Three drunks paid the mayor their costs this morning and one got 5 days. John Rice, an intelligent looking colored boy, who gave his birthplace as Nashville, Tennessee, was a lodger. He came east some months ago with a car load of jockey horses from Appelgate's stable in Kentucky. He had been to Saratoga and other places, and was on his way home. On Saturday the train on which be was riding stopped at the depot here, and while he was getting something to eat he was left behind. He told a very straight story and was able to talk "horse" very well. The Saturday evening's paper that the store of mayor had been to Saratoga when the Julius Levy would be closed to day on horses which he attended were there and he knew the story to be true. The boy was discharged and he started west.

On Saturday night a man named Thos Mulway, a temporary resident at St. Joseph's hospital, went on a jamboree and was picked up in a very drunken condition by Officer Gill, who took him to the station house and locked him up for the night. Yesterday morning he complained of being very sick and urged Officer Titus, who was in charge of the station house, to remove him from the cell and permit him to sit in the large room up stairs. The officer granted his request. Soon afterwards the officer was called down stairs to wait upon another prisoner. Mulway pledged himself to sit still during the officer's absence, but no sooner was his back turned, than he slipped from the office and escaped. In a few minutes the officer was after him, but did not overtake him until he reached the neighborhood of Orange street and Marietta avenue, where he found him in an ice cream saloon. He was taken back to the station house and again locked up. This morning he was discharged on payment of the usual fine

The time for the public sale of my property being next Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock, October 4, at the Cooper house, I would take the opportunity to correct a misapprehension regarding the character of the improvements thereto. It has been unwittingly given out that these can be available only for school purposes. A little reflection, however, should soon convince that the additional building of two-stories and attic, adorned by verandahs of picturesque design and durable finish, covered with slate root, relieved with handsome dormers, will now reasonably serve the use of the private family.
