CHAS. LAVERTY'S WATCH.

How It is Tracing the Valley Forge Murderer. Before Justice Corson at Norristown yesterday the first important hearing was had in the now celebrated Clugston murder case. John Spielmann, arrested in the city last Thursday as an accessory to the crime at Valley Forge, has been recommitted to prison as an accomplice, if not the principal, in the murder. Norristown has for months been placarded with offers of $1,000 reward for the apprehension of the murderer, but the only clue offered to work upon was the pictures of a common Melton cloth overcoat with a plaid lining, a Red Jacket revolver with which the murder was done, and a pawn ticket bearing the name of E. Abbott for a watch stolen from Chas. Laverty, then a ticket agent at Leaman place, Lancaster county, all of which articles were left by the midnight assassin in his flight from on his left side. the Clugston residence after the crime was committed. Edward Johnson was arrested as the nearest friend of Abbott, but evidence was wanting to show that he was anything more than what he claimed to be, merely an acquaintance of the man whom the pawn ticket implicated in the murder. But Johnson and the barkeeper, Nicholas Davidson, spoke of an-other friend of Abbott's, and last Thursday Spielmann was arrested. He is an insignificant looking mau, with thin sandy hair, a low forehead, receding chin, and very large, colorless eyes, which are restless and wild looking, as Guiteau's are. He is small in stature, proportionately slight, and possesses a self-assertive egot-

During the forenoon George Salabes, one of the managers of the Consolidated loan company of Baltimore, where the pawn ticket bearing Abbott's name was issued, arrived at Norristown and was and as he tries to please everybody, we taken to jail. He partly identified the do not doubt that if requested properly, prisoner as the smaller of the two men who he would purchase a few more. came to him early in March to pawn a silver watch which was subsequently found to have been stolen at Leaman Place. rived at the coal shutes on Monday after-When shown the coat left by the murderer of Mr. Clugston, Salades identified it pos itively as the coat worn by the man who pawned the watch. This raised Detective Miller's glee to the point of snapping his fingers in excitement and exclaiming: "Gentlemen, we have the Clugston mur

"He was merely a party to the burg lary. I do not think it probable that he was in the house when the other burglar, attacked by Mr. Clugston, shot his assail ant dead. "And you think, too, that the old convict, Forrester, had nothing to do with the "Lions never associate with lambs," said the detective, tersely, "and Spielmann is a mere boy whom Forrester would never speak to, much less admit him into his confidence.

Spielmann walked from the jail to the magistrate's office arm in arm with Mr. Miller. During the examination, if he wanted anything he asked the detective for it, and the latter always good naturedly who was taken before Chief Burgess complied. Spielmann was smoking complacently, and as he dropped into a chair behind the magistrate he asked for a light. The room was crowded and stifling. Justice Corson, sitting in his shirt sleeves, greeted the prisoner very cordially and turned from the magisterial desk to grasp the hand of the accused. District Attorney Wanger called for Cornelius W. Best, who was duly sworn. He was a plumber by trade, living at No. 824 Fitzwater street. Philadelphia, and had known the prisoner about a year ago, when Spielmann was employed at Hall's oyster saloon, No. 1150 South Eleventh street. He stayed only a week or two, and witness never knew him to have any other regular employment. On March 3, the day before the inauguration of President Garfield, Best met Spielmann in a cigar store at Eleventh and Ellsworth streets, and the ley Forge murderer on March 18, and he was quite certain that it was the same

'No," said the prisoner, throwing his eigar away; "I don't object. I will put with on any number of coats belonging to other men if you want me to."

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Its Meeting Yesterday-Nuisances Abated The stated meeting of the board of health was held in select council chamber on Tuesday afternoon. Messrs. Newton Lightner, Lewis Haldy, James H. Marshal, and Drs. M. L. Herr and C. H. Brown were present.

The number of nuisances complained of during the past two weeks was five, and in every case the usual notice requiring their removal was sent immediately upon their complaint being made.

Dr. Herr stated that complaint had been made to him of the condition of the alley southwest of St. Joseph's cemetery and running between St. Joseph and Poplar streets. There is no gutter nor other means of drainage, and the waste water and offal collects and forms an intolerable nuisance. The secretary was instructed to call the matter to the attention of the chairman of the street committee, with the view of having a gutter made.

The secretary stated that out of the forty-five physicians in the city, there were nine who had not yet complied with the act of assembly requiring them to register their name and place of residence and make a quarterly report of births to the secretary of the board of health. It was thought best to give these gentleman a little more time, and it was agreed that the secretary should call their attention to their failure to perform their duty in this regard, and should say if such report was not made before the next meeting they would render themselves liable to the penalty inflicted for the non-performance of their duties. Mr. Marshall reported many of the sewers about town to be in a foul condition complaint having been made by many citizens. The secretary was instructed to communicate with the street commissioner in regard to the matter and to suggest as an efficacious remedy the frequent flushing of the sewers from the nearest plug. Adjourned to meet on the third Tuesday in August.

BRADLAUGH.

Uncored by a London Crowd. London, Aug. 3.—An immense crowd assembled outside of the palace to-day and cheered Bradlaugh when he entered the yard on his way to Westminster Hall, sometime before the assembling of the House of Commons. On attempting to enter the House he was quietly removed by the police. Inside the House a debate arose concerning the case, during which Gladstone and other Liberals argued that Bradlaugh had no more right there than a stranger. Meanwhile Mr. Brad-laugh remained standing in the palace yard, with his arms folded, and three policemen in front of him, barring his way to the House, while those inside of the House could plainly hear the cheering of the crowd. After some time Bradlaugh evaded the police guard and endeavored to force an entrauce. He was then seized by messengers and dragged from the door, his coat being torn in the struggle. He was finally taken in charge by six policemen still resisting stienuously. After Mr. Broadhurst (Advanced Literal) and Mr. Cowen (Radical Reformer) had spoken in favor of Mr. Bradlaugh, Right Hon. John Bright described how Mr. Bradlaugh was brought down to the palace yard in a fainting condition. He thought such a scene was unprecedented. He appealed to the opposition to reconsider their former decision so as to extricate themselves from the present difficulties. He was called to order for irrelevancy. Lord John Manners Conservative, said that Mr. Bright's attitude was calculated to encourage Mr. Bradlaugh who had necessitated his foreible removal by attempting a forcible entry. An amendment to Mr. Labouchere's motion declaring that the House approve the conduct of the speaker and of the officials under his orders was accepted by Mr. Gladstone and Sir Stafford Northcete and was passed. A number of Liberal members quit the House before the vote was taken amidst ironical cheers. Mr. Bradlaugh after his expulsion went to Bow street for a summons against the police.

DEAD MAN'S HOLLOW.

Fearful Tragedy by a Gang of Burglars PITTSBURGH, August 3.—There is the greatest excitement in the neighborhood of McKeesport over the shooting of G. A. McClure by the robbers who had plundered his hardware store and whom he and the law officers followed into Dead Man's Hollow. It was Mr. McClure and one of the officers, and not two officers, as telegraphed to the eastern papers, who were shot down. On Sunday night the store was robbed of several hundred dollars worth of goods. Clues were found and followed to the hiding places of the plunder, and, the thieves apparently being cared away from the town, Mr. McClure, Constable Lynch and a man named Flemming went to recover the goods, supposed to be hidden in Dead Man's hollow, in almost impenetrable mass of woods a short distance below Ellrod's station, about three miles above McKeesport. The three had wandered around nearly all afternoon until about dark. Then Me-Clure was sitting at the foot of a large cedar tree resting, Flemming was not far away and Lynch was a little distance off, when suddenly there appeared before McClure seven men all armed: 'Here," exclaimed one of the robbers. is one of the blanks," and immediately the thieves commenced firing. A dozen or more shots were fired, one of them taking effect in McClure's forehead, killing him instantly. Flemming received a ball in his leg, not, however, being a serious wound. Flemming was not armed, and, of course, could not return the fire. Lynch had two revolvers but took to his heels immediately after the firing commenced. He claims that he fired five shots and thinks he hit one of the robbers, but Mr. Flemming don't think so. The utmost excitement prevails in the town, where Mr. McC. was a leading citizen, about 35 years of age, leaving a wife and three children. The desperadoes are all young men. Two or three of them 'wore light hats and vests. Mrs. McClure is almost crazy and frantic from grief. The murderers stole two loaded revolvers and the contents of a pocketboook from McClure's body and rifled all his pockets.
