The French Marriage Law. Some ten years ago Mile, d'Imecourt, one of the richest heiresses in France, eloped with M. Paul Musurus Bey, the son of the Turkish ambassador to London, and was married to him by civil ceremony in England, the young lady being at the time just sixteen, while her bridegroom, who is described as a fine looking and most attractive gentleman, was just thirty. Before the honeymoon was half concluded, the bride's mother, armed with the terrors of French law, had pounced upon the pair. She took forcible possession of the poor little wife of a fortnight, and shut her up in a convent. There the poor girl has remained ever since, all the efforts of her husband to obtain even a sight of her having proved unavailing. A few days the French courts pronounced the marriage null and void on account of the youth of the bride and the lack of her mother's consent. The reading of the poor child's letters at the trial (they were brought forward as evidence that she was not forced into the marriage, but entered into it with full consent and of her own free will) created a very lively impression, so filled were they with naive expressions of love for and confidence in her handsome wooer. Now, there was no reason on earth why Mile. d'Imecourt should not have been suffered to become Madame Musurus Bey in peace and quietness. The young man occupied a high position in the diplo matte service of his native land. He is not a Mussulman, but a member of the favorable commentary on the system of seclusion and espionage adopted with high-born young French ladies, that the chief accomplice in the clopement should have been a Hungarian attendant, a governess or confidential maid, in whom the Countess d'Imecourt repor dence, and to whose care she blindly-entrusted her daughter.

Yet with not even a plea of a mesalliance to back her opposition, the Countess d'Imecourt has succeeded in procuring the annulment of her daughter's marriage with land where divorce is considered immoral.

A marriage has already been arranged for her with a French duke, who is distant connection of her own. It is rather un-

What's in a Name. Post Boy Correspondence of the Cleveland This little station on the Cleveland & Marietta railroad, just three miles south of Newcomerstown, is located on the spot where a bloody murder was committed over a century ago, and, in fact, it derives its name from the occupation of the murdered victim, he being a "post boy" or mail carrier. The circumstances of this tragedy may be of some interest from the fact that the perpetrator of the crime was the first and only man who ever paid the death penalty within the limits of Tuscarawas county. William Cartwell, a young man about eighteen years old, carried the United States mail on horseback from Coshocton to West Chester, and traveled what is now known as the old Cadiz road On the 9th day of September, 1825, he was shot by a highwayman, who pillaged the mail bag and made his escape. A man named Johnson, who was hunting in the vicinity, heard the report of the rifle, and on repairing to the spot was horrified on dis-cevering the lifeless remains of young Cartwell lying by the road side. He raised the alarm and roused the whole neighborhood, which was soon laboring under the most intense excitement. In their mad frenzy the neighbors accused Johnson of the crime, and he was arrested and confined in the jail at New Philadelphia. Johnson protested his innocence, and told the sheriff that, as soon as he emerged from the wood soon after hearing the shot he caught a glimpse of the murderer as he made his escape, and he averred his ability to detect him in a crowd, be it ever so large. Accordingly the whole male population of the county was requested to report at the jail in New Philadelphia on a certain day, and there be examined by Johnson, in order, if possible, to detect the guilty party. About three hundred responded to the request on the appointed day, and by some strange infatuation the guilty man appeared among them, probably curious to know the result, little dreaming of the dauger. The men were arranged in two files, facing each other, and Johnson passed between the ranks, carefully scrutinizing every feature that met his gaze. All at once he stopped suddenly and seemed rooted to the spot. He fixed his eyes on a man named John Funston, and, in thunder tones, yelled out, "That's the man!" "You are a liar," was Funston's response, but all eyes were at once fixed on him and he soon showed unmistakable evidence of his guilt. He was tried and convicted, after which he made a full confession. He was sentenced to die and was hanged on December 30, 1825, as the following return of the sheriff's execution shows 1825, December 28, received this writ; and on the 30th day of December, A. D. 1825, between the hours of 12 o'clock, noon, and 2 o'clock p. m., I executed this writ by hanging the within named John Funston until he was dead. No fees charged. WALTER M. BLAKE, Sheriff.

The execution was public, and a crowd of curious people, to the number of 5,000, witnessed the hanging.

A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed, will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head it is unequalled. Because it acts on the LIVER, BOWELS and KIDNEYS at the same time. liccause it cleanses the system of the poison-ous humors that develop in Kidney and Uri-nary Diseases, Biliousness, Jaundice, Consti-pation, Pites, or in Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervous Disorders and Female Complaints.

SEE WHAT PEOPLE SAY: Eugene B. Stork, of Junction City, Kansas, says Kidney Wort cured him after regular Physicians had been trying for four years.

Mrs. John Arnall, of Washington, Ohio, says her boy was given up to die by four prominent physicians and that he was afterwards curred by Kidney Wort ment physicians and that he was afterwards cured by Kidney Wort. M. M. B. Goodwin, an editor in Chardon, Ohio, says he was not expected to live, being bloated beyond belief, but Kidney Wort cured him.

Anna L. Jarrett, of South Salem, N. Y., says that seven years suffering from kidney troubles and other complications was ended by the use of Kidney Wort.

John B. Lawrence, of Jackson, Tenn., 'suffered for years from liver and kidney troubles and after taking "barrels of other medicines," Kidney Wort made him well.

Michael Coto, of Montgomery Centre, Vt., suffered eight years with kidney difficulty and was unable to work. Kidney Wort made him "well as ever."
