THE PLANTING OF THE APPLE TREE.

BY WILLIAM COLLIER BRYANT. Come, let us plant the apple tree, Leave the tough ground bare with the spade; While its hollow bed is made; There gently lay the roots, and there Sift the dark mould with kindly care, And press it over them tenderly; As round the tenderest infant's feet We softly fold the cradle-sheet, So plant the apple tree.

What plant we in this apple tree? Buds, which the breath of Summer days Shall lengthen into leafy spray; Boughs, where the thrush, with crimson breast, Shall hum and sing, and hide her nest; We plant upon the sunny hill, A shadow for the noonday hour, A shelter from the summer shower, When we plant the apple tree.

What plant we in this apple tree? Sweets for a hundred flowery springs To load the May-wind's restless wings; When, from the orchard row, he pours His fragrance through our open doors; A world of blossoms for the bee, Flowers for the sick girl's silent room, For the glad infant's apron of bloom, We plant with the apple tree.

What plant we in this apple tree? Fruits that shall swell in sunny June, And reddie in the August noon, And drop, when gentle airs come by, That tan the blue September sky; 'Tis for the children's joy and cheer, To eat the fruit of our tree, And seek them where the fragrant grass Betrays their bed to those who pass, At the foot of the apple tree.

And when, above this apple tree, The Winter stars are glittering bright, And winds go howling through the night, Girls, whose eyes o'erflow with mirth, Shall peep in what the garden's light; And guests in prayer-bones shall see, Heaped with the grape of Clio's vine, And golden oranges of the tree, The fruit of the apple tree.

The fruitage of this apple tree, Winds, and our flag of stripe and star, Shall bear to coasts that lie afar, Where men shall wonder at the view, And ask in what garden they grew; And sojourners beyond the sea Shall think of childhood's summer day, And long, long hours of careless play, In the shade of the apple tree.

Each year shall give this apple tree A deeper flush of rosy bloom, And lozenge, when the frost-clouds lower, The crisp brown leaves in thicker shower. The years shall come and pass, but we Shall hear no longer, where we lie, The Summer song, the Autumn's sigh, In the bough of the apple tree.

And thus shall waste this apple tree, Oh, when its aged branches throw Thin shadows on the ground below, Shall find and force and from will Oppress the weak and helpless still! What shall the task of mercy be, Amid the cares, and sorrows, and the tears, Of those who live when length of years Is waning; this little apple tree?

"Who planted this little apple tree?" The children of that distant day Thus to some aged man shall say; And, gazing on its mossy stem, The gray-haired man shall answer them: "A poet of the land was he, Born in the rude but good old times; 'Tis said he made some quaint old rhymes On planting the apple tree."

Safety for Cattle. In view of the recent loss by fire of fifty-two head of valuable Jersey cattle, secured in a barn on the Dawson Coleman estate, which were literally roasted in the burning building, which contained eighty tons of hay and straw, an agricultural engineer writes as follows to the Country Gentleman:

"The modern improved barn is a costly, cumbersome death trap, devised under mistaken ideas of economy of labor and with a view to magnificence of show. There is not a barn of the kind in existence to-day that is really worth a tithing of its cost for its convenience, nor is the safety of the stock up in it assured for twenty-four hours. The accidental dropping of a lamp, the treading upon a match, the ignorant leaving in a corner of a handful of oily rags or a painter's overalls for twenty-four hours, might start a conflagration; and the smoke and heat will, in nearly every case, prevent access to the poor creatures, which are confined under a large quantity of the most inflammable material in wide open barns, so constructed as to become the most active, fierce and rapid cremation furnace in existence, with open cupolas for a draft chimney, and wide spaces and floors to furnish the blast. It is a wonder that sensible farmers can be so thoughtless and inconsiderate, especially when the system has no other recommendation in its favor except show."

"Cattle may be kept in perfect safety in separate sheds of very cheap construction, which may be made as ornamental as desired. These may be so arranged as to be connected with the main barn, and a feeding room in the most convenient manner for feeding; each animal may be kept loose in a separate stall, with doors which can be opened in an instant, and every animal released in case of fire."

"Such disaster as the loss of a building can be repaired with ease, but the loss of stock is irreparable, to say nothing of the harrowing knowledge that they have been cruelly burnt alive as a sacrifice to their owner's mistakes. If he wants an elegant barn as an ornament for his farm, well and good, but as a business matter let him have his costly and favorite cattle kept comfortable out of reach of fire, which may any day or night consume the costly tinder-box called the barn."

A Good Account. To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $300 per year, total $1,800—all of it wiped away by three bottles of Hop Bitters from my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it for their benefit." CLOTHING. WANAMAKER & BROWN.

SHALL WE SELL THEM? There is in Philadelphia a clothing house which has no double in all the world. The world is full of clothing houses; and it is a good deal to say that one is unlike all the rest.

First, in its dealing; and it is surprising that one house should differ much from another. Selling clothing is so simple a matter, that it is likely, one would suppose, to be done in very much the same way in Philadelphia, New York and London. But Philadelphia is ahead; and, curiously enough, one house in Philadelphia is ahead of all the rest.

To be ahead in dealing is to deal on a higher plane in a more liberal way, to give the buyer more well founded confidence without loss of the merchant's safety. This Philadelphia clothing house says to a stranger: "We want to deal with exact justice. We want what belongs to us, viz., a fair profit; and we want you to have what belongs to you, viz., a liberal money's worth. Our way to arrive at a result is to mark the price on everything we sell, which price is absolute; and to let you buy what you like, go away and think the bargain over, and come and trade back, if you want to. We find by experience that this liberality is harmless to us. Of course, you like it. And it makes quick and ready dealing. We don't want you to bring back what you buy—it would cost as money every time; but we would rather you would bring back, than keep what you don't like. So, we try to see that you get at first what you will like the better, the more you know of it. This is really the whole philosophy of our dealing."

Second, in its goods—the amount and variety of them. There are other houses where excellent clothing is kept, and a great deal of it; but there is none, anywhere, that keeps so much. The dealing related above has won the largest trade the world has yet seen. To supply such a trade great quantity and variety of clothing are required; and these in turn increase the trade, because everybody likes to choose out of many things, rather than out of a few.

This is the country of ready-made clothing. Great Britain makes the most of any European country; but there is not in all London any clothing business a quarter as large as that of Oak Hall. New York has several large clothing businesses; but no one nearly equal to that of Oak Hall; Boston likewise.

Look back twenty years! Have we done you good service, or not? But that is not what we had in mind; we were thinking of the clothes you are going to buy. Shall we sell them?
