his way home from school. The boy's father has been commissioned with and meanwhile the lad is being well cared for by the monks.

A Cough, Cold or Sore Throat should be stopped. Neglected frequently results in an inflammatory disease of consumption. Brown's Bronchial Trochocid does not disorder the stomach like cough syrups and balsams, but acts directly on the inflamed parts, allaying irritation, and inducing a healthy action. It cures Coughs, Catarrh, and the "Throat Troubles" which Singers and Public Speakers are subject to. For thirty years Brown's Bronchial Trochocid has been recommended by physicians, and always gives perfect satisfaction. Having been tested by wide and constant use for nearly an entire generation, they have attained well-merited rank among the low staple remedies of the age. ms12vtd4w

A BIG FIRE.

Rieker's Brewery Burned.

Last evening between four and five o'clock a very destructive fire occurred at the brewery and saloon of Frank A. Rieker, on West King street, near the second story of the malt house. When it was discovered it had gained considerable headway. The roof of all the buildings were of shingles, and it soon spread from the malt house to a frame kitchen and a second story building on the south and the saloon on the north. The malt house was entirely destroyed together with 1,800 pounds of hops and 123 beer kegs; 1,350 bushels of malt were ruined besides a lot of other stock &c. In the collar of the malt house were 80 barrels of beer in vats which was injured so that it cannot be used. In the part of the building which was of brick, facing on West King street, Mr. Rieker had his saloon and also occupied it as a dwelling house. The whole upper part of the building was burned, and it was saturated with water. Most of the furniture in the house was either burned or destroyed in some other way. The people in the neighborhood were greatly excited and many worked hard to save the furniture &c. Some of these employees carried articles by throwing them out of the upper story windows and thus breaking them to pieces. The furniture including a new piano, was all new. Mr. Rieker having but recently had his house refurnished. The roof and a portion of the upper part of the brewery building was burned and some of the machinery, cooling apparatus, &c., were destroyed there as well as in the malt house. The fire also reached a brick house next door to Mr. Rieker, which is owned by Henry Stuber, and was destroyed. A frame building in the rear was destroyed and the window frames on the gable end on the east were burned out of the house, which was completely soaked with water. The furniture was carried out and about $100 worth of goods were broken up or carried away. The building is insured for $1000 in the Girard company of Philadelphia, and Mr. Strobel's loss will be about $2,000. There was no insurance on the furniture.

Mr. Rieker was insured as follows through Bausman & Burns: London Assurance corporation, $5,250; Union Assurance, $1,000; Phoenix, of Hartford $800; Lancashire, England, $1,000; National of Baltimore, $2,500. This makes a total of $10,550 which is divided in the property as follows: saloon and dwelling, $2,000; warehouse, $2,000; brewery, $1,800; stable and beer cooler, $450; engine and connections, $300; malt mill, $200; beer cooler in the brewery, $500; malt and hops in brewery and warehouse, $1200; fermenting tubs, kegs and wash tubs, $600; stable in process, $300; saloon and household furniture, $400; piano, $100; Nearly all of this property was destroyed, but a small portion of it having been saved. Mr. Rieker is unable to estimate his loss at present, but he thinks it will be several thousand dollars more than the amount of the insurance.

How the fire originated is not known, as no fire had been used in the part of the building in which it was discovered. Mr. Rieker was not at home when it started, but was present several days after the fire, and he says that he has never seen any business in the Rieker and the bartender, Gottlieb Hettig were there, but when they discovered the fire it was beyond control.

For some reason or other the firemen were very slow in going to the fire. The Humeau company being nearest to the place were first to get there. They went as soon as they heard of the locality of the fire and at once began work. Although the fire began before 5 o'clock the bell on the Empire house did not ring until the fire was well under way. The firemen company had their horses unhitched after hearing the first report of a fire, and then were compelled to hitch up again. They were the second company to arrive at the fire. Much of the property of the fire was destroyed, and caused by their not knowing the exact locality of the fire. They were also told many different stories by different persons. Several of the companies were informed that there was no fire, while others told that there was a fire. Resolutions were adopted setting forth the object of mutual companies, and empowering the president to appoint a committee to locate a central office in Harrisburg, establish a newspaper in behalf of the companies, devise means to prevent fires, and to have physicians and to invite the Legislature to appoint a committee to investigate their workings before passing the bill relative to mutual assessment companies now pending, and which they claim is derogatory to their interests.

Throwing Dead Stock into the Creek.

As previously noticed, for some time past it has been customary for shippers of stock over the Pennsylvania railroad and employees of the company to throw dead animals into the Conestoga creek at the big railroad bridge. This seems to be a day to clean the cars, as almost every day lots of dead poultry, &c., which died in the cars, are thrown into the stream. The authorities in Harrisburg have learned of this and the mayor has written to Superintendent Lockard concerning the matter. It seems rather hard that our citizens are compelled to drink water into which dead stock is dumped every day.

Boy Run Over.

Cyrus Moore, a 10-year-old boy attempted to run across the street at North Queen and Orange streets, in front of a horse and phaeton yesterday afternoon. He was not looking where he was going, and he was run over by the phaeton, two wheels passing over his head. This morning Officer Flick, who had heard reports about the families, visited the house and found one of the women to be suffering from small-pox. The board of health had been notified and an investigation will be made.

Small-Pox in the City.

About three weeks ago, it will be remembered, a large party of emigrants came to this city. Most of them have scattered over the county. About four families of the party recently moved into a house on West Lemons street, between North Queen and Orange streets. This morning Officer Flick, who had heard reports about the families, visited the house and found one of the women to be suffering from small-pox. The board of health had been notified and an investigation will be made.

Keller & Reilly, Lancaster, contractors, who were engaged in straightening the Pennsylvania railroad at Elm station, have lost a horse which they valued at $250.
