WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 20, 1881.

LONGINGS. If I were a railroad brakeman, I'd holler the stations so plain. That the man who was going to Texas. Would go clear through the State. I'd open the door for the smoking car. And I'd give such a mighty roar, That the passengers back in the sleeper Would all fall out on the floor. For I couldn't afford to be nice. And I couldn't afford to speak in the street, soft-toned of Eolian harp For eleven dollars a week.

Country Gentleman. In the treatment of fowls one disease must not be mistaken for another. For instance, the name of "chicken cholera" is applied quite frequently to many ailments that are simple, or merely disarrangements of the internal organs that may be easily remedied by a change of diet or place. Roup is the worst affliction of the poultry yard. It may be pronounced the root of all disease. It proceeds from the simplest causes, as a sudden cold contracted from a current of air or undue exposure. At one time a writer sold a pair of chickens for purposes in April. He was a fine bird, and had been kept under cover with a southern glass exposure, and was not accustomed to the outside atmosphere. The consequence was a sudden cold, proceeding from the change and the result of the fowl's illness, further remarking that he was unfit for use, as he was diseased. All animals suffer greatly from change of long, and in case of failure of treatment and feed as well as quarters, but also from home sickness. Fowls suffer from the same cause. But this was a case of downright cruelty. The fowl had been starved.

When shipping fowls, or selling them, without having been sold by the purchaser every particular concerning the treatment of the birds should previously be forwarded, so that accidents and sickness may be avoided. This is only just and honorable, more especially in the spring of the year before the fowls are necessary to the outside atmosphere. When purchasers see the fowls this is unnecessary, as they are able to take notes when visiting the premises, and act accordingly. No censure, when such is the case, can be attached to the seller, as it is the duty of the purchaser. Fowls also suffer greatly from transportation. The fatigue of the journey, unnatural position, and irregularity of feeding, largely serves to disturb the equilibrium, and they fall a ready prey to colds, which are followed by the roup, which in the advanced state is incurable. It assumes many forms, and is oftentimes, no doubt, termed cholera. It should be avoided as the worst distemper that afflicts our domestic birds. It may be advanced by slow stages and subside until the victim is much reduced. At other times it puts on a more acute, but not so dangerous appearance. On the arrival of fowls from long distances, care should be exercised in the first feeding. It is naturally supposed that the fowls are fatigued and that they will readily accept your what is set before them. They should have soft, scalded, easily digested food, and be placed at once in warm, comfortable quarters. If this precaution was always taken there would be less cause for complaint and less expense of the fowls. Food will also produce what is termed chicken cholera.

The poultry business is a great and still increasing one. A country place is not stocked without them and to keep them in health and profit is no small undertaking. It will not do to allow them to shift for themselves altogether. The garden and fruit, as well as flower beds, will suffer, hence they must be controlled in their movements. Constant close confinement will not answer. Still fowls will be profitable if confined during the larger half of the day, but they must be supplied with all the requirements of nature, and fresh, clean water must be given. Fowls often get run down, and require a change of food; especially laying hens, which are large egg producers. The best care daily will keep them from eating feathers, and promote health and activity. If the weather be cool, a little pepper may be given, but do not give too much to hens that are laying eggs for hatching. In the summer they are apt to be unfertilized. Before doctoring all such damage is done by administering doses for a disease that may not exist at the time.
