NOTES AND NEWS.

FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD.

INCIDENTS AND ACCIDENTS—HAPPENINGS AND COMMENTS.

Fresh Cleanings in the Fields of Current News.
By a premature explosion of a blast in the Forest of Dean mines, near Newburgh, N. Y., Mike Reilly was instantly killed, and a comrade's eyes were nearly destroyed.

Fresh shocks of earthquake have occurred at various points in the Neapolitan province. Few persons have been killed but many were injured, and serious damage has been done.

Joshua Peyton, aged 75 years, a farmer of Norfolk county, Va., cut his throat with a razor and died almost instantly. Financial troubles are said to have been the cause of the act.

Fires are still raging in the woods north of Nepesin, Ont., and several families have been rendered homeless. The thirteen-year-old son of Lester Clark, township of Kennebec, was burned to death while on the way to visit neighbors.

A tragedy similar to the murder of Mr. Gold in the Brighton railway express train in June has occurred on a train from Paris to Turin. A man entered a first-class carriage occupied by a gentleman who was alone, and after wounding him seriously threw him out of the carriage window.

From a card found in his trunk the victim is believed to have been Schneck, the German consul at Leghorn.

In Saffield, Conn., Mrs. P. Allen and Mrs. S. Wright were sitting in the house of the former chatting, when Mrs. Wright thought the leg of her chair was moving. She looked down and saw an object that made her tremble and turn pale. A spotted snake was crawling up her chair.

The two women were almost paralyzed with fear. They called for help, and a gentleman who was near by came in and killed the snake. It was a spotted adder about two feet long.

In Providence, Helen F. Argus, eight years of age, attempted to rescue a younger child from the wheels of an ice cart. She succeeded in doing so, but lost her own life, falling under the wheels, which crushed her head.

A Terwilliger saw, weighing about 3 tons, which was being hoisted by the manufacturers into the building 61 Broadway, New York, fell from the tackle when on a level with the third story.

The safe was broken to pieces and the sides of the safe broken in. Several passers-by narrowly escaped injury.

The New Orleans lightning passenger train No. 2, coming north, was wrecked at Snorra, sixty miles south of Louisville, on the main line of the Chesapeake and Ohio R.R. The locomotive jumped the track at a switch which had been maliciously misplaced by persons not yet detected.

The baggage car, two coaches and two Pullman sleepers piled up on the locomotive. John Stadle, the engineer, was instantly killed, and Oscar Lilly, fireman, was mortally wounded.

The regular north freight train over the Valley railroad was thrown from the track while approaching West River bridge, one mile above the Bridgeport depot.

Thirteen cattle, some of them falling a distance of fifty feet, three brakemen jumped from the train, one of whom, named David Topfisch, of Windsor, was killed, and another named Savory, was probably fatally injured.

Several persons were injured by How's scales, sunk in the river; others are floating, together with a quantity of valuable merchandise. The West River bridge is badly demolished. The loss will be heavy.

The Agile Boy Preacher.
A Chicago paper, speaking of the evangelistic efforts of the Rev. Mr. Harrison, otherwise known as "The Boy Preacher," says that "he did actually on Friday night jump up three feet and light on top of the narrow altar rail, where he hung like a rooster, and shouted, 'Glory to God, until he lost his breath.'"

A New York clergyman, who was present at several of his meetings, says that Brother Harrison was incessantly telling the Lord and the people that the audience was spellbound with divine power, "and little did he know what was appearing outside of the shouting, nervous little evangelist, who for a peculiar whoop and clapping of hands and dramatic action is ahead of anything ever seen upon this earth."

Another observer says: "His peripatetic exercises bear the same resemblance to our parkies as he is all over the pulpit platform, and down into the aisles of the church, and back again as quick as a flash." These peculiarities insure Brother Harrison a large audience wherever he goes.

When making his rounds, he is worth the hundred dollars a week which he charges for his evangelistic labors.

Battle With a Dog.
The other night Joseph Eich, a powerful man, of New Germantown, N. J., was walking along a country road in the home when a mad dog which lay in a ditch sprang at his throat. Eich carried his coat over his shoulder, and by a fortunate move of his arm and the coat ward off the dog's attack and kicked him into the ditch.

made to explore the workings by the district superintendent and his assistants. Large bodies of sulphur have been encountered and in such quantities that it is dangerous to venture into the workings very far. As soon as the air currents can be started it is believed the existence of fire can be speedily determined.

Fortunately Saturday had been set apart for the repair of the engine boilers and the night men worked double shifts so that the repairs could be made, otherwise several lives would have been lost.

The Virginia Campaign.
The following letter, alleged to have been written by Frank A. Blair, Mahone's candidate for attorney general, to W. L. Wilson, is made public.

You ask me what I think of the chances of success in the coming election. If we can carry the negro votes with us we will be all right, but they are up in politics any further than you can with your pocket-book after you are out of sight.

It would be better for Virginia, if we could get rid of such a class, but as long as we can use them in voting all I well, I was never in favor of the clause in the constitution which let them in as citizens, but since things have turned out as they now are, we must do what we can to control the negro in the election. Try to hold on to them by telling them that the administration at Washington wishes them to vote with the Readjusters.

Now, my friend, don't be uneasy about the Republican ticket. They will have votes enough without Virginia. Let the Democracy go to hell and carry Hancock with them. All we want is to carry our ticket. Then we will be masters of the ground. Work night and day. Watch the negro, for he is very tricky.

The man who, during the memorable campaign in Virginia in 1880, wrote a letter intimating that readjustment would be a good thing to apply to the national debt, Blair's friends deny the genuineness of the letter.

Labor Riot in New Orleans.
The labor war in New Orleans continued in a foolishly, when James Hawkins (colored), a member of the Cotton Teamsters' association, was shot and instantly killed by Police Sergeant Reynolds. The cause which led to the shooting was the attempted arrest of Hawkins, when a general fight ensued, during which Reynolds was injured.

One struck Hawkins in the thigh, passed through and hit a white man named Pat Connelly who lay in the street. The second shot struck Hawkins in the forehead, and he fell dead. Intense excitement was created and matters assumed a serious aspect.

Fire alarm bells were rung which summoned the police force. Several arrests were made for interfering with teamsters. A boat of cotton which had been left by the drivers was set on fire. The mayor has ordered the chief of police to close all places where liquor is sold in the vicinity of the troubles, and to arrest any parties failing to comply with the order.

Indian Affairs.
At Fort Yates much excitement was caused when Sitting Bull was informed that he must go to Fort Randall. He protested against the removal, and proposed to hold a council with the commanding officer.

The basin refused the basin and swore he would never go to Fort Randall alive. He said that he wished to die as Crazy Horse did in battle. He was overpowered by the military, bound hand and foot, and carried to the Indians, under guard.

Sitting Bull showed some little signs of insubordination, but the military stood firm, and when the chief had been taken aboard the vessel in irons the remainder of the Indians quietly followed.

Brave Brierly has been captured and returned to his home. He is the Indian who murdered a family of nine persons near Pembino in 1868.

He was arrested and escaped from the military at Fort Lincoln, and was afterwards recaptured and indicted in the Circuit Court at Fargo, by a question of jurisdiction being raised, he was turned over to the Pembino county courts for trial.

He was assisted to escape from the jail at Pembino by a half breed and a Freechman. He returned to the Missouri river and settled near Fargo, for about twenty years ago, and made his way with his horse to Sitting Bull's camp.

The Old Fellows' lodge at Fort Sully offered a reward of $300 for his arrest. A reward was also offered by the civil authorities. He succeeded in making his way, but eventually made up his mind to take to the woods when he learned of the order for removal to Fort Randall.

He says that Interpreter Allison, in the employ of the military, aided him to escape from the hostile camp, put him across the river in a canoe and gave him a revolver and ammunition and a knife.

Not So Well Yesterday.
Secretary Blaine sent the following at 10:30 last night to Lowell, minister, London: "The president had an increase of fever last night and was restless until 5 o'clock a. m. During the day he has been somewhat better, but his pulse is temperate and his respiration has been lighter for the entire twenty-four hours than at any preceding day since he reached Long Branch. His other symptoms are not reassuring and his general condition gives rise to anxiety."

At the evening dressing quite a large slough of connective tissue was removed from the region of the parotid. It continues to take a sufficient quantity of nourishment and enjoys it.

At the noon examination the temperature was 100.6, pulse 110, respiration 20. At the evening dressing the temperature was 100.6, pulse 110, respiration 20. Dr. Agnew says the president's high temperature does not indicate anything serious. That it is merely a temporary fluctuation and not the result of malarious infection.

Guinea Shot At.
Sergeant Mason, battery B, Second Artillery, when relieving the guard at it yesterday afternoon, shot at Guinea through the window of his cell and came near killing him. The ball grazed his neck and was imbedded in the cell wall. Mason was promptly arrested and taken to the arsenal and incarcerated.

The Bullet.
A San reporter had the following conversation with Dr. Frank H. Hamilton: "As there has been some uncertainty, doctor, as to the exact location of the bullet in the president's body, I would like to ask you where, in your judgment, it is?"

position slightly, but, if so, the change is not great." "Is there any danger of the ragged edge of the bullet cutting the artery and producing death from internal hemorrhage?" "I do not know that the bullet is ragged, but, if it is, there is so much muscular tissue between it and the artery, and there is so much evidence that it has become encysted in its present position, causing not the slightest amount of irritation or disturbance, that I think we have no danger to apprehend from that source."

For a time the president could not hear well with the right ear, which was affected by the trouble with the parotid gland. Now, Dr. Bliss says, his hearing is coming back, and it is certain not to be permanently impaired.

Another cause of much inconvenience has been a boil on the president's back, under the shoulder blade. It caused him great discomfort, and sometimes it was opened. It has now discharged itself and is causing no further trouble.

Saturday the president got hold of a newspaper and read it awhile. He is in a most feeble condition, without any reserve of strength to combat new complications should they occur. He is emaciated in the extreme. The leg above the knee joint can be spanned by the hand, and the fingers seem to be glued to the wrist.

A BEAUTIFUL MANIAC.
Separated From Her Lover by Religion a Freely Jealous Becomes Crazy.

On the bare floor in a corner of a room in the Castle Garden hospital, is the prostrate form of Nannehen Freudenberg, a girl nineteen years old and of singular beauty. She has perfect features, rosy cheeks, large blue eyes, a wealth of dark hair, and a very pretty teeth. She is a raving maniac and wears a straight-jacket. The girl came from Berlin by the steamship Neckar.

But little can be learned of her history. The surgeon of the Neckar says he was informed when she was placed on board that about a year ago the girl showed signs of insanity, the combined effects of religious excitement and an affair of the heart. She is an Israelite and it is intimated that her parents prevented her from marrying the man of her choice because her faith was different from theirs.

It was thought that she had recovered from her mental disorder, but, as she brooded over her disappointment, her friends resolved to try the effects of a change of scene. The day after the steamship left Bremen Miss Freudenberg began to act strangely, and on the voyage she had to be carefully watched. She talked constantly about religious matters and her lover. Several times she threw her arms about some of the male passengers and addressed them as the man from whom she had been separated.

Her youth, beauty and distress won the warmest sympathy of every one on the Neckar, and she was tenderly cared for. No amount of persuasion could induce her to take food and liquid nourishment was forced down her throat. The steamship's surgeon took her to Castle Garden and made Dr. Chapman acquainted with the case. She was put in the rooms where she is now confined and during the night became very violent.

She destroyed her bed and chairs, and it was found necessary to remove everything in the room to prevent her from inflicting self-injury.

Since the jacket has been resorted to she has lain on her back in the corner of the room incessantly, and she rolls her eyes incessantly while she utters sounds with her maniacal shrieks. It is impossible to get a coherent answer from her to any question. When offered breakfast she turned away from the food with her face to the door and then she struck violently against his efforts. After a violent paroxysm she was quiet for a while, turning her face toward the wall, while the tears ran like rain down her cheeks. She has a ticket for Baltimore, but is not known that she has friends there or elsewhere in this country.

The Castle Garden authorities will send her to the asylum for the insane.

BRIDAL PAIR IN PANTALOONS.
How a Romantic Hoosier Girl Got Along Without Petticoats.

The northern part of Richmond county, Ind., and the southern part of Randolph is in a fever of excitement over the elopement of a pretty school girl of thirteen with her father's hired hand, and the pursuit and capture of the young Juliet. Her name is Hattie and she is the daughter of a well-fixed farmer, who owns a farm on the other side of the county line.

She had been making the hay on the place for a long time, and at last determined to run away and get married and return home and ask forgiveness and a corner of the old homestead place. She was large and well-developed for one of her age, and after chopping her long silken tresses and putting on her brother's Sunday pants and cut-away she made a good-looking boy. Her best dress and summer hat were packed in a carpet-sack, and an hour before daylight the rural Romeo drove up under her window with the family chaise, and they were soon stowed away in it with her carpet-sack.

They drove rapidly over to Harrisville, a way station on the C. C. & I. road, and were standing on the platform, waiting for the morning accommodation to come along and bear them away, when a freight train drew up and the old gentleman jumped off and began manning the young fellow with his fists. He stood it for a minute and seeing that his picnic was over he braced himself and gave his employer a good thrashing.

The old man had then detected his daughter in the round-sloped, fair-skinned boy that stood and witnessed the engagement, and she might still have eluded him if she had tried; but when he began to cry for his child and upbraided the fellow for having taken her from him, she ran to him and asked to be taken home. When they got on the cars he drove all the passengers out and made her change her apparel. He went home swearing that if that fellow ever came around his premises again he would shoot him.

It Seems Impossible.
That a remedy made of such common, simple plants as Hops, Buchu, Mandrake, Danielsson, Scum, Juniper, and other such marvelous and wonderful cures as Hop Bitters do, but which do cure, rich and poor, Pastors and Doctors, local and foreign, and have been cured by them, you must believe that you are not deceived, and do not doubt the opinion of other columns.

She Passed it Along.
"I send you my testimonial in reference to my cure of my chronic Catarrh of the Bladder and receiving almost immediate relief. I passed it to my neighbor, who is using it with some results."—MRS. J. W. LEFFELT.
Fifteen cents. For sale at H. H. Cochrans' drug store, 137 North Queen street, Lancaster.

Incredible.
W. A. Scratch, druggist, Nashville, Ont., writes: "I have the greatest confidence in your Burdock Blood Bitters. In one case with which you personally acquainted, their cure was almost incredible. One lady told me that half a bottle did her more good than hundreds of doctors' words of medicine she had previously taken." Price $1. For sale at H. H. Cochrans' drug store, 137 North Queen street, Lancaster.
