MISBNER'S HERB BITTERS.

A PROPER one is NOT WITHOUT A Honor save in his own country.

True and yet like most truths it has its exceptions. The most striking illustration of this is found in the reputation acquired by Misbner's Herb Bitters during the twenty-five years it has been before the people.

The Hon. Thaddeus Stevens, member of Congress from this district, suffering from an affection of the Kidneys, could find relief in nothing else. In a letter to a friend (now in our possession) he writes: "MISBNER'S HERB BITTERS is the most wonderful combination of medicinal herbs I ever saw."

The Hon. A. L. Hayes, Law Judge of the Courts of Lancaster county, writes: "I have used it myself and in my family and am satisfied that its reputation is not exaggerated."

The Hon. George Santerson, Mayor of Lancaster city for ten years, writes: "It has become familiar to a household word, and a necessary addition to the medical requirements of every family. In my opinion it is THE BEST REMEDY EVER INTRODUCED."

J. O. Steinhauer, Superintendent of the Lancaster County Hospital, testifies to its success in the treatment of Dyspepsia, Kidney Diseases, Liver Complaint, Rheumatism, Asthma and Scrofula, and this testimony is endorsed from a like experience by A. Falzer, esq., Steward of the Lancaster County Almshouse.

The proprietors have in their possession thousands of letters and certificates from persons in every section of the country who have been cured of various Diseases, and it is their proud boast that they have never published a line that was not genuine, nor a name that was not authorized. Some of these read like miracles, but the facts are indispensible. One of the most remarkable is the case of Isaac Saltzer, of Mayerstown, Lebanon county, Pa., cured of Hereditary Scrofula, aggravated by a pork diet. We have two large jars of seeds which he saved and brought to us as a curiosity. He has not two square inches on his eye, but the body that is not marked with a scar, yet Misbner's Herb Bitters cured him.

Every day it is sold by druggists and country storekeepers in almost every town, village and hamlet throughout the length and breadth of this great country, and everywhere the same verdict is recorded. Thousands of families far removed from physicians rely upon it in every emergency and it never fails them; with it in the house they feel, they know, they are safe against the attacks of disease. It has earned its confidence and will continue to deserve the confidence of the people.

A preparation thus approved alike by the most prominent officials and the great masses of the community must possess merit. In fact it is

A CERTAIN REMEDY.

For purifying the Blood and secretions—A QUICK AND ABSOLUTE CURE for Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, all Diseases of the Kidneys, Cramp in the Stomach and every form of Indigestion—A SURE REMEDY for Intermittent Fever, Fever and Ague, and all other periodical Complaints. AN IMMEDIATE RELIEF for Dysentery, Colic, Cholera Morbus and kindred Diseases. IT IS A PURE AND WHOLESOME STOMACHIC; AN UNQUALIFIED APPETIZER; A TONIC WITHOUT A RIVAL AND A PANACEA for all Diseases of the Lungs, Heart and Throat. IT CURES Fever and Ague with greater certainty than Quinine, and in the river bottoms of the West has largely superseded that long considered specific for Chills and Fever, and the various forms of Malaria.

Its tendency to direct action upon the Kidneys renders its use peculiarly beneficial in all Diseases of this nature. It prevents the formation of Gravel, and where formed will dissolve and remove it. The ague and hectic will find in it most comforting and strengthening. It remedies the frequent necessity for getting up at night and will ensure sound sleep.

PROMPT, CERTAIN AND POWERFUL

in its effects; it is so mild and gentle in its operations that it may be given with absolute safety to the youngest child. LADIES, old and young, married and single, in every walk and condition of life will find its occasional use highly beneficial. The weary aches, the pains in the back and shoulders, the staking, all gone feelings, nausea and headaches, will be avoided and the pallid cheeks of the weak and debilitated will radiate the rose and peach in the brightness and delicacy of their bloom. In a word it is NATURE'S OWN ASSISTANT.

Enclosed in a yellow wrapper. See that the cork is covered by a cent proprietary stamp from our own private date, bearing a finely engraved portrait of Dr. B. Misbner. It is sold by all Druggists and Storekeepers. Try it.

About Comets by Clairvoyants.

Extracts From "Words Within Worlds." For the INTELLIGENCER. "Before entering upon a description of the nature of comets it will be necessary that a short introductory explanation shall be given, without which, the whole subject must remain unintelligible. Let it then be observed, that what persons are in the habit of calling animal and vegetable is an influx from the great central sun of the universe, communicated first to the primary of each system (by comets) and from thence emanating to each and every satellite throughout creation.

It is scarcely necessary to say that this influx is in itself electrical, or that it contains in combination all the principles of vital and physical electricity. The primary of each system being always positive or attractive, when compared with its satellites (in apellation) naturally exerts over them, while in that position, an attractive affinity, drawing them towards itself, and the same affinity, when they also become positive or of the same nature, and are as a consequence, repelled, but are again attracted when they reach their apellation. Thus twice in a year, they are attracted and repelled. To make this understood, it will be necessary to state, that contrary to the usual opinion, the sun is in the centre of the earth's orbit, which is an ellipse, about four millions of miles less in its shortest diameter.

The sun being in the centre, we have, consequently, two points at which a planet is near the sun and two at which it is furthest off. The planet is twice in one year in perihelion and twice in aphelion—the former corresponding to the vernal and autumnal equinoxes, and the latter to the summer and winter solstices. In this great fact will be found a substitute for the doctrine of centripetal and centrifugal forces, the motion of each planet around its primary, resulting from and producing its own electrical equalization, as well as its motion around its own axis. There probably is no point in astronomical science less understood or more ridiculously misrepresented than the nature and uses of comets."

The irregularity in the return of most comets would go to prove that they are not confined to one solar system, as is supposed by some, and favors the idea that they traverse the various systems in the universe as messengers of electrical equalization. The theory therefore, of the periodic return of any given comet must be fallacious; the near agreement of any two comets not establishing their identity, but only proves that they both have entered our system from some system beyond.

The old theory of the motion of planetary bodies is too mechanical and the laws of centripetal and centrifugal forces, when applied to comets, would land them in the sun, especially if their centrifugal force was destroyed for five or six hundred days, as in the case of the celebrated comet of Halley.

Comets are no doubt electrical globes and after having equalized any given system, are necessarily repelled from that system, with a velocity equal to their diminished electrical condition, and as the tail of comets, when going from the sun, always precedes their bodies, it not only proves that they are electrical but more repellant than their bodies."

The present comet seems to prove this view of their motion and nature, as it was first seen, after having passed around the sun—and is now apparently passing in the direction of the North Star.

Mark Twain On the Comet.

The Hartford Astronomer's Glimpy View of the Situation.

Desiring to get the opinion of that celebrated amateur astronomer, Mr. Samuel Longhorne Clemens, on the new comet, I visited his home this morning, just before breakfast. His passionate fondness for observing celestial phenomena is well known. I was confident that I should find him at his telescope in the turret that caps the northeast corner of his extraordinary mansion. A few well directed inquiries brought me to the window where "Hello!" said he, "Come up; but don't wake the baby. Mind the sixth stair on the second flight; it creaks a Hades of a falsetto." So saying, he led down his door key at the end of a string.

"When I reached the turret my friend was no longer inside. He was sitting in an open scuttle leading to the roof, smoking a cigar. His face had a haggard look and his long legs hung listlessly through the scuttleway. "You look tired, Mark?" said I. "Have you been at it all night?"

"All night?" said he. "This makes the fourth consecutive night that I haven't closed half an eye. Its wearing on me. This constant responsibility is undermining my constitution. My sense of duty is as strong as the next man's, but sometimes I feel like hitting you with a leaden mallet, if the condemned plane slips into the revised version of brimstone. All night? Good night! Some other night!"

"Well," said I, "there's no occasion for anger. Nobody compels you to sit up here in the marlinous morning atmosphere and copy it down." He mastered his wrath and gazed down upon me with an expression of melancholy pity. "The tail of that comet," said he, "is, according to my calculations, a trifle over 43,000,000 miles long; yet it would reach a more than a quarter way through the skulls of some people that I know. The reckless ignorance of mankind amazes me more and more the older I grow. Why don't I go to bed? Yes, it would be a perfectly easy and natural thing to go to bed, wouldn't it now? Perhaps I had better go to bed." And he laughed derisively.

"What in the name of common sense are you driving at, Clemens?" I demanded. "Oh, nothing at all. Nothing except that while the mad revelry of the world goes on below, and the multitude pursues its wonted vocations precisely as though a universal catastrophe was not imminent, one solitary watcher sits up here in his lonely tower, braving danger and incurring great fatigue for the sake of his infatuated fellow-beings. There have been examples of such devotion to duty in history, but they are rare, and it has always been left to posterity to recognize them. At the present moment I fill the post of lookout to the planet, young man. You'll find set down in the census the exact number of fellow-citizens whose existence depends upon my vigilance. That's all I'm driving at!"

"I always knew your philanthropy, Mark. Yet I must say that this last underrating surprises me." He immediately became affable and even confidential. "There is a good deal more below, and the multitude pursues its true Christian spirit of self-denial in it, isn't there, now? You see, they are all wrong about the tail. I've chattered on that tail until I understand every inch of it. It's absurd to suppose that the tail isn't solid, and pretty tough, too. Do you imagine that this comet could go bulging through space at the rate of the rate of 300 miles a minute without knocking spots out of a tail that was vapor? The fog bank on the rear end of the New York and Boston 4 o'clock express, start her off at even forty miles an hour, and see how long your fog bank will travel in company with your locomotive.

A Thrilling Experience.

A Tow of Seventeen Canal Boats Pass Over Two Women—One of Them Miraculously Escapes Drowning.

The body of a woman was found in the Hudson river, near Verplanck's Point, on Saturday evening, and Coroner Ackerman held an inquest, at which the following remarkable story was told: The woman proved to be Eliza Gardner, aged fifty years, whose home was at Verplanck's Point. Last Wednesday evening herself and her daughter Lydia, aged eighteen years, who were employed on a canal boat which carries the Erie canal, went out from Verplanck's Point, where they had been visiting, to board their boat, which was in the forward part of a tow of seventeen vessels bound north. The women were in a small boat and were rowing it themselves. The pump crew along their boat was as usual, and they were decked and were thrown from the deck. The line fell short, and Mrs. Gardner, in reaching for it, upset the small boat and both women were thrown into the river. They were expert swimmers and struck out only, which gave the eddy that set in around the tow, but they could not swim against it, and were rapidly sucked in towards the vessels and finally disappeared beneath their own canal boat. As they were drawn under Mrs. Gardner caught hold of her daughters foot so that she could not swim. The girl had the presence of mind enough to shut her mouth, hold her nose with one hand and keep herself as near to the surface as possible with the other. When the first boat had passed over the women they came up directly in front of the one following, there being an intervening space of five or six feet only, which gave the girl just time enough to fill her lungs with air before the next boat ran her down. In this way seventeen boats passed over the two women. The elder of whom still clung to her daughter's foot. When the last boat had passed over them the tow had almost come to a stop, for the stern had been spread and the tug's engines had been reversed. A crowd collected at the end of the tow and as the woman came to the surface a line was thrown to them. It was caught by Lydia, who held fast, and she was pulled into a small boat almost lifeless. Mrs. Gardner suddenly disappeared, and although search was made for the body, it was not found, and the tow proceeded to Troy. On Saturday a messenger was sent back and the river dragged. In the evening the body was found and the coroner notified, but none of the thrilling details were made known until the inquest was held, and then the story was told in an indifferent style, as though the passage of a whole flotilla of canal boats over a couple of women were an ordinary occurrence.
