THURKEY-RED TABLE-CLOTHS FROM Austria Some of the very same goods have found their way into other houses here. Compare prices. We ought to be an eighth below; for we, alone among Philadelphia mer-chants, save the importers' profits. Some kinds are here only; blue-and-red, for JOHN WANAMAKER.

ACES.

More ruchings from Paris; mostly combinations of crepe itsee and edging. We buy nothing in ruchings but to get the styles that we can't make, or to get new styles quickly. Hand-knit tidies, of a sort that we have al-ways kept when when we could get it, we have been out of for months. Last summer we found them at St. Gall, Switzerland. We have them at twenty per cent, below our old prices, by saying the importer's profit. New Frees are coming by almost every steam-r. JOHN WANAMAKER.

HANDKERCHIEFS.

Before new silk handkerchiefs come we are selling the old at 50 and 75 cents; the $1 quality at 75 cents and all the lower qualities at 50. There's nothing against them but the patterns, Of course the best go first; but there are bundreds to chose from are hundreds to chose from.

Blanket buyers differ, some want allwood; some want beauty and soitness; some want solid wearing qualities, and know them when they see them; some want high fineness and are willing to pay for it.

We have all these. Here you can choose between different kinds and know what they are. If you are not a judge, you can find out just what a blanket is by asking. That's the advantage of buying of a house that has no secrets about goods.

DRESS GOODS.

Here are stripes of serge and satin hard to do justice to. The stripes are 1½ inches wide. The serge, of course, is of a variety of colors. The satin stripe is the significant one. It is made of two sets of ½ inche cross-bars, which alternate with each other. For ease of understanding, look at one set of these bars seperately. It is ombre, shading from light at the ends to dark in the middle. Now look at the other set of bars. It also is ombre, but shading the opposite way, from dark at the ends to other set of bars. It also is ombre, but shading the opposite way, from dark at the cuds to light in the middle. Now look at the stripe as a whole. It has a double-ombre effect, Think of one set of colors; now of the other. Now let the eye take in the whole piece. It is fairly tuneful with the harmony of colors; and yet most difficult to express.

Why dont we tell what the colors are? Because there are several combinations: and even one of them is so hard to set forth in words that a full statement of it would be dull. And if we could make the colors of on dull. And if we could make the colors of one piece shine here in the print, they might be the very wrong colors for you, who are reading, though we may have the right ones, $1.55; 23-inch. ACES FROM EUROPE.

In Hitherto we have applied the peculiar principles of our trade to the buying and selling of laces; i.e., we have bought as weil as we could and sold as low as we could; and our lace trade has grown out of all proportion to our other trade.

our other trade.

Now we begin to buy largely abroad. This is only carrying outour principles more fully. We bought last summer about $100,000 worth of laces of the manufacturers in various parts of Europe: and sayed at least $20,000 thereby. This saving we give you; and, knowing the generous trade to come, we have higher grades of laces and greater variety.

"TAILORIANA."

OR SCINTILLATIONS FROM THE SHOP-BOARD.

" Dog-Raboiting." This term is a pure tailorism, and one that-so far as we are aware-has not yet gotten into booke; and it seems somewhat surprising that a term so ancient and so generally in use among the "craft" should not have been noticed by Dr. Brewer in his "Dictionary of Phrase and Fable," or even by "Webster," seeing that they both have defined so many dog-combinations of less note and of less frequency. There is not-or at least was not-a single shop-board within the English realm or the American union, in which this term was not as familiar as any other pertaining to the board, and not to have known it would have argued the subject of the board unknowing, if not unknown. The term itself may be arbitrary and far-fetched, and its root or origin entirely unknown, but this did not render it less expressive and of less significance among the Knights of the "Thimble and Bodkin," among whom it was an exclusive

If an apprentice placed himself under the instructions of a "jour" to learn to 'build' coats, he soon discovered what dog rabbiting meant; for that would necessarily be his initiatory, and his future progress would very much depend upon the skill he exhibited in his manipulations of the dog-rabbiting of a garment. The practical interpretation of the term was capable of expansion and contractionthat is, was not arbitrarily confined to a limited amount, but sometimes meant more and sometimes less, according to circumstances or previous agreement. When the "job" was "opened" the building of the coat commenced; dog-rabiting, to the initiate, meant "piecing out the facings;" "seaming up the sleeves" and the sleeve-linings, sewing on the backs and lappells; and as he advanc-Mr. Haas feared there might be trouble and annoyance if the boys' and girls' ed, "stitching the facings," padding the collar and lappells, finishing the sleeves and felling in the facings, and whatever else the jour could throw into his hands without retarding the work. If he was an apt scholar, and his instructor of speculaperintendent was read and ordered to be tive turn, he would find his hands fullthe great bulk of the labor falling upon him; the jour merely doing the "bast-ing," pressing, forming, and giving the job the finishing touches, and then drawsubmits the following report of the public | ing the pay; his instruction being considered a just compensation for the labor per-entire garment, the amount and kind of stitching and quilting required by the demands of comfort, defective form, or fashion, and withal the advent of the sewing machine have so modified the work of coat binding, that distinctive dog-rabbitting has, in a measure, become obsolete, but the term may still be known and used among the regular craft everywhere. This term was mainly, if not exclusively applied to coats. In "small jobs," which included pantaloous and waist coats (pants and vests "for short") the dog-rabbiting was very insignificant, if at all applicable. As it related to that species of work which a third person could perform, while a first and second were carrying forward the main job, it could have little or no application to pantaloons at all, and in waist coats was limited to "piecing out" the facings, a matter of comparatively small account.

The term dog-rabbitting also come to be used as an expletive, or a substitute for a more profane objurgation, "I'll be dog-rabbited," being almost as common and perhaps quite as expressive as "I'll be dog-goned," and both were oftener abbreviated than used as a whole. The form breviated than used as a whole. The former objurgation, however, has perhaps had a currency beyond the domain of the shop board, whilst the latter has become in a measure, world-wide. O, there was a ro mance "In the days when dog rabbited a long time ago." GRANTELLUS.
