SATURDAY EVENING, AUG. 13, 1881.

A LANCASTER BOY.

AFTER TILDEN'S LOST BRIDE.

Having Rejected Ninety-nine Suitors, the Falls in Love With a Lancaster Tender.

The following St. Louis dispatch to the Chicago Tribune relates to a young man well known in the social circles of this city and a son of John M. Amweg, late of this city and now of Philadelphia. It is evident that the young lady in question is either a goos or was personated by one of her servants:

The papers bring to light a scandal which involves the name of Nellie Hazeltine, the reigning belle of St. Louis, whose name a year ago was mentioned in connection with that of Samuel J. Tilden, it being reported that she was engaged to marry him. The best friend in the present case is John Amweg, a blonde, with a fair voice, fine eyes, and a good leg. He has held subsidiary positions in the Ford opera company for some time past, and this is probably the first time his name has appeared prominently in the newspapers.

It appears, according to his story, that three weeks ago a young lady of great beauty occupied a front seat at the Urag's Cava theatre and seemed only to take an interest in the proceedings as when he was on the stage. She looked at him fixedly and smilingly, he says, until at last his attention was drawn to her, and one evening she took the bouquet from her breast, kissed it, and by moving it about pinned his attention to it. Then with a smile she placed it under the seat upon which she was sitting, and he perceived that certain draped Amweg hastened to the place and secured the flowers, among which there was a note, and then asked a friend who the lady was. "Miss Nellie Hazeltine," was the reply. "And who is she?" "The belle of St. Louis," was the answer.

An interview was arranged, in the course of which, Amweg says, the lady told him she had received ninety-nine offers of marriage, one of them from an old man in New York worth $15,000,000; that he was a Democrat (meaning Tilden), and she was a Democrat, but that she could not marry where she did not love. He says she went on to tell him that he (Amweg) was the only one who had touched her heart.

Amweg said that he replied that he had not $5 in the world, and that he would just go and get it. She looked at him as if several notes, he alleges, passed between them, and two photographs, upon the back of one of which was written, "Yours until death or do part, Nellie." Naturally all this good fortune, real or alleged, was minutely inquired into by his friends, besides writing home to his mother that he was going to get married, and sending her one of the letters which he claims to have received. Of course the story spread, and his country night Miss Hazeltine and her mother, and left for the White Sulphur springs in Virginia, where they now are. At this point Amweg may be left for a little while and the attention of the reader concentrated on Miss Hazeltine's brother and Mr. Fred Paramore, who it is reported, "has a right to act in the premises." These two gentlemen heard the stories afloat, and concluded that the proper course to pursue was to punch Amweg's eye, and for this purpose that sweet singer was yesterday afternoon ledged up to the Pennsylvania office on the fourth floor of the building on the southeast corner of Fourth and Pine streets. Mr. Hazeltine had asked a Mr. Linn to be present as Amweg's friend to see fair play. As soon as the party gathered Mr. Hazeltine asked Amweg if he had any money to marry his sister. Mr. Amweg replied that that was his intention. Mr. Hazeltine then struck Amweg with his fist, which was returned, and the two parties caught each other by the hair and swung round and round, until Amweg, who was newly-fangled German, Mr. Paramore in the meantime produced a cowhide which he had bought for the occasion and was waiting for somebody's pants to get tight so that he could have a little of the pie himself, when he was called by the police, and he marked that one at a time was enough for Amweg. Of course Paramore resented this interference, and for a time there was a double shuffle, in which much hair, many collar buttons, and considerable temper were lost. When everybody was tired and the circus then all drew up and began to discuss the matter. "You know you must be mistaken," said Will Hazeltine; "you may be honest in what you believe, but my sister could never have written you any letters. But I've got the letters. Where are they?" "In my house." He was compelled to give Hazeltine a written order to search through his trunks, and that young gentleman soon returned, looking very much amused and bringing two letters and two photographs, all of which were promptly confiscated. The young lady's friends still declared that there was some mistake, that Amweg had been imposed upon by one of the Hazeltine servants, and he was asked to come out to the house and see if he could not identify the letters and girls there. On the way out Hazeltine asked him to describe the position of the furniture in the parlor if he had really been there, and he did this very correctly. At the house Hazeltine summoned one of the servants, a very pretty girl, and asked her to identify the letters. It was not the girl he had met. "No," he replied, "it was Miss Nellie Hazeltine that I met—she whose photograph you have there." No amount of questioning, no threats, could turn him from his story, and the idea was at last abandoned. The party broke up on the Hazeltine doorstep. All four of the gentlemen were pretty badly rumped up from the fuss, at Paramore's office, Amweg being especially beaten up about the head and face, so that he could not appear upon the stage last night. To-day he says he will begin two suits against Will Hazeltine and Fred Paramore, one for assault with intent to kill and the other for civil damages. The case is more than a cause celebre. Amweg belongs to a highly respectable Philadelphia family, and his father is a well-known lawyer there. His brother holds a very responsible position with the Pennsylvania railroad, being inspector of bridges on that line. For three years young Amweg has been on the stage, having first been connected with Frank Crockett, playing a minor part in Davy Crockett. Since then he has been singing in the chorus of Ford's opera company, and has been connected with the various Pinafore, Fatiniza, Boccaccio, Billee Taylor and Olivette productions. He is a tenor, and makes up well on the stage, having the foundation or framework for a good physique, which will fill in with time. His folks have long urged him to leave the mimic stage, and it has been against their wishes that he has continued the business.

Railroad Accident.
H. A. Brighton, a conductor on J. R. Bitter's private freight line on the Pennsylvania railroad, met with a severe accident last night near Downingtown. It appears that the train in which his cars were attached had parted, and that he was sitting on a keg in the cabin, when the part of the train that was separated came thundering against the other part. The concussion was so great that Mr. Brighton was thrown from his seat and out of the open door of the cabin, falling heavily upon one of the chairs of the railroad track. His shoulder blade is broken, and an ugly gash is cut in his head, but the skull does not appear to be injured. He was brought to this city and taken to his residence, 325 North Queen street, where he is doing as well as could be expected.

SLIGHT FIRE.

Three Gallant Women.

Early this morning flames were seen issuing from the third story front rooms of the old National Hotel property, 50 to 56 North Queen street, the third story rooms being now occupied as a residence by H. C. Markley and wife. An alarm was at once raised, and Harry Howell, Frank Howell and John C. Carter rushed up stairs, broke open the door and found the room in flames, a small gasoline stove having burst or exploded and set fire to a kitchen sink in which the water raised a steam which threw over the burning sink, the flames were extinguished, and the sink and its contents were carried down stairs, pretty badly burned.

It appears that Mrs. Markley was out of town, and Mr. Markley having occasion to heat some water, lit the gasoline stove, and the kettles upon it, and for a short time left the premises. During his absence the fire took place, and was happily discovered before much damage was done. The loss will not exceed $20, but had the fire reached the combustible materials in the garret, just above the room in which it originated, $20,000 would have hardly compensated for the loss that would have resulted.

POULTRY FAIR.

Arranging for the Annual Exhibition. The executive committee of the Lancaster Poultry association met at Litzitz last evening; present, H. H. Tisbury, J. B. Schlichty, W. A. Schoenberg, J. E. Long, Charles Lippold, Joseph R. Trisler and John E. Schum. They fixed January 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17 for holding the third grand annual exhibition of the association.

Messrs. Schoenberg and Lichty were appointed a sub-committee to select a hall for the exhibition. Secretary Lichty was instructed to communicate with several experts with a view of securing their services as judges of the poultry, pigeons and other exhibits, and to inform them that all exhibitors will be secured. The list of premiums will be the same as at the last exhibition. Messrs. Schum and Lippold were appointed to make such revision as may be deemed necessary in the pigeon list, and Mr. Lichty to revise the poultry list.

"Don't Want a Plaster."

said a sick man to a druggist, "can't you give me something to cure my back and joints? I have a lame back and disordered joints, and was a sure indication of kidney disease. The druggist told him to use Kidney-Wort and in a short time it effected a complete cure. Have you these symptoms? Get a box or bottle to-day—before you become incurable. A Good Angel's Visit—A Tale of "Rosalia."

Blanche called on Kate, one pleasant day, and found her sad and sighing, least friend, once bright and gay, now scarce could keep from crying. "Oh," she said, "I am so glad to see you with scrofula, my face is so badly marred!" Then said her friend, "Rosalia will your troubles end?" Blanche called on Kate another day and found her once more bright and gay, her face as radiant, skin as fair, as any maiden's anywhere. For skin diseases and impure blood, there's nothing in the world so good as Rosalia's, it drives away all skin disorders, humors, —cray, it tones up the system, cures your face and banishes all doctor's bills.
