TURKEY-RED TABLE-CLOTHS FROM Austria Some of the very same goods have found their way into other houses here. Compare prices. We ought to be an eighth below; for we, alone among Philadelphia merchants, save the importers' profits. Some kinds are here only; blue-and-red, for JOHN WANAMAKER.

ACES.
More ruckings from Paris; mostly combinations of crepe ilsse and edging. We buy nothing in ruchings but to get the styles that we can't make, or to get new styles quickly. Hand-knit tidies, of a sort that we have always kept when when we could get it, we have them at St. Galt, Switzerland. We have them at twenty per cent. below our old prices, by saving the importer's profit.

New Lees are coming by almost every steam er.

Blanket buyers differ, some want allwool; some want beauty and softness; some want solid wearing qualities, and know them when they see them; some want high fineness which they see them; some want right inteness and are willing to pay for it. We have all these. Here you can choose be-tween different kinds and know what they are. If you are not a judge, you can find out just what a blanket is by asking. That's the advantage of buying of a house that has no secrets about goods.

DRESS GOODS. DRESS GOODS.

Here are stripes of serge and satin hard to do justice to. The stripes are 1½ inches wide. The serge, of course, is of a variety of colors. The satin stripe is the significant one. It is made of two sets of ½ inch cross bars, which alternate with each other. For case of understanding, look at one set of these bars seperately. It is ombre, shading from light at the ends to dark in the middle. Now look at the other set of bars. It also is ombre, but shad, other set of bars. other set of bars. It also is ombre, but shading the opposite way, from dark at the ends to light in the middle. Now look at the stripe as a whole. It has a double-ombre effect.
Think of one set of colors; now of the other.
Now let the eye take in the whole piece. It is fairly tuneful with the harmony of colors; and yet most difficult to express.

Why dont we tell what the colors ore? Because there are several combinations; and even one of them is so hard to set forth in words that a full statement of it would be dull. And if we could make the colors of one piece shine here in the print, they might be the very wrong colors for you, who are read-ing, though we may have the right ones, $1.35; 23-inch. LACES FROM EUROPE.

Hitherto we have applied the peculiar principles of our trade to the baying and selling of laces; i. e., we have bought as well as we could and sold as low as we could; and our lace trade has grown out of all proportion to our other trade.

Now we begin to buy largely abroad. This is only carrying out our refuebles near tally. is only carrying out our principles more fully. We bought last summer about $100,000 worth of laces of the manufacturers in various parts of Europe; and sayed at least $20,000 thereby.

This saving we give you; and, knowing the generous trade to come, we have higher grades of laces and greater variety.

NEW UPHOLSTERY. Upholstery cloths and fringes: very rich.
Madras curtains of new patterns, cross stripes and dados. Batiste, Holland and silk, with Madras cades inserted.

Black Italian cloth quilted diamonds and herringbone, 75 cents to $1.25.

For three years, while nobody else had it, we kept satisfactory work; and ladies, who happened to learn the fact, sent hither for it from many of the large cities. Now it is done well by manufacturers, and is no longer hard to get.

DRESS GOODS.
A cheviot dress-cloth, really of a fine check with an irregular illumination and a very obscure plaid; but, looked at a yard away, it appears to be a basket. Last year we sold it at $1.75 and $1.65 slater. The wholesale price for it last year was $1.75, just our retail price. If anybody else sells it for $1.50 you may thank us for the fact. We have eight patterns of this grade.

JOHN WANAMAKER.

City-hall-square entrance. NO SUCH STOCKS.

A haly from New York said to the writer last week: "Do you know there's no such stock of dress goods in New York as you've got here?" the lady meant both black and colored, of high grade; and probably she was right.

The market is as open to others as to us; and it sounds unfair to say that we get better goods than anybody else. But think what advantages we have. We can keep all grades of goods from the very highest to the lowest; for we have large trade in them all. Others who keep line goods have little trade in any but fine. How can they get rid of passe goods? They have no trade for such. So they must buy cautiously. We can mark down and sell to the next rank of buyers.

We have perhaps the fullest stock anywhere of luxuries in dress goods, both black and colored.

MacVeagh's Battles.

Alleged Inside History of the Trouble Over Chandler's Nomination. Dispatch from Washington to New York Sun. "There was a curious complication." said a well-informed, ex-politician, "about the MacVeagh-Blaine imbroglio in the cabinet, commencing with the appointment of W. E. Chandler as solicitor general. That thing, as you may not know, was arranged between Garfield and Blaine even before MacVeagh was selected for the cabinet. The object was to have Chandler where he could look after the Grant and Conkling people and checkmat: any scheme they might have. It was not precisely what Chandler wished but he consented. MacVeagh first heard of Chandler's appointment on his arrival in Washington one morning from Philadel-phia and his spirit rose to the highest pitch. Driving directly to the White House, he demanded of Garfield what it meant. No man was ever in a more belligerent frame of mind than MacVeagh was then. Garfield was not prepared for such an exhibition and was not successful in his attempt to mollify the attorney general, who, unwashed, and with satchel in hand, was the most earnest individual the president had seen. He did not stop to mince things, and, telling Garfield what he thought would become of his adminisistration with such goings on, informed the president he could have his resignation then and there; but he would make things hot whichever way he decided.

"'Old boy,' said Garfield, 'let us sit down and talk about it.' This, you know, was Garfield's way. Probably there are hundreds of persons who feel a pride in having been familiarly slapped on the shoulder and called my old boy, by Garfield. It generall went a great way, but not with MacVeagh. He was in no such humor. Evincing a disrespect for that sort of thing, he asked Garfield what he pital. was going to do about it, as he was ready to take the return train if that was his

"It ended in an understanding that MacVeagh should stay and fight Chandler. If he could prevent his confirmation it would be all right, Garfield agreeing that nothing should be done to put Chandler through. The fight should be between MacVeagh and Chandler.

"Afterwards Garfield explained that this course was the alternative for withdrawing Chandler's name outright, which course would have made things disagreeable. As MacVeagh relishes a fight, especially if it be, or seems to be, with the president of the United States, the secretary of state, or some other high personage, he was satisfied. Everybody knows how it came out. Chandler was beaten by one vote-Don Cameron's: a wheel within a wheel not necessary to explain

" Precisely how much Garfield cared for Chandler is not known. Blaine's conduct sented to accept the solicitorship he was assured he need not trouble himself about his confirmation, that would be taken care Veagh to keep hands off, and Blaine never lifted a finger for Chandler, whose confirmation might at any moment have been secured had Blaine chosen to say the word. I am not good authority as to Chandler's feelings now : but some of his New England friends are not enthusiastic for Blaine. In fact, the seed for a great deal of hard feeling was sown, and it is said to have sprouted and to promise vigorous growth. "As quarrels are said frequently to make fast friendships, so it became with Garfield and MacVeagh. It was not long after this that the attorney general began to crowd the secretary of state hard at the White House. As between Garfield and MacVeagh, the latter was by far the stronger willed and dominated the president. Between Garfield and Blaine the feeling was at times such as bodes disruption, although on the surface there was not much evidence of it.

Grant and Arthur.

Grant Denies his Alleged "Designs,"

Correspondence of the Public Ledger. The Tribune publishes a Washington dispatch containing sundry extraordinary statements concerning General Grant, and Gen. Grant's alleged overshadowing influence over Preesident Arthur, which is creating, naturally, no little stir in political circles. The general interpretation put upon it is, that this Washington blast Blaine and the anti-Stalwarts, it is understood, are about to open on the president and his administration. Among the alle gations are (1) that the cabinet is to be Grant's dictation ; (2) that "his especial representation in the government will be Mr. Chaffee, of Colorado, whose daughter married Gen. Grant's son, and with whom the general has intimate financial relations; " (3) that Gen. Grant "speaks with the utmost frankness of his desire to see Mr. Blaine out, and his purpose to anxious to fill the Oriental legations; and that he has already offered two or three missions to two or three friends, precisely as if he were president;" that "he desires to have Mr. J.R. Young, of the New York Herald, appointed minister to Japan, and to made a vacancy there, wishes Mr. Mr. Cramer is to have a better legation than the Swiss, which General Garfield gave him, and General Badcau, if the president should think it not politic to displace Gen. Merritt, will get consolation elsewhere : (7) that "Gen. Grant, with a frankness which must be acknowledged, savs that Garfield men ought to be put out without any nonsense and 'our friends' put in their places, and he seems confident that this will be done. Your correspondent has seen General

Grant with reference to these several al legations, and, as a matter of public interest not less than of justice to himself and the president, it may be said he denounces them as false and malicious. He says he has not sought in any way to influence the president in the manner imputed to him; class, 60 cents; second class, 50 cents; that, as regards Mr. Chaffee, the latter third-class, 40 cents; fourth-class, 28 was politically hostile to him at Chicago, and was never considered a "Grant man," and, as for his "intimate financial relations with him," "the fact is," said the traffic over the Pennsylvania and other general, "I have never been interested trunk line roads to the west, is very heavy with him in any transaction to the extent at present, and about as much as they of a dollar." As to his "wishing to have can do. Blaine out of the cabinet," General Grant says that is about the only truthful item Mrs. Caroline Forsyth and her husband in the entire indictment. He wishes him Jacob Forsyth, signed a warrantee deed on out because he believes he is not a fit man to be there. The only arrangement of the by them at Sheffield, Lake county, Ind., diplomatic service that he is aware of is and bordering on the Illinois line, about an expressed desire that the Eastern mis- fourteen miles from Chicago. Colonel sions should be filled with special refer. Forsyth receives $1,000,000 for his propence to the promotion of our commercial erty, of which $350,000 in cash was paid interests in that quarter, a thorough on Wednesday. He made his deed to knowledge of the peculiar requirements of William W. Green, of New Jersey, who wholly in the interests of the public, and the same motive operated in regard to Mr. Bingham. The insinuation in regard to Mr. Cramer the general characterizes as wholly baseless, and the statement that he has insisted that "Garfield men must be put out" he denounces unqualifiedly and with unmistakable emphasis as an "unmitigated falsehood." General Grant, at times, spoke with considerable feeling, and gave your correspondent to understand that he was not ignorant either of the motives of his accusers nor of the source of their inspiration, back of the accusations themselves, and he intimated that it might yet be a duty to himself and to the

CLOTHING HOUSES

And it is a good deal to say that one is unlike all the rest. First, in its dealings; and it is surprising that one House should differ much from another. Selling Clothing is so simple a matter that it is likely one would suppose to be done in very much the same way in all parts of the city; but to think that there is one House ahead of all the rest, and to be ahead in all the dealing is to deal on a higher plane, in a more liberal way to give the buyer more well-founded confidence without loss of the merchant's safety. We want what belongs to us, viz:

A FAIR PROFIT.

One way to arrive at this result is to mark

One way to arrive at this result is to mark a price in plain figures on everything we sell, which price is absolute, and to let you buy what you like, go away, and come and trade back again if you want to. We find by experience that this liberality is harmless to us. Of course customers like it, and it makes quick and steady dealing. We don't want you to bring back what you buy. It would cost us money every time, but we would rather you would bring back than keep what you don't like, so we try to see you get at first what you will like the better the more you know of it. This is really the whole philosophy of our dealing. The Clothing trade of the present day requires a great variety of patterns, which people like, because everybody likes to choose out of many rather than out of few.

There are just TWO THINGS we never

There are just TWO THINGS we never alter, viz: The PRICE and the TERMS. The Price of every Garment is Plainty Marked, and the Terms are Strictly Cash. With this understanding customers never waste time in trading, but select with the knowledge that if they change their minds afterwards they can bring the clothes back and have their money.
