FARMER AND GARDENER.

The First Thinning-Out of Fruit.

Germantown Telegraph Pear-growers should bear in mind that the time is at hand when they must be thinking about thinning-out their crops, This year will probably require it more ughly than most years, because the yield promises to be very heavy, and if the trees are allowed to overbear they may by some of the more progressive farmers not recover from it for two, three, or four who wish to give it a fair trial with the trees are allowed to overbear they may We have had trees which took five years to restore them to their original vigor and productiveness. Do not be afraid that you will lose even in quantity by a free thinning-out. We have at times removed at least three-fourths of the crop, and found afterward that the crop would have withstood more with advantage. The varieties of pears most liable to overbear are the Belle Lucrative, Lawrence, Ott, Anjou, Kirtland, Shelden, Glout Morceau, Louise Bonne, Sieulle, Diel, Bartlett, Giffard, &c. The second thinning-out should take place when the fruit is about onethird grown, when care should be observed to select all the specimens that are not entirely of smooth skin and do not hang straight on the stem. All these are more or less defective. Budding.

This is the time when we like to call the attention of farmers and gardeners to the work of budding their fruit trees. Those who were to much hurried in their springwork to attend to it in April and May, can now make up for lost time by resorting to this mode of increasing the variety amount of the orchard product Budding can now be done, and continued through this month, July and forepart of August. It is not a difficult as grafting, but like the latter it must be understood just how it is to be done, though this is easy to do by giving a little attention how others do it. To cut a bud from the parent branch it should take about an inch and a half of the bark and a thin slice of the wood for three-fourths of the length of the bark, the bud being about in the centre; and in setting it cut a slit in the bark of the tree only, say two inches in length, and at the top make a cut across the slit; then carefully raise the bark up with the knife and insert in it the bud. Do it as neatly as possible. Then wrap around the entire slit and up to the bud bass matting, using strips about a foot long and half an inch in width, and tie in a knot. Of course the branch or stock in which the bud is set remains just as it was before, no topping or cutting off.

The budding of peach trees is best deferred until August, and is always adopted instead of grafting, which is not recommended for this fruit.

What About Liquid Manure It has not been many years since that there was quite a furor about the use of liquid manure as a fertilizer: and this was quite sensibly added to by the statements made of it by the celebrated "London farmer," Alderman Mechi, who even went so far as to invent an apparatus to haul it in and sprinkle it over his land. We all remember-or should remember-how he "went on" about it. It was the best way to apply manure. There were the crops; here were the figures. There could be no doubt about it. It was no waste to manure to have the best of its matter washed out of it, if only the liquid waste could be collected in tanks and pumped into liquid manure carts and handed over the ground; or even pumped. hauled over the ground; or even pumped back again to the manure-heap from which it had been washed—and so on and so on. The subject was taken up in this country and a great deal was written about it and discussed at farmers' clubs, &c. Few had any experience. They wrote about it and recommeded it simpyl because the matter had been taken up so resolutely in England and vouched for by what was at the time considered the highest authority. But it turned out to be all fallacious; in the first place, because no good farmer, in places where manure is valuable, cares to have his manure washed in this way, but builds a roof and covers it from rain; and in the next place it does not pay to build cisterns, invest in pumps and buy broad-wheeled carts for the sake of distributing a few gallons of liquid manure. Water is heavy to carry; and the hanling of a gallon for the sake of a teaspoonful of nutritious matter, is an apsurdity few American farmers would be guilty of. But it was said there were the figures. So there were as to actual pro-ducts; but this is not the way to calculate farm profits. That a piece of land watered with liquid manure will yield more than a piece manured in the regular way, may be all true enough; but if it cost treble for double the profit it had better be left alone. In fact, the liquid manure idea as an element in profitable farming seems to have departed here. We seldom see the old time articles now. Even in England it seems to be on its last legs. The whole paraphernalia of tanks, water carts, and so-forth, says the London Agricultural Gazette, are the mere toys of farming and so said we, long, long ago. The Size of the Farm.

It is true enough that we cannot have immense returns from our farm if we do not have a commensurate amount of land. We cannot expect to garner six or eight hundred bushels of wheat, rye, corn, etc., from a fifty-acre farm. Nevertheless the profits from a farm are not always, or very requently, the result of very large farms. It is the thorough cultivation of the land we have, and making the very best of everything that the profit comes in. We may have hundreds of acres of land, but it may be unproductive for the reason that we do not possess the means of properly enriching it. Hence, while we may have capital enough to while we may have capital enough to run a moderate farm in the very best man-ner, causing it to yield double the crops that we could look for per acre from five or six times the quantity of land, we should utterly fail in making the larger farm profitable at all; but on the other hand we should find it year after year making us poorer and poorer, until we should be completely swamped by it. Just look at this simple statement: If a capital of five thousand dollars, expended in the cultivation of two hundred acres, will only yield a profit of five hundred dollars, while if it were applied to one hundred acres it would produce a profit of one thousand dollars, it is clear that the income would be increased by diminishing by one-half the quantity of the land.

We have known many a farmer who has been bankrupted by a large farm, but who might have acquired a comfortable com-petency on one half the number of acres. Farmers, as a rule, strive to own a large tract of land, without considering that they have not the capital to work it as it should be; and that unless it is so worked it must drag them down instead of build-it must drag them down instead of Duinting them up.

The prudent man should start only with such a sized farm as he possesses the means of conducting in such a way that it will produce him the largest return from the capital invested He will see, then, that he is early gaining pecuniary strength, and this will relieve him from any fears that he will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before him as clearly as they are undeniably, that he is steadily laying the toundation for his prosperity and increasing success. Hence, and the strength of the content of the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before him as clearly as they are undeniably, that he is steadily laying the toundation for his prosperity and increasing success. Hence, and the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the image of the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the image of the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the image of the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the image of the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, while the facts are before the content when the capital invested the will be likely to go down-hill, w

Strawberries.

Where They Grow, and the Manner of Their Transportation.

The Wilson is at present the leading market berry, nine-tenths of the supply shipped from all parts of the United States being of this variety. It is familiar to all with its bright color, glossy, hard skin, generally conical in shape and about an inch in length. The Downing is similar in color and size, but is smaller and not quite as hard. This has been planted Wilson: The Jucunda is a conical, fineflavored, large berry, requiring high cul-ture. Triomphe de Gand is much like the Jucunda, but is more irregular in shape. Seth Boyden is very large, conical, dark red, of good flavor, sweet, vigorous and prolific. The Sharpless, one of the largest varieties, has immense irregularlyshaped, flat berries, is bright red, sweet and of delicate flavor. Black Defiance is dark red and highly flavored. Monarch of the West is very large, round, dull light red, and of good quality. The Bidwell has heavy crops of large, conical, smooth berries of fine flavor. The Great American berries are very large, measuring in some instances nearly four suches in diameter. They are irregular in shape, being flat and conical and of bright red and good quality. Neunan's Prolific is the berry raised extensively in the South for Northern markets, but is not much better flavored than the Wilson. These, with the Longfellow, President Lincoln, Champion and Kerr Prolific-the latter finely flavored and very prolific-are the best varieties in the market at present.

The first strawberries in the market are from hothouses and bring very high prices.
The berries during the Christmas holidays last year brought $7.50 a quart. Florida was the first state to supply the North with the berries in any quantity last winter, the first shipment reaching here in February. This year they were six weeks later, owing to the cold weather in the South. These berries are sold for about $3.50 a quart. They are brought by rail in refrigerator cars and by steamers, either in zinc boxes holding six crates, with a tray filled with ico under the lid of each box, or in compartments made cool by fan refrigerators, where a current of cold air is driven through the room containing the fruit. About ten days later than the Florida berries those from Charleston begin to make their appearance. These are the Wilson and Neunan's Prolific; the Wilson seeming to lose none of its characteristles on Southern soil. Virginia, Delaware and Maryland follow next, with the wild berry cultivated to a larger size, but with as fine a flavor as if just from the woods. It is known in the market as the Federal Point berry, and is a week earlier than the other varieties. New Jersey, Winchester and Long Island berries ripen about the same time and flood the market.

A Good Account. To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know is for their heaeft." body to know it for their benefit."

SHALL WE SELL THEM?

There is in Philadelphia a clothing house which has no double in all the world. The world is full of clothing houses; and it is a good deal to say that one is unlike all the rest.

First, in its dealing; and it is surprising that one house should differ much from another. Selling clothing is so simple a matter, that it is likely, one weuld suppose, to be done in very much the same way in Philadelphia, New York and London. But Philadelphia is ahead; and, curiously enough, one house in Philadelphia is ahead of all the rest.

To be ahead in dealing is to deal on a higher plane in a more liberal way, to give the buyer more well founded confidence without loss of the merchant's safety. This Philadelwhia clothing house says to a stranger: "We want to deal with exact justice. We want what belongs to us, viz., a fair profit; and we want you to have what belongs to you, viz., a liberal money's-worth. Our way to arrive at a result is to mark the price on everything we sell, which price is absolute; and to let you buy what you like, go away and think the bargain over, and come and trade back, if you want to. We find by experience that this liberality is harmless to us. Of course, you like it. And it makes quick and ready dealing. We don't want you to bring back what you buy-it would cost us money every time; but we would rather you would bring back, than keep, what you don't like. So, we try to see that you get at first what you will like the better, the more you know of it. This is really the whole philosophy of our dealing."

Second, in its goods-the amount and variety of them. There are other houses where excellent clothing is kept, and a great deal of it; but there is none, anywhere, that keeps so much. The dealing related above has won the largest trade the world has yet seen. To supply such a trade great quantity and variety of clothing are required; and these in turn increase the trade, because everybody likes to choose out of many things, rather than out of a few.

This is the country of ready-made clothing. Great Britain makes the most of any European country; but there is not in all London any clothing business a quarter as large as that of Oak Hall. New York has several large clothing businesses; but no one nearly equal to that of Oak Hall; Boston likewise.

Look back twenty years! Have we done you good service, or not? But that is not what we had in mind; we were thinking of the clothes you are going to buy. Shall we sell them?
