An Uncomfortable Man.

The wonder is not that Guiteau killed Garfield, but that he has not in his lifetime killed a score of men. One who has so little control of himself has got along very well indeed with only one dead man charged to his account. If he should be let loose in the world it would be the part of prudence in its inhabitants to treat him with distinguished consideration and to avoid crossing his pathway with great care. His friend of one hour is his enemy of the next. The man he asked for office he suddenly deemed himself commissioned by God to slay. The lawyers who serve him without reward are alternately the objects of his smiles and curses. Certainly it is an ungrateful duty to stand by him as a friend or advocate. We fear that if Mr. Scoville had known what was coming upon him when he married Guiteau's sister, he would have abandoned her even at the altar. The intensest love for woman could hardly endure the strain of such a contemplation. And here comes up the question as to how far a man's duty requires him to stand by his wife's relations. Humane people will all applaud Mr. Scoville that he has decided this question against himself; but if he had decided otherwise could he have been greatly blamed ? A motherin-law has always been considered the bete noir of the married man; to her his wife owes a daughter's duty, and as wife and husband are theoretically one, the same burthen may justly fall upon him. But is it not stretching the thing pretty far to put brothers-in-law upon the husband's shoulders, and that without limit as to the brother-in law's wickedness ? It certainly requires an angelic temper and a perfect patience to endure such a client as Guiteau. There is no doubt the biography of Garfield and to bank that Mr. Scoville believes him to be as ing. mad as a March hare ; and his other counsel, whom he so despitefully uses. must have the same profound faith. Probably nobody differs from them very much. He could hardly be so uncomfortable a man and be sane.

Virginia Bonds.

Mahone's victory temporarily put down the price of Virginia bonds seriously, but they have recovered. Probably the impression in moneyed circles is that the Mahone-Republican alliance having been successful on a repudiation platform will now kick that stool from under it and abandon the impracticable attempt to set aside the law which protects the covenant with the bond- the absolute prohibition of Chinese immiholders. WHEN the solemn person who presides over the associated press in Washington got off that pun about the Guiteau-perchahued lips of the president's murderer, yesterday afternoon, he had no idea of the demoralizing effect it was going to pro duce upon the intelligent compositor of this great country. He picked up the newspaper last evening to see how his joke looked in print, and he immediately vowed a vow-he will never do it again. His appears that Engel, who is 36 years of age first lapse from the straight path is full of warning, and he will confine himself in the future, as in the past, to the sober task of furnishing facts-solid facts, without any jocular ornamentation. > LOCAL INTELLIGENCE. A SHAMEPUL AFFAIR.

Columbia Girl's Experince in Philadel The city papers this morning have an picture will be scanned with cager and young girl from Columbia, who has many friends in this city and is well known as a beautiful and reputable young woman.

According to the Puiladelphia journals Miss Ida Baight, a bright country girl aged about 21 years, came from Columbia, Pa. on the 5th of this month, and last night she rested behind the bars of a cell in the Ninth District police station, Twentythird and Brown streets, in consequence of her failure to furnish $1,000 bail as a guarantee of her appearance as a witness against Chas. H. Engel, a scrap-iron dealer residing at 1402 Parrish street, who occu pied an adjoining cell on the charge of having feloniously assaulted the girl. It and a widower with one child, a girl aged twelve years, formed the acquaintance of Ida in Columbia and after much persuasion induced her to come to the city and ac cept wo:k as a seamstress in his house. She made her appearance on the 5th of this month, and the man immediately be gan paying to her more attention than she appreciated and on one or two occasions attempted liberties which she resented. Notwithstanding this she still remained in the house because she had no other friends in the city. On last Tuesday evening, after hicago and New York papers, and of the the girl retired, Engel sent his daughter on an errand, and during her absence entered the room of Ida. Accord-ing to her affidavit before Magistrate Brown, the man dragged her out of bed and threw her on the floor. She attempted to scream for assistance, but this Engel prevented by catching her by the throat and stuffing the end of a quilt in her mouth. She was obliged to pass the night in the house, as she could not escape from the room in which they were. Early on Wednesday morning Engel attempt of to repeat the outrage. Another struggle ensued, during which the girl was bratally handled. She managed to elude him and escaping down stairs met Miss Engel as she was returning home. Miss Baight ran into the street in her nightdress and bare feet, with the blood flowing freely from several wounds about the head. A policeman who happened on the scene then took her to the station house. Twenty-third and Brown streets. She laid her case before Magistrate Brown, who promptly issued a warrant for the arrest of Eugel. For some reason best known to themselves, the police did not execute the document until yesterday afternoon. The prisoner was taken before the brought forward to testify she showed an the newspapers. inclination to become reticent, and counsel for defense remarked that there was no use in proceeding with the case as a compromise had been affected. To this the magistrate would not listen, as he had no desire to appear in the light of a compounder of a felony. Engel then attempted to prevent Ida from testifying, but the magistrate succeeded in obtaining from her sufficient evidence to warrant him in sending the case before a jury. As there was | backward movement ; therefore, hability of the girl leaving the city. she was held in $1,500 bail, but this attendance of this large body of teachers amount was afterward reduced to $1,000. Engel was committed without bail for trial. More Horse-Stealing in the Lower End. Thursday night thieves entered the stable of Geo. Lamborn near Mr. Steinman's farm, in Drumore township, and stole a horse and buggy. They drove till they came to the property of John D. In Pottsville, Mrs. Thomas Danbert, Penny, where they abandoned the horse, Lamborn's horse, as the one they exchanged it for was a better animal. Mr. Lamborn recovered his horse, which was left at Penny's. It will be noticed that these depredations occurred in the same neighborhood in which similar John F. Steinman's farm some time since was visited by horse thieves, and in their operation of Thursday night they went from Lamborn's past the Steinman farm each other. The farmers of the lower end

Resolutions Adopted-The Concluding Lec. tures and Exercises of our Educa-tional Assembly.

Friday Afternoon.-Prof. Brown concluded his lecture on reading and clocution, giving a general review of the points he had made during the week. As examaccount of a dastardly assault upon a ples of the great mental speakers, he and Felix Adler. The great emotional orators are Beecher, Talmage, Robert Collier and Wendell Phillips, noted as men who possessed much of both the mental and emotional. As a specimen of emotional reading he presented Paul Revere and recited a part of the poem, and as an example of the purely emotional-he rehearsed the hard-shell Baptist preacher's sermon on the animals that entered Noah's ark.

Prof. Heiges concluded his lecture on the mechanical powers, illustrating his points by diagrams on the blackboard, representing the power of the lever, the fulcrum, the wedge, the pulley, the screw, &c. He was attentively listened to, being a great favorite with the teachers, on account or the practical usefulness of all the topics discussed by him. When he closed he was greeted with much applause.

Mr. Lewis gave some further sp cimens of industrial and fancy drawing on the blackboard.

Dr. French made the closing address wherein he offered many practical sugges tions to teachers relative to giving pupils instruction in useful affairs of life-in letter-writing, book-keeping, business forms, measurements of floors and walls ; how much carpet, or paint, or wall paper, will be required to cover them; how many cubic feet of earth is excavated from a cellar of given dimensions, &c., &c. Another important matter is instruction in courtesy and good manners. In conclusion he said Lancaster county was the second in the state that had invited him to lecture. For years he had lectured in many parts of it, and after a careful and impartial study of its educational affairs he is satisfied, that, as a whole, Pennsylvania has a better school system than any other state in the Union ; and that none of the older states have, within the past twenty years, made as great progress in school matters as Pennsylvania. A Business Meeting.

Mr. Keller, of Strasburg, moved that the publication of the proceedings of the Institute in pamphlet form be discontinued, and that the money thus saved be placed in the hands of the county superintendent to be used as a fund with which to secure first class lecturers for next year's Instituie. Mr. Lichty moved to amend by having the proceedings published in a less expensive form, and that a smaller number of copies be printed. The resolution and amendment led to a spirited debate, participated in by Supt. Shaub, Prof. McCaskey, Supt. Buchrle, Prof. Geist, Miss Sanders, Miss Bruckhart Mrs. Archer and others, and on a vote being taken Mr. Lichty's amendment was agreed to and the matter was left in the hands of the publication committee.
