Silk goods are among the luxuries, and they are heavily taxed when they enter our ports. Last year the imports of silk manufacturers through the New York custom house amounted to $33,305,460. That is practically the total importation, for of all the silk goods brought into the country 94 to 95 per cent. come here. It was the heaviest importation since 1871, one of the years of lavish expenditure immediately preceding the panic. These figures, however, represent the invoiced value, and fall short of the real value of the goods. It is alleged that deceit in the matter of valuation is an acknowledged detail of the silk importing industry. The annual report of the Silk association of America, in discussing the value of last year's imports, speaks calmly of "greater success than usual in passing undervalued

Now, taking the silk imports at the in voice figures, we find that they were ex-ceeded by more than a million dollars by the home manufactures The total value of the finished silk goods made in the United States in 1880 was $34,510,843. The comparison is not quite fair, for the reason already indicated; but after allowing for everything, including the increase in the price of foreign silks after the payment of the sixty per cent. duty, it is estimated that the American mills furnish more than a third in value of all the silk goods consumed in the country; and yet until quite recently we imported all, or nearly all, the silk we used.

Comparing the imports with the domestic manufactures item by item, so as to see what sort of goods are mostly brought from abroad, we reach some interesting facts. The heaviest single item of domes tic productions is ribbons, $6,023,100. This is nearly double the invoiced value of the imported ribbons. Of sewing silks, machine twist and floss, the American mills produce $7,008,880, more than thirty times the imports in the same line. Of silk handkerchiefs we make $3,881,590 worth, and import only $64,077. Of satins strange as it seems, we make between four and five times the value we import. It is in the "broad goods," the dress silks and velvets, that the imports greatly surpass the domestic manufacture. According to the inexorable logic of statistics, a vast proportion of the passementerie, the elegant trimmings, frills, and furbelows that pass as of Paris make, must be credited to Connecticut or New Jersey.

Ribbon manufacture is one of the most important departments of the silk industry in America, and one which appears to be steadily encouraged by consumers. Owing to the rapid and often unaccountable changes in fashion, it is sometimes precarious. Last spring, for instance, there came a sudden demand for the ombre or shaded ribbons, which are expensive to shaded ribbons, which are expensive to make, requiring skill and great care. A VALUABLE DISCOVERY. UNDERWEAR. Some of these ribbons have as many as sixty shades in a single piece, and each shade must be exactly in its proper place ing Physician and Surgeon of Balor the piece is spoiled. Another equally sudden revolution in feminine taste, and

The Peninsula Peach Orchards. It is said that the peach orchards of the peninsula, between the Delaware and Chespeake bays, comprising the state of Delaware and part of Maryland, cover trees of all ages, representing an invested capital of $2,750,000, or $55 per acre. In addition to the vast crops which are sent away by water and rail, there are some

UNDERWEAR.
Two extremes of the French hand-made underwear, lately come to us, attract notice. Some of it is so plain that it seems scarcely to belong to the class of embroidered work—it reminds one rather of the hand-work we used to make families here twenty-five years ago. The other extreme is the richest of embroidery. It needs to be seen. Nobody'll believe from description the work that is in it; the fineness, the richness, the extravagance. We show it with pleasure.

At the same time see what the sewing machine has done for us, in our American factory made underwear. Each has a perfection of its own. Factory-work, made as we get it,
