Lancaster Intelligencer. MONDAY [EVENING, SEPT. 5, 1881. MASSACRED BY INDIANS.

GENERAL CARR AND COMMAND SLAIN Slaughtered by Savages in Southern Ari zona—Seven Officers and Sixty-four Men Killen.

A dispatch to the Chicago Times from Tueson, Arizona, confirms the report of the massacre of two companies of cavalry under General Carr, by Apaches, near Camp Thomas. Lieutenant Cruse was shot by a "medicine man" whom he was trying to arrest, whereupon the troops opened fire and killed the "medicine man." The massacre then began, the In-The massacre then began, the Indian scouts firing on the white troops, and nearly every white was killed. Three companies of cavalry and a company of scouts under Overton are on their way as reinforcements. No courier has yet come through, and all are supposed to have been killed. The Star has advices from Fort Grant to the nation and the State. the following effect : Three couriers have now come into Camp Thomas all bringing the same news that General Carr and his command had all been massacred by the White Mountain Indians, thirty-five miles from Camp Apache. There were 110 men and 7 officers killed. The officers must be General Carr, Captain Henley, Lieutenants Carter, Gordon, Stanton and Ornes, and Dr. McCrcery. The White Mountain Indian reservation is located 160 miles north of Wilcox, near the New Mexican line. The tribe mumbers about 1,500 in all. They can muse w 400 warriors. This is the only tribe of Apaches which have not been whipped into subjection. They were moved in 1876 into the San Carlos reservation, but were recalled and returned to their old hunting grounds, where they have been ever since.

A dispatch from General McDowell's headquarters at Presidio, says : "A dispatch from General Wilcox, re ceived last night, says that he has received news by an Indian 1 anner that Carr's command, including himself, six other officers and sixty four enlisted men were killed on the 31st inst., and that Pedro's men had killed seven or eight men, including an expressman, between Fort Apache and Camp Thomas."

A dispatch received from General Wil-cox says that he has received news that a few of General Carr's command escaped at Cubic creek, which is forty miles west of Fort Apache. Those who eccaped are fighting their way to Fort Apache, but their success is doubtful. Pedro's band attacked Fort Apache, but the commander of the department thinks that he must have been repulsed, and that he now holds

The White Mountain Apa ches are the only Indians known to have been concerned in this outbreak. They number about four hundred braves, but others may have been drawn into their service. If these reports are confirmed, this will be a serious affair for the territory as well as for the military forces. General Eugene A. Carr.

Eugene A. Carr was one of the most experienced Indian fighters on the frontier at the present time. He was born in Eric county, New York, March 20, 1830, and entered the military academy in 1846, being graduated four years afterwards-nine-teenth in a class of fifty-four. He served as tutor at the military school at Carlisle, Pa , during part of 1850 and 1851, being commissioned second licutenant in the mounted rifles on June 30, 1851. In 1852 he had his first experience of frontier life in New Mexico, Texas and the far West, winning his commission as a first lieutenant in the first cavalry on March 3, 1855, for conspicuous bravery and good judgment in a skirmish with the Lipian

Indians near Limpia, Texas, on October 10, 1854, where he was severely wounded. He took part in the Sioux expedition in 1855 and in quelling the disturbances in Kansas in 1856, serving as aid-de-camp to Gov. Robert J. Walker, of that state, from May 1 to December 22, 1857. He accompanied Sumner in the Utah expedition in 4858, and was ergaged in several skirmishes in the Kiowa and Comanche expeditions in 1860. He was made a captain in the First Cavalry, June 1, 1858, and was transferred to the Fourth Cavalry, August 3, 1861. For gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Wilson's Creek, Mo., during the late war, he was breveted a lieutenant colonel August 10, 1861, and five days later he was appointed colonel of the Third Illinois volunteer cavalry. He was thrice wounded at the battle of Pea Ridge, March 7, 8, 1862. He was made a brigadier general of volunteers March 7, 1862, and a major in the Fifth cavalry July 17 of the same year. Until the capture of Vicksburg he served in the Southwest and was brevetted a colonel for gallant and meritorious services in the action of the Black River Ridge, Miss., May 17, 1863. In March, 1865, he was made a brevet major general of volunteers, having commanded the left wing of the Sixteenth army corps during 1863-4, and having taken part in the principal actions in Ar-kansas and against Mobile. On March 13, of the same year, he was brevetted a brig adier general in the regular army for his services at the capture of Little Rock and gallant and meritorious services in the field during the war. In 1867 and '68 he was on special duty in Washington, after which he was he was once more transferred to the frontier as major in the Fifth Cavalry. He took part in the campaigns against the Cheyennes and Sioux, and was in the Big Horn and Yellowstone expeditions after the Custer massacre. He acted as licutenant colonel of the Fifth Cavalry in the railway riots at Omaha during 1877 and was commissioned colonel and transferred to the command of the Sixth Cavalry, April 29, 1879.

Prayer for Restoration.

Governor Hoyt's Proposition and Secretary Blame's Answer. The following telegraphic correspond-ence is furnished by the state department:

his trouble. Mr. Stevens said that a good many physicians had been consulted, who said that nothing could be done, and asked the doctor if he could do anything to relieve him. He replied that he could, and after about five weeks' treatment the boy was able to walk about. As soon as Mr. Stevens saw him out without crutches he was delighted and expressed his thanks and gratitude to the doctor. He wished to know what the charge was and when the physician replied that it was a matter of benevolence on all sides and there was no charge he insisted upon giving him a very handsome fee, saying at the same time : "Now, doctor, if you come across any poor boy that is deformed or disabled in his limbs in any manner take him in hand and relieve him and I will pay you liberally for it." His generosity, quick sympathy and even tenderness in all the relations of private life were as marked as were his severity, bitterness and love of conflict in the field of politics. Personal enemies, except those who hated the man because of his opinions, he was almost without ; political enemies-and these were generally the foes of human freedom as well-he never forgave. He valued money lightly, and if he had it, always either lent or gave it to those who asked. After his death there were found in an upper room of his house due bills, notes of hand and other papers of the sort, showing that he had lent during his life thousands of dollars-some say more than two hundred thousand dollars-that had never been repaid. These papers dated back to the time when he was a poor young lawyer in Gettysburg, and they were given for small sums, such as five, ten, fifteen or twenty dollars, From this they ran up later into the hundreds and thousands. An amusing story is told of his lending. Some years ago there were in Lancaster two brothers, "Pennsylvania Dutch" lawyers, who were equally bankrupt in purse and business reputation, neither of them ever paying a debt if he could avoid it. One day one of them came to Mr. Stevens to berrow money. After he had stated his case, Mr. Stevens said : "That is all very well, Mr. B--, but what security have you? I cannot lend you any money without sea major general in the regular army for curity." "Segurity ?" was the reply. "Mein Gott! If you vants segurity, I brings mein bruder." "Ah," said Mr. Stevens, "that will do, that is ample, excellent security !" and handed the Dutchman the money. Of course he never saw it again. The way in which he chanced to get the faithful housekeeper whose excellent care aud nursing during his old age is believed to have prolonged his life well illustrates his dislike for disputes and difficulties in private life. When he first set up his bachelor establishment in Laneaster he was much annoyed by bad attendance. He would install a woman as housekeeper, furnish her with all that was necessary to good housekeeping and supply her liberally with money for running expenses.

Soon the woman would gather around her a crowd of hangers-on who would live on her employer. The table furniture, forks, spoons, napkins, etc., would begin to dis-appear. Neglect would be the rule by day and carousing the order of the night. Instead of dismissing the faithless servants Mr. Stevens would simply go to a hotel near by, kept by a friend of his, and take his meals, and by ceasing to furnish her with money would succeed in starving her and her followers out. This process
