AT THE SEASIDE. THE UPPER JERSEY RESORTS.

Town Lots at Long Brauch and Lots of Religion at Ocean Grove.

Real estate at Long Branch is being put up somewhat recklessly on the strength of several new men of wealth having built or bought there within the past year. Land is held at about $4,000 an acre for half a mile back from the beach, most of it worth about $1,500. Prices on the ocean front are wholly arbitrary, generally about $100 a front foot. An acre is commonly reck-oned at sixteen New York building lots or rising 200 feet square. The cottages on the ocean front, south of the West End hotel are, in order, Leech's, General A. Webb's, Brice Gray's, Woerishoffer's, Nathan's, Seligman's, Drexel's, Leech's, the three Curtises-father and two sons-Henderson's (the theatre man), Nehemiah Perry's Brokaw's, Billings's, Wright's, Barbour's, Grant's, Fahnestock's Amos Cutting's, Garrison's, Moses Taylor's, his son in law, Winthrop's, Hard's (the coffee man), and, passing the Elberon cottages, Garland's, Victor Newcome's and Horace White's. Here are twenty-seven places on the ocean front. No houses on this side are encountered till we come to

On the opposite side, separated by the great drive from the ocean lawns, are these cottages, beginning below the club-house at the West End hotel; Daniel Dougherty's, cost $22,000, with about four acres. Behind it are the four new cottages put up last year by Walter S. Green. Next, the two Sternberger's, and beyond the dam Charlotte Rhode's, Geotry's, Miss Billings's, Pullman's, Grant's, recently sold for $25,000; Blumenthal's, L. B. Brown's, Thomas Murphy's. The Elber-on cottages and stables extend to the ditch opposite Newcome's. Figures and "points" on some of these houses have been given me, as follows: Commodore Garrison's "cottage" -rather, marine village—cost $70,000; Fahnes-tock's, of the First National bank, was bought for $24,000 nearly two years ago, and has cost $15,000 since; Child's pretty blue cottage cost $18,000 originally; now represents $25,000. Amos Cutting's, on Senator Jones's old lot, cost $25,000; Moses Taylor's cost $40,000, and adding his son-in-law Winthrop's and the two lawns stands for $125,000. This is one of the Boston Winthrop's. George M. Pullman's cottage and double lawns, on both sides the drive, represent $67,500. Murphy's cottage and grounds, also double, cost in flush times, $80,000; the stable cost $12,-000 and the billiard hall $10,000. The numerous small cottages around the Elberon hotel cost in dull years $2,250 to $4,000 apiece. Judge Hilton's purchase south of the Elberon hotel, 350 feet by about 800 feet, cost him recently $30,000, or $100 per front foot. He bought it of V. Newcome, who made $8,000 by the opera-

Hilton has also got 600 feet across the road, on both sides, bringing his purchase up to $65,000; it is guessed he designs to build sometime a hotel here. Mr. Francklyn, of the Elberon hotel, bought 450 feet front on the ocean side years ago for $32,-000. That hotel, notwithstanding its high guests this year than it has accommodated. John Hoey not long ago paid $24,000 for a property at the East End, next to the Brighton hotel, for which he has since refused $65,000. He also bought ninety-seven acres at sheriff's sale for $20,000, and sald only sight agrees of it to Mr. Gar. and sold only eight acres of it to Mr. Garrison for $25,000 William Garrison is to build a house on the tall hill near Mary Adams's cottage : Mrs. Adams has sold some of her land for $1,000 per acre. The high plateau of ground belonging to Louis J. Phillips, the fur dealer, with 3,300 feet upon the ocean, south of settled Long Branch, has been within the last fortnight added to T. Murphy's farm immediately back of it, and formed into the Elberon land and improvement company, having a united tract of 655 acres, capital $500,000. E. L. Brown, the builder, whose name was punned into Elberon, is expected to be the president. South of this property Dickson, an original Jersey farmer, has 300 feet front by 900 deep on the ocean side for which he has refused $30,000. At Deal Village, Allen, the hotel keeper, sold last year seventeen twentieths of an acre for $2,500, and the buyer sold half his purchase for the same amount. Bradley, the projector of Asbury Park, gave $80,-000 for his tract of several hundred acres, and lots are now selling in it 50 feet by 120, for $1,500 apiece. A great opportunity was lost in railroad locating by diverting the New Jersey Southern road into the interior of the state instead of sending it down the coast. It is said that this property cost $2,600,000 before the Central of New Jersey bought it yet the latter railroad's Long Branch division from Elizabethport, which cost only $2,000,000, is said to be making 15 to 20 per cent. a year. The parent company owns two-thirds of the stock, but the accounts are kept separately. The Pennsylvania railroad is to build along the coast some day as far south as Atlantic City. General Babcock's Long Branch cottage, which cost $8,500 without the ground rents for $2,009 a year, Mr. Hoey has 300 acres at the Branch. The West End hotel, the most profitable at the Branch, cost $350,000 fifteen years ago, and sold at forced sale to the present proprietors for $225,000, who have spent $150,000 in improvements; the old Conover house, perhaps half a century old, is enclosed within its court. Long Branch Architecture. A word upon the style of some of the new cottages: Horace White has a new yellow shingle cottage, two stories and an attic high, with lattice dormers, which have the effect of small gables. The large roof is also treated with side salients, gabled; a great arch between these gables is recessed deeply and extends to the roof and is backed with glass in small panes. Another gable, lower than the roof, flanks this arch. The end of the cottage is extended and deeply balconied, and its angle with the front forms an architectural terrace. The roof is in older shingle of a gray color.

[From the road six different gables are south end makes a broad transept-like feature which is overhung at each end at the gables and treated below with bays and an extension in higher stories with a flower window and an adventitious gable. The general effect is that of a whaler's cottage weather-beaten.

brick chimneys, in some cases outside the frame of the house. It is the most praised house at the Branch, very large, very cool and without any pretension. His son-in End, where now there are drug, confect went ahead into a coppice of cedar bushes, law has a house of three overtopping front gables with a porte cochere at the angle, strong outside brickwork and chimneys, and a dark green surface. Some say the chimneys are too important.

Mr. Garrison's cottage is a light gre en color with abundant roofs of red. Nine gables raised upon each other break the lines from a single point of view. A turret at one end, a lofty cupola at the other and stained glass abundant ever the surface, with hollow gables, crochetted pinnacles, a porte cochere and numerous balconies and verandas almost confuse the eye. A great brick chimney accompanies the main cupola nearly to its lantern and resembles an ambitious buttress with outside fireplaces. The lower story and basement are of brick. The great house

Mr. Amos Cutting's house makes a great feature of two huge red brick chimneys entirely outside the frame and one of them contains a great hollow chimneyplace. Tiles are used for outside ornaments. The roof is broken into many details. Tiles ornament the ridge of the roof. The color is a drab green.

Mr. Barbour, the thread manufacturer's, new house is of grayish green with the centre thrown up to four stories, the top story a summer house. All the roofs are of Venetian red. Plenteous filagree carpentry and lattices and colored glass windows break the woodwork. A conical tower of red surmounts all. There is now room at Long Branch for fresh innovation, the imitator being too apparent in the general course of constructions.

The Moral Point, Asbury park is a remarkable development in summer sociology. Every year it springs forward and its hotels almost rival those of Long Branch, while its real estate has advanced hundreds per cent. in the past five years. Lots offered at $500 in dull years now are held at $2,500. A single man, seeing Ocean Grove with its prison stockade and code of rigid Mosaic observances, rise to business consequence, bought the sand hummocks and scrub timber beside it, and started a moral but not a pronouncedly religious rival and companion place. Francis Asbury, the American St. Francis, lent his widely known name to the title, with which was incorporated the nondescript expression "Park," as distinguished from ville or camp. A "Tabernacle" was put up, in deference to the example of Ocean Grove, but in smarter style, nothing of the old canvas camp-meeting material being employed, and churches of different denominations, charitable asylums and philanthropic retreats, picuic commons and a lake or pond full of pleasure boats advertised the spot as liberal and joyous. Liquor was the only witch absolutely exorcised, though the chief hotel was allowed to furnish wine

The sequel has proved that religion is at a premium when mildly administered and that, as the business spirit of Asbury Park remarks, looking over his several hundred acres of homes, "a little of it goes a great ways." Shouting is still an occasional indulgence at Ocean Grove hurrahing is the shout of Asbury Park. Lumber is the real genius of both places and without it there could not have sprung, almost like the weeds affeld, and shaken to the ocean their slender inflorescence. Lumber, of which Moses made his nation, raising tabernacle and temple walls to attach his migratory race to some fixed soil; lumber, in which America is richer than all antiquity and which has housed our forefathers until now; lumber, which pierces heaven in church spires, makes flooring for iron railroads, gives strength to our lightest wagons in the world, and makes the healthiest dwellings for man; how well they spoke of the tree

Here at Asbury Park may occasionally be seen the good old lady enjoying over her Bible the pleasant pronunciation of that blessed word "Mesopotamia." Here also may be heard at meeting houses the peculiar nasal melody of the negro, whose voice with its engaging witchery is pro-longed beyond white folks' notes and gives its owner notice and a voodoo authority. Here you may see what you have supposed dead in this age-the sincere eestasy of piety, the supernal trance upon the countenance, drawn from contemplations of God and eternity. Religion as a social element is too much overlooked in secular newspapers; it is still the overpowering life of this country, though scarcely aggressive. It is the principal element of American wealth, being the main engine of thrift, temperance, wedlock, the census, utility and education. All those rich cottages at Long Branch, if you look into their past, were seeded in religious disci pline. Matrimony becomes the early recourse of an abstinent society, and good habits are taken on faith as so much capital. Here the mechanic is still at a social premium, where the broker, lawyer and financier are not unsuspected. And where does exist a higher standard of man than the carpenter or builder even now? He is the only author in America whose works sell. At these moral cities the only differ ence between worldly people is a certain pallor of skin and general absence of fat

One of the sacrifices of real estate at Long Branch was that of United States Senator John P. Jones, who paid $20,000 for a piece of ground 250 feet by 600 and more, on the ocean bluff, in or about 1873. It is said to have cost him $30,000 in all with taxes, improvements, etc. It was sold for $10,000 to Mr. Cutting a year or so ago, but would now bring nearly its origi-

Social Observations. The principal lesson of this rise of property is the returning tendency to country life. The village carts, box wagons, coupes, etc., seen in such variety at Long Branch belong overwhelmingly to the cot-tages. The price of keeping a pair of horses at the hotel stables is $80 a month. The Long Branch pier has been of doubtful value to the place except as a competing agency to living freight. It is rather an injury to the hotels nearest it, and has made property furthest away from it appreciate the more. Life in the surf is pretty but rather tame here, owing to the attempt of so called fashion to proscribe bathing as for the present rather vulgar. One would think from the very imperfect figures and feet Moses Taylor's cottage is a plain, green ish building with red roofs and balconies, Roman arches of wood and broad red about the West End and Howland hotels has been much improved by building and his nose well up, as if he was following an pilings, and is now as safe and sandy air line toward an invisible goal. He made tionery, fruit, millinery and dressmakers' places. Hotels are growing in number up Monmouth Beach way, rather than down toward "Murray Hill."

Varanda Chit-Chat.

Conversation here is not aggressive, and there is need of picturesque talkers like the Hon. Benjamin Brewster, whose latest views are about as follows: "Sometimes I favor by limiting by law the amount of money a man shall leave his sons. Twenty thousand dollars a piece is plenty for them. Above that it might probably escheat to the state. The consequence would be that rich men would do good while they live with their enormous profits. It is common to hear of boys educated by bounty to begin the battle of life say, "Oh! I think I ought to have been a rich man's son! Look is in too many parts to express itself firmly on the mind, though it bears study at every point.

The great house build have been a rich man s son! Hook around you at the young women in the hotel. In every pair of ears is a pair of big diamonds, the aggregate being right here as many diamonds as a palace contains. Yet nothing seems to accompany the diamonds but a novel. You see nobody reading anything but that. A young woman in big diamonds hearing me mention Franklin yesterday, said: 'Mr. Brewster, who was Franklin? He was the inventor of printing, was he not?" 'Yes, lear,' I said, 'of printing, and of thunder and lightning." She said, 'Oh, thank you!' and never knew it was a reflection upon her. Now, her mother would have known who Franklin was." Sitting by a hotel window here a few days ago, a stranger counted the oxclamations "lovely" and "horrid" on the pi azza. First, what was horrid: "I think Jersey is horrid!" "Brooklyn is horrid!" "Asbury Park is horrid!" "The Catskill is horrid!" " Niagara Falls is horrid !"

An American eagle's peculiar freak is related by W. W. Cole, a showman. While he was exhibiting in Melbourne, Australia, an American cagle, the only one of the species ever in Australia, belonging to the zoological gardens, escaped from its cage and soared heavenward, but was attracted toward the poles of the circus tents, where the flags of all nations were flying. The bird sailed around for a few moments, and then, as if impelled by some special power, it darted toward the pole from which the Stars and Stripes were flying, and seated itself upon the pinnacle of the fly taff, there remaining fully half an hour, after which it winged its way to the mountains and was seen no

The Elmira Free Press tells a story of how a blind horse in a pasture lot was led to choice feeding ground and to water by a gander, who went before him giving signs by a constant cackle. A perfect understanding was had between them, and they seemed to know what each wanted. At night the gander accompanied the horse to the stall, sat under the trough, and the horse would occasionally bite off a mouthful of corn and drop it to the ground for his feathered friend, and thus they would share each other's meals. Finally, on one Sunday afternoon, the old horse died. The gander seemed utterly lost, wandered around disconsolately, looking everywhere for his old comrade, refusing food, and at the end of a week he, too, died.

The Sagacity of the Weasel.

anta Barbara Press. The remarkable sagacity of the weasel was well illustrated the other day by an incident which actually occurred in the suburbs of Santa Barbara. A gentleman's barn was infested with rats, and he was greatly annoyed by their depredations. They had been gradually disappearing, however, during the past few weeks. The gentleman finally discovered the cause of their disappearance in a very wide-awake weasel, which was engaged at the time in a vigorous combat with an unusually large sized rat. The latter proved too much for his adversary and finally chased his weaselship out of the barn. A few mornings later the gentleman again found the same animals engaged in a similar battle. The weasel at last ran away, as before, and the rat followed in hot pursuit. This time, however, the weasel ran through a hole it had burrowed in a pile of hardened compost. The hole was quite large at the entrance, but the outlet was scarcely large enough to admit the passage of the weasel's body. The weasel darted into the hole, with the rat at his heels. A moment later the weasel emerged from the other side, ran quickly around the compost pile, and again entered the hole, this time in the enemy's rear. The gentleman, interested in the proceedings, watched the place some time, and found that only the weasel came out. Digging into the compost, he found the rat quite dead and partly eaten. The weasel had arranged his trap so that the rat could tacked at a disadvantage and easily killed. Amende Honorable.

Proceedings of the Lime-Klin Club. Giveadam Jones had secured the floor and stated that he desired to render justice to an innocent man who had been dwelling under a cloud of suspicion for the past week. It had been hinted around that the Hon. Burdock Cantelope, acting as Janitor during the absence of Samuel Shin at Long Branch, had embezzled a large sum of money. His account, as handed to the secretary for approval read as follows :

qut oil..... lamp wick..... l eup......

It appears from the above that the Hon. Cantelope had used up $1,881 for which he could render no account, and the committee on finance were ordered to investigate and empowered to send for persons and papers. After a long wrestle with the mystery it was discovered that the janitor had added the year to his expense account and thus made himself a seeming embezzler. The investigation had cleared his character as white as bleached cotton at fifteen cents a yard, and the finance committee had given him a vote of confidence.

Another Relie of the War.

In Mr. Faulkner's field, eight miles from Richmond, Va., was a tall pine. During the storm on Wednesday evening, and while some hands were at work in the same field, lightning struck the tree and set it on fire. Faulkner sent his men to pick up the brush to keep the fire from reaching his fences. In less than haif an hour the men heard a terrific explosion in the tree, and with some fear they searched for the cause. They found that the tree had been shattered by a shell, and they picked up the pieces of the shell that had torn through the bushes near by. The shell lodged in the tree during the war, but no one knew it was there.
