DRY GOODS.

LINENS.
LINENS!
We have received new linens from Belfast, Banterline, Lisle, Brussels, Ghent, Silesia, Bohemia. We have ransacked all Europe for linens, and have a variety of both fabric and finish that could not be gathered in the American market. The goods are fresh, too. That's important; for linens bought in New York may be several years old, and you know starched linens do not improve by age. The dressings used by the manufacturers is not so destructive as starch; but it does injure the fabric in time. We have another advantage in prices. We gain the importer's profit.
The result is we get the best linens in the world, in the best possible condition, and for the least money anybody can get them for. We can give you the importers' profit, and still have enough left.
Now it is proper for us to consider that somebody else may be doing the same thing, and afford the very same advantages. So, if you please, whatever you wish to buy get samples of it from us and from others, and compare.
Or buy our goods, if you like; and if you can do so well elsewhere, bring ours back. This is rather a brave challenge; for, you know nobody wants remnants.
The linens now in are sheeting, pillow, bolster and shirting linens, towels, toweling, dollies, napkins, table cloths and table linens.

MURDERED IN THE WOODS.

EVIDENCES OF A YOUNG WOMAN'S FIGHT FOR LIFE.

Beaten to Death with Stones Near a By-Path Above Weechawen—Her Identity Unknown, and a Clue to Her Murderer.

An enticing little path whose beginning is guarded on either side by a great boulder is likely to attract the attention of any stroller along Bergen line avenue, soon after he enters the district known as Call's Ferry, near Mount Wreny, when the road is skirted by a thick growth of bushes and half-grown trees. The path is barred by a fence, between whose rails one may easily find his way, and thereafter soon loses itself in the grateful shade of the spring verdure.

At 11 o'clock on Friday morning a German, whose purpose was to gather green leaves to sell to florists in New York city, entered this path with his basket on his arm. He had followed it eastward toward the river about 100 feet, and had turned aside to the right about twenty feet, when he was appalled by almost stepping upon the dead body of a woman. He hurried away to inform the police.

Early in the afternoon Coroner Wiggins of Hoboken visited the spot and made a careful examination. He judged that the woman had not been over twenty-five years of age, her dress was badly torn as if in a struggle. It was such as a woman in comfortable circumstances might wear, and, on the other hand, had none of the ordinary characteristics of the garb of abandoned women. Along the top of the head on the left side was a deep gash, and beneath it, as Coroner Wiggins observed afterward found, the skull was fractured. There was another gash over the right eye. Both of these gashes were apparently made with the edge of a stone. The nose was broken in the middle. The right side of the face was badly bruised and crushed in by a carriage. The left ear was injured as if by a carriage being torn from it. Search was made for the missing carriage, but it was not found. An ear-ring with a gold pendant was in the right ear. On her left hand was a ring, in which were set a pearl and an emerald. On her breast was a handsome cameo brooch. Her face had become blackened by the sun, which shone upon the spot where the body lay. The features were small and asymmetrical. She wore number one or number two buttoned gaiters. Near the body, and stained with blood, was a copy of the Staats Zeitung, April 23, and not far off was a long empty bottle, such as Rhein wine is sold in. No odor could be detected about it.

Three spots were carefully examined. The first was where the body lay beneath a half-grown maple. Near this lay three blood-spotted stones. Two of the stones were irregular in shape, and they weighed about twenty pounds apiece. The third was more nearly round and it weighed only three or four pounds. The second spot was about twenty feet nearer the river, and a little to the southward. Here dried blood was found upon the dead leaves, and near it was a comb, and also a hair switch. It is shaded by a young oak. This is where the murder is supposed to have been committed, or at least to have begun. It is thought that here she was knocked senseless by the smallest of the three stones, with a blow upon the right side of her head, causing blood to flow from her ear; that she was then dragged to the spot where the body was discovered, and where it is thought that the murderer set out to make his work sure by the use of one or both of the two large stones. The dents in the black forest earth are yet plainly to be seen where these two stones formerly lay.

The third spot that attracted the coroner's attention showed no mark of blood, but it was swept almost bare of dead leaves, as if there had been a violent struggle there. A gun tree overhangs it, and it is surrounded with bushes. This spot is almost directly north and east of where the body was found.

There was nothing found in the pockets, but since the valuable ring and brooch were not taken by the murderer, it is thought that robbery was not the motive of the crime. A thorough post-mortem examination was postponed until to-day. The body lies at Crane's morgue in Hoboken. The dress was of black cashmere, as were the overskit and waist. She wore a white merino petticoat, two thin red flannel undershirts, one calico undergarment, and gray stockings. No marks of having been molested after death.

A story was current in Guttenberg that Mrs. Toif, of that place, saw last Tuesday a young woman in a black dress pass her house, near the Guttenberg brewery, on the way up toward Bull's Ferry accompanied by two men; that the two men, on their return, were asked where the woman was, and that they said she had run away from them. Mrs. Toif says that to the story should be added the fact that the woman was not dressed in black, and that she afterward saw her return to the ferry with another party. She says she can remember nothing about the appearance of the party that would throw light on the crime.

The murder has excited deep interest, and until a late hour a throng of persons was constantly to be seen in front of the morgue. A man from Williamsburg looked at the body in the evening to see whether or not it was that of his sister, who was married and ran away from her home seven months ago. He concluded the body was not his sister's.

It is conjectured that the woman came from New York, or at least that she does not belong in the vicinity of Bull's Ferry, because in that sparsely settled neighborhood the appearance of a woman would have become the subject of general talk. Physicians are of opinion that the crime was committed as late as a week ago, but that probably a considerably longer time has elapsed since it occurred. Christiana Cattle has been absent from her home in Guttenberg for about a month, and her father, James Cattle, examined the body in the morgue. He could not identify it.

Blaine's Purpose.
"H. J. R." to Philadelphia Times.
Blaine has given up all idea of ever being president. He likes to be secretary of state, for it takes him out of the Senate, where he never has been at home. That body was too foggy for Blaine.

needed excitement and that did not exist in the Senate. Blaine does not like a profound body. His present office gives him the necessary occupation and enables him to exercise certain diplomatic practices that will give him more specifically. Then there is but one secretary of state, while there are seventy-six senators. He is courted and sought and has power. Of course he is friend to Garfield—an unselfish friend? No, for Blaine has no personal friends and friends to reward. He wants to make a brilliant administration, for one of these days he wants to be minister to England. By "one of these days" I mean four years hence. He can use Garfield in many ways against his enemies and for his friends, and then he can be sent to England when he has sucked the state department orange—all ways providing that Garfield shall be re-elected.

Bismarck's Escape From Death.

Swiss Press.
Hard by where the Kleine Mauer Strasse debouches into the Linden, Prince Bismarck had a narrow squeak for existence at the hands of young Blind, not many months before I first made the personal acquaintance of the great German statesman. It was not however until the day of the 18th of August, during a long le-ta-cte with which he honored me in his old house in the Wilhelm Strasse, he gave me a detailed and graphic account of his encounter with Blind and placed my finger upon the bony excrescence which had developed itself on one of his lower ribs in consequence of the injury inflicted thereon by a bullet discharged from Blind's revolver at a moment when its muzzle was in actual contact with the chancellor's body.

"I owe my extraordinary escape from death," he observed, "partly to the solidity and hardness of my ribs, and partly to the strength of my muscles. Blind had scarcely raised his pistol when I grappled with him, and got his right arm in a tight grip, which I never relaxed until he was seized by a patrol of the gendarm. Of the five shots he fired whilst we were struggling, only this one," pointing to his side, "took effect; for I had my wrist about me and managed to keep his pistol hand bent outward, except just at the end of the tussle, when he succeeded in turning the barrel full upon my body. But the bullet, though it stung me so sharply that I thought it had gone clean through me, only glanced off my ribs. I ran a much more imminent risk from the fair-play instincts of an honest Prussian gendarm than I did from that foolish lad's revolver. You see, he was a smallish fellow, and I am rather a big one. Whilst we were wrestling my hat fell off, and I suppose my bald head proved a tempting object to one of the soldiers who ran up to see what was the matter hearing the report of the pistol for this worthy fellow, perceiving a tall man, as he fancied, ill-treating a short youth, clubbed his rifle, and would assuredly have brought the butt end down with a crash upon my bare pate had I not caught sight of his attitude in time to shout out, 'Hold on! I am Bismarck'—upon which he dropped his weapon in a much greater fright than even my own."

Obituary.
L. A. Gohright.
Mr. L. A. Gohright died at his residence in Washington Saturday afternoon from general debility, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. He had been ill for some months but his condition up to 4 o'clock was not regarded as being dangerous. At that hour, however, he suddenly began to sink, dying peacefully about 5 o'clock. Mr. Gohright was one of the oldest journalists in the country, having been connected with the press of Washington for more than forty-five years. For nearly thirty years he represented the New York associated press in Washington. He retired from active service in 1873, but his connection with the office remained unsevered until his death. Mr. Gohright was prominently identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the "Old-est Inhabitants Association." During the civil war he enjoyed the confidence of President Lincoln and Secretaries Seward and Stanton, often being called upon to assist them in the preparation of proclamations and other important documents, which were finally entrusted to his hands for telegraphing. When President Johnson made his famous trip through the country Mr. Gohright accompanied him and prepared the elaborate reports which were telegraphed to the associated press. He was on terms of intimacy with the celebrated men of both political parties who have figured in public life during the past forty years, and though often trusted with important matters, he never yielded to the temptation to print what had been communicated in confidence. The funeral services will be held on Tuesday.

Death-Bed Insurance.
A Man of Eighty-five Insured for $5,000 a Few Hours Before his Death.
In reading a case of death-bed insurance has just come to light. The party insured was Daniel Gehris, aged 85 years, a resident of that city for a number of years. One of the insurance speculators is a conspicuous citizen of the lower end of Berks county, and one whom it was not supposed would figure in a case of this kind. The policy was for $5,000. The examining physician of the company is one Dr. Yorgy, of Pottstown, who has heretofore figured in this business. It was well-known to all parties interested that Gehris had been suffering for many years with consumption and gaugery, and that his death was really expected. Notwithstanding these facts Dr. Yorgy and others asked to be allowed to insure his life. This was at first refused, the old man saying: "You are not going to try and make a fortune out of me the last day I have to live." The insurance was finally agreed to, the agent giving the wife $5 down and promising to make it $100 on the death of Gehris. Before leaving the house Yorgy recommended that a pint of whisky, mixed with milk and sugar be given to Gehris. The old man died on Saturday evening, the insurance having been effected only a few hours before his death.

Parried in Phelps.
A Young Man Struck His Father With a Chair, Causing Instant Death.
In Phelps, N. Y., William Starkweather, aged 21 years, in a fit of anger, struck his father a fatal blow on the head. The father, Darwin Starkweather, was a hard drinker, but by no means a quarrelsome man. He and his son got in a dispute over his wagon which the father refused to let the boy have. William took an axe, broke open the barn door and completely demolished the wagon. Returning to the house he was met by his father who had become enraged, and a more violent scene ensued. With an oath, the young man picked up a chair and, as his father came near him, dealt him a blow on the head which felled him to the ground. He then dealt another blow, and in a few minutes the father was dead. Mr. Starkweather had long lived in the neighborhood and had always been considered a peaceable man. He had formerly been a hard drinker, but two years ago he joined the Methodist church and reformed. A few months ago, however, he backslided and began to drink heavily again. He had occasioned his family much trouble. His son has always been a respectable boy, and was never before in any difficulty.

An Unhappy Marriage.

The Daughter of a Connecticut Millionaire Seeks a Divorce.
Miss Addie Sturtevant, eldest daughter of a millionaire manufacturer of Norwich, Conn.—Mr. A. P. Sturtevant, proprietor of the Sturtevant house, New York city—was married to the Hon. Albert Sidney Bolles, ex-judge of Probate, in the fall of 1874. His country was shared with elaborate ceremonies. The couple went to Europe, and were eight months traveling on the continent. They then returned to Norwich and went to live in an elegant residence in the fashionable quarter. Gossip was soon busy with their lives and it was currently reported that there was a coldness amounting to aversion between them. Mrs. Bolles is young, of a lively temperament. Her husband is enfeebled. He is known as the author of a work on political economy; also of "The Industry of History of the United States," and "The Currency of the Revolution." He is also editor of the Norwich Morning Bulletin. For several years the couple have passed the winters at the Sturtevant house and the summers at seaside resorts. The unpleasant relations between Mr. and Mrs. Bolles became more pronounced in the past two years. The cause of the difficulty has been kept a mystery in the family. Last February Mr. Bolles left his wife in New York to attend the funeral of President Garfield. Since then they have not dwelt together. About a week ago Mr. Sturtevant visited Washington, and the result of the visit was an application by Mrs. Bolles for a divorce from her husband. Bolles was consulted before the petition was signed, and he is said to have expressed sorrow that the marriage was ever brought about. He will not resist the application. The petition has been kept a profound secret by the family, and it is to be heard, although it is probable that it will come before the June term of the superior court in Norwich. Mr. Bolles' name was prominently mentioned a few months ago in connection with the office of first assistant secretary of the treasury.

Go to H. B. Cochran's Drug Store, 137 North Queen street for Mrs. Freeman's New Stationary Dye. For brightness and durability of color, are unequalled. Color from 2 to 5 pounds. Price, 15 cents.

Valuable Improvement.
Mr. Noah Bates, Elmira, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I had an attack of bilious fever, and never fully recovered. My digestive organs were weakened, and I would be completely prostrated for days. After using two bottles of your Barlock Blood Bitters the improvement was so visible that I was astonished. I can now, through 40 years of age, do a fair and reasonable day's work." For sale at H. B. Cochran's Drug Store, 137 North Queen street.

FACTS.
A letter from P. O. Sharpless, druggist, Marion, Ohio, in writing of Thomas' Electric Oil said: "I have used it for several years of eight years standing with me. I have had a number of cases of rheumatism that have been cured when other remedies have failed. We consider it the best medicine sold. For sale at H. B. Cochran's Drug Store, 137 North Queen street."

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.
To-day we open a full line of Spring and Summer Goods for Men's Wear, which has been selected from an immense stock in the country for quality, style and high-toned character. We claim superiority over anything we handled before during our experience of nearly 40 years in the business, and our reputation is established for keeping the finest goods in our line. Our opening to-day is an invoice of Novelties captured from the wreck of a large Boston house, whose failure has precipitated these goods on the market too late in the season and consequently at a sacrifice, so they are within reach of all desiring a first-class article at a moderate price. The consignment includes a full line of the celebrated Talmon's French Novelties, the handsomest and finest goods imported to this country, a new feature in silk wear—Talmon's Tropic-Long, Serpentine Tricots, Cork Screw Diagonals and Granite Weave. A full line of Taylor's English Trousers of beautiful effect, and also a fine line of Choice American Suitings as low as $2.00 a suit. All the latest Novelties in Spring Overcoatings at moderate prices. All are cordially invited to examine our stock and be convinced that we are making no idle boast, but can substantiate all we say and respectfully urge persons to purchase their wardrobe before the choicest styles are sold, for they cannot be duplicated this season.
