Dun & Co.'s statement, showing the condition of trade at the end of the last week in September, says it is expected that the remainder of the fall season will be characterized by great activity. In the dry goodstrade there has not been so much common alley (right described in No. 239), and extending in depth 140 feet, more or less, to the aforesaid 10 feet wide common alley. The improvements are a two-story brick house, with basement kitchen and large frame stable; for their second purchases, but a grant least two stables are a two-story brick house, with basement kitchen and large frame stable; off in all the different lines. Still a fair have not come into the market yet good healthy crop is anticipated for the balance of the season. There is a great difference of opinion as to the cotton crop. An eminent authority just from the South estimates a ficiency of one million bales for the present season, with a good many contingencies to pass through, the princi pal of which is a fear that rains and humidity of the atmosphere may cause a large part of the late crop to be stained and grade low in consequence.

BASEBABLISTS IN CONVENTION. Black Listing a Lot of Crooked Players. SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 30.—The National League of professional baseball clubs concluded its special meet ing here to-day. The league has for a number of years been considering the plan of black listing certain players against whom the charges of general dissipation and insubordination have been repeatedly made, and the talk to-day resolved itself into this action. It was decided that a list of such players should be presented whenever there was any cause for doing and that no league club should play against any club employing as manager, umpire or player, any such proscribed players. A list of nine excluded players was adopted, and the list will be extended at the next meeting in Decem-

AQUATIC SPORT. The Yacht Races at Sandy Hook, SANDY, HOOK, Sept. 30 .- The third of the series of races between the Scotch cutter Madge and the sloop of the Seawanhaka yacht wlub started over the usual course. The opponent of the Scotch boat is the Schemer. A light breeze from the southeast was blowing when the boats started, a few minutes after 11 o'clock. The chances to day seem to favor the Schemer, as she is sailing beautifully. The light wind is also supposed to be favorable to her. The Schemer rounded Spit Buoy at 1:16 p. m. and the Madge at 1:19 p. m. The Schemer passed the buoy 51 at 1:321; the Marige at 1:411.

something About the Father of the President's Wife.

Midshipman William M. Herndon, than whom no better or braver sailor or truer gentleman ever strode the quarter-deck of a man-of-war. Having reached the grade at which naval officers were permitted to marry, Midshipman Herndon selected for his bride the beautiful and accomplished sister of his relative, Matthew F. Maury, then a student in the navy. There was a very happy and gay marriage scene, which enlivened the old town of Fredericksburg, and drew a large crowd around old St. George's church, when the around old St. George's church, when the young midshipman led to the altar the lovely blonde, whose hand and heart had been sought by so many of the young cavaliers of the ancient burg. Alas! brief was the honeymoon of the young couple, A few days after the marriage a most unexpected order came from the naval department to the bridegroom to report for duty, to fill a vacancy created by the death or resignation of some other officer, on board a ship of war which was about to sail on a long cruise in the China and Indian seas. Duty and honor always paramount with W. M. Herndon, thus tore him from the arms of his young bride. His cruise extended beyond two years, and was ever of great hardship and peril. At last he was relieved, and hurrying to the old home of himself and wife, words cannot do justice to the scene of joyfulness and happiness, when he encircled in his arms his charming bride; no, not his bride, but his wife and the mother of the maternal descent, will, for the next few years, share with their father the cares and honors of the highest office in the republic. Commodore Herndon met a heroic death on the 8th of September, 1857, when he went over with his ship to Central America after saving several hundred passengers, women and children, standing at his post on her deck struggling with his crew to the last to rescue her; displaying upon that occasion a conspicious bravery that

Nettie Corraz went to play with her three little brothers and two other children on Indian Hill Monday afternoon. She would have been 10 years old next Sunday. Indian Hill is not high, but its top affords a fine outlook upon Moffat's pond and Ridgewood, N. J. When the six children got tired of playing on the hill they went down to play on the trestlework. There is no structure above the rails and no footpath beside them, but there is opportunity for an agile person to take refuge from the single track when the train passes on the projecting ends of the ties. The ties are only three or four :eet above the shallow water beneath them and for Corn...... the most of the way the trestlework is neighbor, saw the children and ordered them off, and Mrs. Morris, another neighbor, sent special word to the children that the train which leaves Montclair at 5:05 o'clock would come along and kill them all unless they went away. They were near the south end of the bridge. At 5:08 the train thundered through the cut, around the curve and down on to the bridge. The engineer saw the children, put on the brakes and reversed his engine, but it was impossible to stop the train suddenly on such a grade. All the children except Nettie and her brother Georgie, who s about 4 years old, scrambled out on the ends of the ties. She saw that he could not be trusted to cling to the ties and that he must be dropped through between ties to the dry, ground beneath. The little fellow was afraid and clung to the timbers. This delayed her only a few seconds, but she did not have even a second to spare. It is doubtful even whether she pushed him clear through. He was found afterward alive and well on the ground beneath, but he says he touched the cars when they went over him. When sho sprang away toward the end of a tie it was too late. Her body was beyond the track, but her left leg was severed at the thigh and the other was crushed below the knee.

The train was brought to a stop a moment afterward, and the engineer with tears in his eyes, helped pick her up. She did not lose consciousness. "Oh! I'm killed!" she exclaimed, 'What will mamma say ?" She died one hom after the accident. Guiteau's Trial. District Attorney Corkhill received a dispatch from Geo. Scoville, Guiteau's brother-in-law, and chosen by him as his council in the coming trial. Mr. Scoville announces that he has acceded to the request of Guiteau, will appear for him, and will reach Washington on Tuesday morning next. It is now said that one of the first efforts of Guiteau's counsel will be to secure such arrangements as will protect the assassin from bodily harm during the trial. Attorney General Stockton, of New Jersey, has informed District Attorney Corkhill that the New Jersey state authorities will take no action at present in relation to Guiteau.

Guiteau having complained that be could scarcely breathe in his cell, a part of the brick work, which closed all but eight inches of his cell window, has been removed. The opening is now about twelve inches. He is in constant fear for his life, and the appearance of a stranger at any point whence a shot at him might be made always excites him, and leads to suggestions on his part as to additional measures for his protection.
