The Art of War.

as Fully Explained by Mark Twain. At the late reunion of the Army of the Potomac in Hartford, to the regular toast, "The benefit of judicious training," Mr. Samuel L. Clemmens. (Mark Twain) responded as follows: "Let but the thoughtful civilian instruct the soldier in his duties, and the victory is sure."—Martin Furquhar Tupper on the Art of War.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I gladly join with my fellow-townsmen in extending a hearty welcome to these illustrious generals and these war-scarre i soldiers of the republic. This is a proud day for us, and, if the sincere desire of our hearts has been fulfilled it has not been an unpleasant day of war it is permitted to none below the for them. I am in full accord, sir, with the sentiment of the toast, for I have always maintained with enthusiasm that the only wise and true way is for the soldier to fight the battle and the unprejudiced civilian to tell him how to do it. Yet when I was invited to respond to this toast and furnish this advice and instruction, I was almost as much embarrassed as I was gratified, for I could bring to this great service but the one virtue of absence of prejudice and set opinion. Still, but one other qualification was needed and it was of only minor importance. I mean knowledge of the subject. Therefore I was not disheartened, for I could acquire that, there being two weeks to spare. A general of high rank in this army of the Potomac said two weeks was really more than I would need for the purpose. He had known people of my style who had learned enough in 48 hours to enable them to advise an army. Aside from the compliment, this was gratifying, because it confirmed an impression I had had before. He told me to go to the United States military academy at West Point and said in his flowery professional way that the cadets would "load me up." I went there and staid two days, and his prediction proved correct. I make no boast on my own account-none. All I know about military matters I got from the gentlemen at West Point and to them belongs the credit. They treated me with courtesy from the first, but when my mission was revealed, this mere courtesy blossomed into warmest zeal. Everybody, officers and all, put down their work and turned their whole attention to giving me military information. Every question I asked was promptly and exhaustively answered; therefore, I feel proud to state that in the advice which I am about to give you as soldiers, I am backed up by the highest military authority in the land —yes, in the world, if an American does say it-West Point. To begin, gentlemen, when an engage-ment is meditated, it is best to feel the enemy first, that is, if it is night, for, as one of the cadets explained to me, you do one of the cadets explained to me, you do not need to feel him in the day time, because you can see him then. I never should have thought of that, but it is true—perfectly true. In the day-time the methods of procedure are various, but the best, it seems to me, is one which was introduced by Gen. Grant. Gen. Grant at ways sent an active young man redoubt to reconnoitre and get the enemy's bearings. I got this from a high officer at the Point, who told me he used to be a redoubt on Gen. Grant's staff, and had done it Gen. Grant's staff, and had done it the hour for the battle is come, move to the front with celerity -fool away no time. Under this head I was told of a maxim of Gen. Sheridan's. Gen. Sheridan always said, "If the siege train isn't reado, don't wait-go by any trains that are handy; to get there is the main thing." Now, that is the cor-rect idea. As you approach the field it is better to get out and walk. This gives you a better chance to dispose of your forces judiciously for the assault. Get your artillery in position and throw out stragglers to the right and left to hold your lines of communication against surprise. See that every hod-carrier connected with a mortar battery is at his post. They told me at the Point that Napoleon despised mortar batteries, and never would use them. He said that for real efficiency he wouldn't give a hatful of brickbats for a ton of mortar. However, that is all he knew about it. Everything being ready for the assault, you want to enter the field with your baggage to the front. This idea was invented by our renowned guest, Gen. Sherman. They told me that Gen. Sherman said that the trunks and baggage make a good protection for the soldiers, but that chiefly they attract the attention and rivet the interest of the enemy, and this gives you an opportunity to whirl the other end of the column around and attack him in the rear. I have given a good deal of study to this tactic since I learned about it, and it appears to me it is a rattling good idea. Never fetch on your reserves at a start. This was Napoleon's first mistake at Waterloo Next, he assaulted with his bomb-proofs and ambulances and embrasures, when he ought to have used a heavier artillery. Thirdly, he retired his right by ricochet -which uncovered his picketswhen his only possibility of success lay in doubling up his centre, flank by flank, and throwing out his chevaux de frise by the left oblique to relieve the skirmish line and confuse the enemy—if such a manœuvre would confuse him, and at West Point they said it would. It was about this time that the emperor had two horses shot under him. How often you see the shot under him. How often you see the remark that Gen. So and So at such and such a battle had two or three horses shot under him. General Burnside and many great European military men, as I was informed by a high artillery officer at West Point, have justly characterized this as a wanton waste of projectiles, and he impressed upon me a conversation in the tent of the Prussian chiefs at the same of waste of the projectiles, and he impressed upon me a conversation in the tent of the Prussian chiefs at the same of waste of the prussian chiefs at the same of the prussian chiefs are the prussian chiefs are at Gravelotte, in the course of which our honored guest just referred to —Gen. Burn-side—observed that if "you can't aim a horse so as to hit the general with it, shoot it over him, and you may bag something on the other side, whereas a horse shot under a general does no sort of damage." I agree cordially with Gen. Burnside, and heaven knows I shall rejoice to see the ar-tilleries of this land and of all lands cease from this wicked and idiotic custom. At West Point they told me of another mis-take at Waterloo, namely, that the French were under fire from the beginning of the fight till the end of it—which was plainly a most effeminate and ill-timed attention to comfort, and a foolish division of military strength; for it probably took as many men to keep up the fires as it did to do the fighting. It would have been much better to have had a small fire in the rear, and let the men go there by detachments and get warm, and not try to warm up the whole army at once. All the cadets said that an assault along the whole line was the one thing which could have restored Napoleon's advantage star of the great captain's glory set to rise me these mournful particulars. When you leave a battlefield always leave it in good order. Remove the wreck and rubbish, and tidy up the place. However, in the case of a drawn battle it is neither party's business to tidy up any thing. You can leave the field looking as if the city government of New York had bossed the fight. When you are travers ing the enemy's country, in order to destroy his supplies and cripple his re at this juncture, and he was actually rising in his stirrups to order it, when a sutler burst at his side and covered him with dirt and debris, and before he could recover Wellington opened a tremendous and devastating fire upon him from a monstrous battery of vivandieres, and the camp tollowers. The more the better. They are a tremendously effective arm of the service, and they inspire in the foe the liveliest dread. A West Point professor told me that the wisdom of this was recognized as far back as scripture times. He quoted the verse. He said it was from the new revision, and was a little different from the way it reads in the old one. I do not recollect the exact wording of it now, but I remember that it wound up with something about such and such a devastating agent being as "terrible as an army with bummers." believe I have nothing further to add but this: The West Pointers said a private should preserve a respectful attitude toward his superiors, and should seldom, or never, proceed so far as to offer suggestions to his general in the field. If the battle is not being conducted to suit him, it is better for him to resign. By the etiquette rank of newspaper correspondent to dictate to the general in the field.

A Good Account. To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it for their benefit."

This morning a trio of patients, from Reading, Philadelphia and Edgewood, Bucks county, each related their unfortunate expercounty, each related their unfortunate experiences under the treatment of their eyes by the Oculists. Drs. Norris, Levis and Strawbridge, of Philadelphia, and their decided improvement under my practice. One of them came to me totally blind: the second nearly blind, and the third with almost constant neuralgia in and around the eyes, with impaired vision. A fourth patient, Miss Lizzle Brubaker, of Littiz, said: "My dyspepsia and other afflictions of long standing left me in a short time after going under your charge, and short time after going under your charge, and my glasses, worn since I was fourteen years of age, were laid aside as useless, and my vision is natural." No equilst in this country or Europe can produce such results without they discover my remedies and applications, or similar ones. WANAMAKER & BROWN.

SHALL WE SELL THEM?

There is in Philadelphia a clothing house which has no double in all the world. The world is full of clothing houses; and it is a good deal to say that one is unlike all the rest.

First, in its dealing; and it is surprising that one house should differ much from another. Selling clothing is so simple a matter, that it is likely, one would suppose, to be done in very much the same way in Philadelphia, New York and London. But Philadelphia is ahead; and, curiously enough, one house in Philadelphia is ahead of all the rest.

To be ahead in dealing is to deal on a higher plane in a more liberal way, to give the buyer more well founded confidence without loss of the merchant's safety. This Philadelwhia clothing house says to a stranger: "We want to deal with exact justice. We want what belongs to us, viz., a fair profit; and we want you to have what belongs to you, viz., a liberal money's-worth. Our way to arrive at a result is to mark the price on everything we sell, which price is absolute; and to let you buy what you like, go away and think the bargain over, and come and trade back, if you want to. We find by experience that this liberality is harmless to us. Of course, you like it. And it makes quick and ready dealing. We don't want you to bring back what you buy-it would cost us money every time; but we would rather you would bring back, than keep, what you don't like. So, we try to see that you get at first what you will like the better, the more you know of it. This is really the whole philosophy of our dealing."

Second, in its goods-the amount and variety of them. There are other houses where excellent clothing is kept, and a great deal of it; but there is none, anywhere, that keeps so much. The dealing related above has won the largest trade the world has yet seen. To supply such a trade great quantity and variety of clothing are required; and these in turn increase the trade, because everybody likes to choose out of many things, rather than out of a few.

This is the country of ready-made clothing. Great Britain makes the most of any European country; but there is not in all London any clothing business a quarter as large as that of Oak Hall. New York has several large clothing businesses; but no one nearly equal to that of Oak Hall; Boston

Look back twenty years! Have we done you good service, or not? But that is not what we had in mind; we were thinking of the clothes you are going to buy. Shall we sell them?
