CLOTHING. THE CITY IS FULL OF

CLOTHING HOUSES

And it is a good deal to say that one is unlike all the rest. First, in its dealings; and it is surprising that one House should differ it is surprising that one House should differ much from another. Selling Clothing is so simple a matter that it is likely one would suppose to be done in very much the same way in all parts of the city; but to think that there is one House ahead of all the rest, and to be ahead in all the dealing is to deal on a higher plane, in a more liberal way to give the bayer more well-four ded confidence without loss of the merchant's safety. We want what belongs to us, viz:

A FAIR PROFIT,

and we want you to have what belongs to

A LIBERAL MONEY'S WORTH, One way to arrive at this result is to mark a price in plain figures on everything we sell, which price is absolute, and to let you buy what you like, go away, and come and buy what you like, go away, and come and trade back again it you want to. We find by experience that this liberality is harmless to us. Of course customers like it, and it makes quick and steady dealing. We don't want you to bring back what you buy. It would cost us money every time, but we would rather you would bring back than keep what you don't like, so we try to see you get at first what you will like the better the more you know of it. This is really the whole philosophy of our dealing. The Clothing trade of the present day requires a great variety of patterns, which people like, because everybody likes to choose out of many rather than out of few. choose out of many rather than out of few. There are just TWO THINGS we never alter, viz: The PRICE and the TERMS. The Price of every Garment is Plainty Market, and the Terms are Strictly Cash. With this understanding customers never waste time in trading, but select with the knowledge that if they change their minds afterwards they can bring the clothes back > GARFIELD'S ASSASSIN IN COURT. Counsel for Guiteau Move for a Further Post ponement Against the Prisoner's Pro-test—The Trial to Proceed.— Selecting a Jury.—A Sen-sational Episode.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.-The Guiteau trial commenced here this morning. At precisely 10 o'clock Judge Cox took his seat and the prisoner was brought in, taking a seat between his sister, Mrs. Scoville, and his brother-in-law. Guiteau looked in much better condition physically and otherwise than when last in court, but still had the same restless, furtive expres-sion, as of a hunted wolf, which characterized him before.

He was at once relieved of his handcuffs. One of his first movements was to attempt to draw from his pocket a roll of paper, but at a sign from Scoville he put it back.

Mr. Robinson, prisoner's counsel, then arose and made a plea, apparently much against the prisoner's wish, for a postponement, asking for more time to prepare for the defence. All the time he was speaking Guiteau was carrying on a remonstrance with Scoville, who was arparently trying to quiet him.

At the close of Robinson's speech Guiteau insisted on being heard. He said he was not aware that a postponement was to be requested. He desired to be heard in his own defence at the very And Thousands of other Elegant Articles, to be SHOWERED UPON THE PEOPLE threshold of the case. The judge then announced t' at trial should proceed as far at least as the swearing of the jury, when he would consider Robinson's application for an extension.
At 11 o'clock the work of obtaining a jury was begun. The three first were disqualified, two because they had formed fixed opinious, and the other because he had conscientious scruples on the subject THE GRANDEST BOOK SALE of capital punishment. In examining jurors Mr. Scoville went over a wide range, inquiring as to their religious and political belief. At noon the defense had had been accepted and sworn in. The panel was exhausted after five jurous had been obtained, and at the suggestion of the district attorney an order was issued for the drawing of 75 additional names from the box. The prisoner at this point slowly cose and informed the court that he would like to make a speech to-morrow morning, but he was ordered by the court to take his seat. He then passed the manuscript of his speech to a 100 SOLID GOLD WATCHES to be given away free. newspaper reporter, but before the latter could leave the court room Mr. Scoville 100 SOLID SILVER WATCHES to be given called him back and compelled him to re-100 REAL DIAMOND RINGS to be given turn it.
