A Ruffian's Last Fight.

Marcelin Granger, alias "Le Toro De La Mermentau," a desperado of south-western Louisiana, met a long predicted fate Sunday morning, near the Mermentau river, in Calcasieu parish, at the hands of Homer Lognon. Granger who had threatened to shoot Lognon on sight, went to a party of horse-herders where he knew Lognon was employed, and challenged him for a fight. Lognon proposed to dismount for that purpose. Granger replying that he (Granger) did not want to fight, Lognon turned away from him, when Granger fired at his back. Both men dismount ed and Granger advanced on Lognon, both the young men firing at each other with pistols, Granger's last shot being at such close quarters that it set Lognon's clothes on fire. Lognon's last shot entered Granger's forehead killing him instantly. Granger was hit three times out of four shots, but Lognon escaped unhurt. Granger is accredited with two murders of peculiar atrocity, and his taking off gives general satisfaction along the Mermentau

The Prevailing Mania. At Buffalo, N. Y., an unknown man was seen deliberately to jump into the canal. The body was recovered; it has not yet been identified. The man was apparently a stranger, 30 years of age, 5 feet 6 inches high, light moustache, close-cut hair, dark working clothes, white shirt, silver watch-chain on his person. At the residence of Charles Brown, young man, Frederick Simpson, engaged in the house as a waiter, has been ill some time from consumption. He became despondent while drunk, went into a closet, drew a coat over his head, and shot himself through the heart. The body was not discovered until some time afterward. Not a drop of blood was visible, and no one in the house heard the report of the pistol. It is thought that he muffled the sound with the coat so as not to attract attention. He belonged to London, England, and has no friends in this country.

WANAMAKER & BROWN.

There is in Philadelphia a clothing house which has no double in all the world. The world is full of clothing houses; and it is a good deal to say that one is unlike all the rest.

CLOTHING.

First, in its dealing; and it is surprising that one house should differ much from another. Selling clothing is so simple a matter, that it is likely, one would suppose, to be done in very much the same way in Philadelphia, New York and London. But Philadelphia is ahead; and, curiously enough, one house in Philadelphia is ahead of all the rest.

To be ahead in dealing is to deal on a higher plane in a more liberal way, to give the buyer more well founded confidence without loss of the merchant's safety. This Philadelwhia clotning house says to a stranger: "We want to deal with exact justice. We want what belongs to us, viz., a fair profit; and we want you to have what belongs to you, viz., a liberal money's-worth. Our way to arrive at a result is to mark the price on everything we sell, which price is absolute; and to let you buy what you like, go away and think the bargain over, and come and trade back, if you want to. We find by experience that this liberality is harmless to us. Of course, you like it. And it makes quick and ready dealing. We don't want you to bring back what you buy-it would cost us money every time; but we would rather you would bring back, than keep, what you don't like. So, we try to see that you get at first what you will like the better, the more you know of it. This is really the whole philosophy of our dealing."

Second, in its goods-the amount and variety of them. There are other houses where excellent clothing is kept, and a great deal of it; but there is none; anywhere, that keeps so much. The dealing related above has won the largest trade the world has yet seen. To supply such a trade great quantity and variety of clothing are required; and these in turn increase the trade, because everybody likes to choose out of many things, rather than out of a few.

This is the country of ready-made clothing. Great Britain makes the most of any European country; but there is not in all London any clothing business a quarter as large as that of Oak Hall. New York has several large clothing businesses; but no one nearly equal to that of Oak Hall; Boston Look back twenty years! Have we done you good service, or not? But
