Cream of the Jokes.

Avoid the right and get left. No room was ever made large enough to hold a fat man and a mosquito.

The true way for a woman to drive a nail is to aim the blow square at her thumb. Then she'll avoid hitting her thumb, anyway.

A laborer in Russia gets eight cents a day and "finds himself." Finds himself mighty hungry, pretty often, we should think.

Among the passengers who started for Europe recently, was Count Vitshunovskostadt. He probably rode on the steam of the steamer and towed his name along behind by a string.

The barber to his victim: "How will you have your hair parted, sir? On the side?"

Victim to his barber: "No, not on my side—on my head!"

Bret Hartie's first poetic "fragment" commenced in these words: "I sipped the nectar of her lips; I sipped and hoisted o'er her." And the last two lines were as follows: "Her father's hoof flashed on the scene. I'm wiser now, and sorrier."

Speaking of Mr. Forbes' lecture on "Kings I Have Met," a Western paper says that some day he will come across the kings and a pair of sevens, and then he will learn something about the really great resources of this country.

Teacher—"John, what are your boots made of?" Boy—"Of leather." "Where does the leather come from?" "From the hide of the ox." "What animal, then, does the snip look like?" "It gives you meat to eat?" "My father."

The editor who squashed a leucy cockroach with the butt end of a lead pencil and afterwards forgetfully sucked the same while wooing a coy expression, suddenly found a word; but it proved to be foreign to the subject under consideration.

The last piece of rustic laziness encountered by out-of-town correspondents is that of the man who, being asked what ailed his eye, answered, "Nothing; I shut it coz I can see well enough with one. Sometimes I shut one, and sometimes two."

A classical shoemaker having erected a sign with the following motto: "Meas concis recti," to the great discomfiture of a neighboring rival, the latter "went him one better," by displaying a sign ornamented with "Men's and Women's coconis recti."

A young man from the country saw steam fire engines working at a conflagration upon his visit to the city and asked his father, "What in the thunder makes 'em heat the water by steam to put fire out with?" Cold water's a darn sight better."

"Why, Mr. R.," said a tall youth to a little person, who was in company with a half-a-dozen large men, "I protest you are very small I did not see you before."

"Very likely," replied the little gentleman; "I am like a sixpence among six copper pennies—not easily perceived, but worth the whole of them."

The married daughter of a contractor comes to visit her father and on going out with him for a walk to the scene of his latest labors bursts out ecstatically:

"Oh, pa, what lovely houses those are that you have been building—those cottages along the bank of the river. I have an awfully great fancy for them. I bring the children here and spend the summer near you."

The contractor (deeply affected): "No, no, my child! Never! Not that I would not fain have you near me every day and have me dining those vittles you are built to live in—these built to sell!"

"I think I may be excused for a little show of pride in saying that I knew when to quit Wall street," he observed, as an elevated train carried them over that great thoroughfare.

"So you used to speculate, eh?"

"Yes, I was on the street for seven years."

"Made your pile, I suppose?"

"Yes, I made and lost money, the same as the rest. At one time I could draw my check for $93,000, and that is not so bad for a man who went into Wall street with only $10 in his pockets."

"And you knew when to quit?"

"Yes, sir."

"That was when—when?"

"That was when I had enough left to pay my fare to Elmira and hire a boy to carry my satchel up to my father-in-law's house," was the quiet reply.

In the Shadow of Death.

The President's Dolour Recurring to his Childhood.

President Garfield's mother is stopping with her niece at Hiram, four miles from Garrettsville, Ohio. She receives frequent messages from Washington, and spends much of her time at the foot of the mountain, anxiously watching for the messenger who brings the dispatches. She is bowed down with grief and sleeps but little, and that in short naps. She is much agitated by fears of the worst, yet clings tenaciously to hope.

It has been thought that transfusion of the blood of a healthy man into the veins of the president might possibly be resorted to as a means to restore his waning strength. It is not known whether or not the physicians deem it possible that such an extremely delicate operation could be performed without still further endangering the president's life, but a well known gentleman from New York lately arrived in Washington and volunteered himself as being ready and willing to submit to an operation by which blood from his system could be transferred to the president's body. He had a consultation with Dr. Reburn, who said that the matter as yet had not been considered by the physicians, but that should such a course be considered advisable his generous offer would be accepted. This gentleman is a fine, healthy person.

"Thomas, Cover Me Up."

It is said by an attendant at the White House that during a former night when "the general," as he is termed by the attaches, was wandering in his mind, he talked of many things concerning his boyhood days very incoherently at times, but with a pathos that was touching in the extreme. It is said that restlessness at night was always a characteristic of Garfield, as was wandering in his mind, while lying with his brother on their little cot in the contracted log cabin, he would kick off the covers, turn over and half awake, say: "Thomas, cover me up." Twenty-five years after he laid down on the battle field with a distinguished officer. These were only one blanket between them. His eyes were hardly closed, when, as of old, he kicked off the cover and turning over said, drowsily: "Thomas, cover me up." The officer covered Garfield up and in so doing awakened him and repeated the words, "Then the brave soldier, the strong man who had ridden through a rain of bullets unscathed, turned his face away and wept like a child, for he thought of his brother Thomas and the days in the little log cabin at home. The other night in his delirium he murmured as of yore: "Thomas, cover me up."

The Trust Fund.

A trust fund amounting to $125,000 in United States one per cent. bonds, for the benefit of the family of the president has been formed by the gentlemen who undertook the work of raising such a fund when the president was first wounded. The trust has been accepted by the United States trust company in such a form that neither the president nor Mrs. Garfield, nor both of them, can prevent the fulfillment of their trust. The interest on $125,000 of United States registered four per cent. bonds, at least, will be subject to Mrs. Garfield's order so long as she lives. If she refuses to draw the interest it will accumulate for her children, whose rights in the fund cannot be taken away from them by any power on earth.

Columbia's Military in Camp.

Correspondence of the INTELLIGENCER.

HEADQUARTERS CO. C., 4th REG'T., N. G. P., FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 1881.

As the above company in the only military organization in Lancaster county, I will give you a minute account of the company's trip, the location, &c. We left Columbia at 8:30 p. m. on Monday. At Wrightsville we took on board our train Co. I, 8 Reg't., and at York Co. A, 8 Reg't. The scenery between York and Harrisburg is very grand, especially where the railroad runs near the river, and heads were poked out of the car windows to see the sight. We arrived at Harrisburg at 10:45 the same evening, and there we laid over until 5 o'clock on Tuesday morning. Most of the men ran about restlessly looking for something to eat (and drink) till nearly train time. The ever variegated scenes between this place and Wilkesbarre are simply grand. High and low mountains in every shape greeted our wondering eyes in every direction; the river in some places is hardly as wide as our canal and is very low. We laid at last reached Wilkesbarre at 10:30 Tuesday morning and from there we marched to our camp, a distance of about a mile. The situation is very poor and great dissatisfaction is expressed by members, not only by our company but others. The ground is very hilly; tents are pitched in the sun; the water is warm and muddy; rations of the poorest kind; and to put it in its own light a worse place could not have been selected. The duty and discipline are very strict and severe, and those who came along to have a good time are greatly disappointed. To show you what our duties are I copy the following:

Routine of Camp Duty—Lievellie (one can), 6 a. m.; company drill, call, 6:15 a. m.; company drill, call, 7:15 a. m.; breakfast, 7:30 a. m.; police call, 8 a. m.; surgeon's call, 8:15 a. m.; brigade guard mounting, 9 a. m.; battalion drill, call, 10 a. m.; battalion drill, call, 11:30; dinner, 12:30 p. m.; brigade drill, 2:30 p. m.; dress parade, 6:30 p. m.; supper, 7:30 p. m.; treat (one gun), sundown; tattoo, 9:20 p. m.; taps, when all lights must be extinguished and silence reign throughout the camp, 9:45 p. m.

From this you can perceive that we have very little time to ourselves. Parents are very hard to get, and when you are lucky enough to get one, it is only for a few hours. Our men go to town whenever they want to, but always without permission. Quite a number of our men have been sick, especially Mr. D. Mowery, who has been attended by our regimental surgeon ever since we reached camp. The following regiments have been inspected: Nineteenth and Twelfth regiments on Friday; to-morrow the Fourth regiment and Battery A will be inspected. On Monday we break camp.

The officers of our regiment are handsome and thoroughly understand their business.

Mr. Albert Roberts, of our company, has been appointed deputy adjutant of the Fourth regiment. We have to call him Major Roberts now instead of "Raleigh."

While trying to steal through the night guards, J. H. Henry, of the Lancaster Regiment, was caught and placed in the guard-house. The next morning he had to pick stones as his punishment.

Company C made the best record at target practice on Thursday. Out of sixteen shots we made an average of one.

Large iron pipes are laid from the city to camp to supply us with water.

A brigade party is sent to the city every night, and it never comes back empty-handed.

We receive papers every morning and evening.

On Wednesday we called on the editor of the Washington Herald, very busy and the only daily Democratic paper in Luzerne county. We find him to be a highly cultured and pleasant gentleman, and return our thanks for the kind manner in which he treated us.

Visitors to the camp are few and far between. The crowds are not one-tenth as large as those that visited us at our camp at Fairmount park last year.

The Allentown rifles have tendered our company a reception at Allentown on our return from camp. Most likely it will be accepted. We hope so.

If a soldier wishes to go to the city he has to walk, as there are no hacks running on Tuesday evening.

Oh, how hot it is when we go to bed at night! but good gracious, how cold it is when we get up in the morning at five o'clock!

No drunken soldiers have as yet been arrested.

Every morning we receive gratuitously a large piece of ice.

Huckster wagons are not allowed in camp, as all necessities can be provided at the sutler's tent.

General Sigfield made his appearance on the field at dress-parade last evening for the first time. J. D. S.

Lower End News.

Notes From Colerain Township.

The funeral service of the late John A. Alexander was held in Union church, Colerain, on Tuesday the 23d inst. Mr. Alexander had been a ruling member in church for fifteen years, having been elected to the office at the age of 24 years, a remarkably early age to be called to so responsible a position. The funeral was attended by an immense assembly of people. The services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Calvin W. Stewart, pastor of the deceased, assisted by Revs. Samuel Dickey, and Orr Lawson, of Oxford, and Rev. J. N. Rendall, of Lincoln university. The services were impressive, and the sad and tearful assembly indicated that the church and community fully realized the great loss they had sustained in the death of Mr. Alexander.

At a recent congregational meeting of the Union Presbyterian church elected four additional elders, viz. James S. Patterson, Washington D. Paxson, Francis N. Scott and Robert A. Morrison. The ordination and installation of these elders elect will take place in Union church on September 4th.

The Union high school, under its veteran principal, James W. Andrews, A. M., was opened Monday, the 23d inst., with its usual complement of pupils.

Potato raising and tobacco cutting is the order of the day in Colerain. Both crops will average fair.

Crime and Calamity.

Accident, Romance, Suicide and Disaster.

Thunder and hail storms occurred in several districts in the cantons of Berne, Freyburg, Vaud and Savoy, Switzerland. Many buildings were destroyed by lightning and vineyards were much damaged.

The electric light gearing, weighing six hundred pounds, fell from near the top of a one hundred and fifty feet pole in Union Square, New York, killing two of the workmen engaged in hoisting it and injuring three others. The cause was breaking off of the top of the pole.

In Jersey City there is an energetic State Inspector of Milk. He went to a railroad depot for skimmed milk which was to be sold as sweet milk. He found eight thousand quarts, and after turning it into the gutter he arrested six of the milkmen.

Ten Persons Poisoned.

News has reached Dallas, Tex., that Mrs. Smith, a widow, living near Kaufman, several members of her family and some tenants—ten persons in all—were poisoned on Friday by eating cooked peaches containing arsenic. Medical assistance was summoned, but at last accounts there was little hope of the recovery of any of the persons poisoned.

A Kentucky Story.

The wife of a municipal officer died at Henderson, Ky., and her husband left the most of her property to two of her friends. After the coffin had been partly fastened he could not resist taking one more look. He discovered that the jewelry which he intended to be buried on her was gone. That was two years ago. He said nothing, but lately detected one of the friends wearing the articles. He said to her: "I give you three days to leave town," and she went.

Dead in a Hospital.

The body of an old man named John Sheridan was discovered in a hoghead of rainwater located at the repair shops of the Pennsylvania coal company, at Pittston, where Sheridan had been employed for a long time past. He is about 65 years old and had been in the hospital for some time. He had been in the hospital for some time, and he had been in the hospital for some time.
