WATCHES.

Last Monday of a Big Campaign. To-day being the last Monday of the hot campaign for the Republican nominations to the important county offices filled this fall, the excitement of the canvass culminates in Lancaster, and where the candidates, political bosses and bummers most do congregate all has been excitement and bustle, which have not abated at the hour when the INTELLIGENCER goes to press.

Very early this morning it might have been observed that the city bummers and heelers were gathering in knots in the vicinity of the court house, organizing in the name of some bogus or bona fide scheme, to levy toll on the aspirants for their votes, and getting their pass books and tickets ready for the onset. On every train and by vehicle from every section of the county the office-hunters and the best workers poured in. Around the hotels there was quite a stir, and nearly every candidate was on hand-some of those who have been left by the combinations trying to discover how they could dispose of and trade off what strength remained to them, and others begging their friends to stand firm, so that they may gain political strength by the best possible show in the returns. It is notable, however, that no candidate who is on neither set-up cherishes any lingering hope of election. 'Squire Grider is indeed the only one of considerable strength and just how his vote will affect the chances of his competitors is problematical. It is to be observed that Good's friends have a fit of nervousness lest Grider draw off their

The headquarters of the politicians were at Boss Sensenig's Castle on the alley or the Leopard's hindquarters, and Boss Mc-Mellen's Exchange, but Sammy Groff's Snapper Box and all its environs on Barbary Coast were crowded with a hungry and thirsty crowd. At Deichler's, J. W. Johnson, Lew Hartman, John D. Skiles and some others of their faction were explaining the situation to their fellows, and Levi buttonholed the boys in the back room. Here, as at Groff's and McMellen's, the country roosters were arm in arm with the city bummers and not a bit less demoralized, the negro politiciaus were numerous, rapacious and loud-mouthed. The "small fry " were generally very mysterious and. knowing that when the machine works uneasily the engineer pours in the grease, they were very reticent as to how it was going in their districts and answered that it was very uncertain, "it all depends upon what is done to day." At the Exchange the managers were closeted "far from the madding crowd " and the scrutiny with which visitors were admitted to the councils of the saints bespoke a close and resolute organization.

There is a very considerable degree of confidence manifested as yet on all sides, but it is plainly to be seen that as election day comes nearer the nervousness of the politicians increases. The elements which make up either faction now are so incoherent that they fear treachery from each other, and against that no calculation can be made. McMellen is accused of being for Umble so intensely as to neglect Kready; other Examiner people are accused of a leaning away from Spurrier and toward Reeser, though, on the other hand, in this city and elsewhere Spurrier is credited with decisive inroads into the New Era party's sources of strength. Kready is accused of stinginess by some of the Examiner gang and they threaten to carve him. Harry Breneman is suspected of weakening in fealty to Burkholder, of the New Era set up.

The events of the past week and the best information we could gather to day is that the fight between High and Kready is getting closer than the friends of High had anticipated and a stiff contest is looked for. Skiles seems to be the most hopeful of the New Era's candidates and most dreaded by the other side. Fridy's friends are not taking his stock at par. While Kready is expected to carry the town Skiles's friends boast of crossing the city line by 500 majority or more. In the Earls the chief contest is for sheriff, prothonotary, register and clerk of quarter sessions. High is solid down there; Skiles has the better of it; Umble will carry those districts, and Eaby will give Settley a wrestle.

Keep your eye on that man Umbie. He has forged to the front like a race horse, and is one of the strongest elements in the Examiner ticket. McMellen has put his stake on that card and it is to win, even if somebody else on the same side has to be left to accomplish it. Make a note of that too.

Burkholder and Spurrier have been making active and effectual canvasses, and each has pulled up a good deal, if not shifted the chances from their opponent. to their own favor. Their respective sides claim them among the strongest men in their combinations. The New Era people will bet at odds on Burkholder. Al Smith advises his friends to not give his enemies money to spend against him, but declares that he is safe.

The treasurer fight is an interesting though a subordinate one and seems to depend largely on the size of 'Squire Grider's vote. Grissinger, it is everybody's secret, is in better shape than usual, with-

Dr. Compton feels under special obligations to Major Griest, his former close friend, for the Inquirer's boost of Umble, without a word for Compton. He and Tobe Hershey see now what ought to have been done, viz : a people's ticket organized to beat both rings.

There will be a fight in the Third ward, this city, to snatch it from McMellen ; in the Ninth even Miles may not get away with Kready.

Jake Strine and Harry Hippey haven't made up their minds yet. They prefer to drop on the soft side of the fence. They may yet see light for Kready.

All signs point to some startling developments during the week, beginning with an expose in to-night's Era of the doings of a spy-artist, wandering through the Examiner camp in search of subjects for a caricature-and of information for the Sen-

The Examiner-Mentzer-McMellen party have not issued a short ticket and do not propose to. Their policy has been all along to concentrate the light on the upper part of the ticket, and whether this cowardice is an element of strength or weakness they will continue in it, trading off everything below director of the poor, if necessary, to make a point for somebody above that. Hence the tickets which they mark differ somewhat at the bottom. Some of them are even trading with Reeser. For county commissioner they will vote generally for Myers, and for the other place trade on Summy, Collins, Bushong and even Johnson. For director of the poor some will "cut" Evans and go for Longenecker, but not many. In other respects their ticket is as

News and Notes from the Campus. Dr. Apple, president of Franklin and Marshall college, has announced the award of the honors at the approaching commencement as follows, the awards being made with reference to superior scholarship and class standing : First honor—Marshall Oration—Ellwood Kemp, Hamburg, Pa. Second honor-Franklin Oration-Ed-

Third honor—(divided between Albert D. Elliot, York, Pa., and Lewis Reider, Kittanning, Pa.) - Morning Salutatory by Lewis Reiter; afternoon Salutatory by Albert D. Elliot.

The Valedictory, given for speaking and writing, and which is not governed by scholarship or class standing, is awarded to C. B. Heller, Danville, Pa.

The senior test ended on Thursday morning last, after a week's duration, and all the members passing; the average test grade for the class was 87 3-10. The average grade for the entire term of four years of the honor men is as follows: Mr. Kemp, 95; Mr. Bucher, 91 3-10; Mr. Refter, 90 4-10 : Mr. Elliot, 90.

The senior vacation began on Friday last, the 13th, and will continue until the 16th of June, commencement day. The class numbers nineteen, and included during the four year course thirty-four members, of whom the others dropped off at intervals. The graduating orations must be handed to the faculty ten days before commencement day. Many of the seniors have gone home to spend their vacation and prepare their orations. Dr. Apple, president of the college.

The present graduating class is composed of eleven Goetheans, four Diagnothians and four no-society men. Five fraternities are represented at the college, among which the seniors are divided as follows: Seven are Chi Phis, two are Alpha Gammas, two are Delta Tau Deltas, two are Phi Kappa Sigmas,

The Diagnothian literary society will celebrate its forty-sixth anniversary at the opera house next Friday evening. There is trouble at the college over the proposition to hold the commencement exercises at the opera house. The seniors have gone to the expense of having invitations engraved by Tiffany of New York, which are said to be the most stylish and high-toned ever got up by any graduat ing class at Franklin & Marshall. They have been engraved with "Fulton Opera House," and the class have engaged the opera house from Mr. Yecker. The faculty are reported to be against the establish ment of a precedent that is calculated to take the chief interest of the commencement exercises away from the campus and the college buildings; on the other hand it is argued that the opera house possesses advantages over the college chapel, where the orations have been delivered heretofore, being so much larger and having better accommodations, and being besides situated in the central part of the city and in consequence more convenient for the people of the city. Divergent views of the question are taken by members of the board of trustees and by the alumni, while the class with a single exception are "solid" for the opera house. How the affair will terminate is a matter of con-
