JOHN WANAMAKER'S GREAT HOLIDAY SALE.

JOHN WANAMAKER

WILL INAUGURATE ON

MONDAY, DECEMBER 5th,

THE GREAT HOLIDAY SALE of Philadelphia, AT THE GRAND DEPOT,

In both the Main Building and the two new annexes, when FIVE ACRES OF FLOOR SPACE AND GALLERIES will be thrown open to the public for the marvelously beautiful exhibition of dry goods, fancy goods, ladies' dresses, and house-furnishings of every description.

Vienne, Paris, Berlin and Switzerland have poured in beautiful things for Christmas, and the new toy department covering a half acre lot is LIKE FAIRY LAND.

All told, the present stock offers our customers a selection from almost two million dollars' worth of goods.

The ladies' suits and coats and the Fur Department occupy the new building directly on the corner of Thirteenth and Chestnut.

The ladies', gents' and children's hosiery, gloves and gents' furnishing goods occupy the three stores (thrown into one) on the west side of Chestnut Street entrance.

The Immense Windows On Chestnut Street, and the arcade entrance, with its splendid displays of Christmas things,

Will be illuminated with Electric Light until 10 o'clock every night.

Mail orders have our careful attention. We are organized to attend to twelve hundred letters daily.

JOHN WANAMAKER,

Grand Depot, Thirteenth, Market and Chestnut Sts., Philadelphia.

Farmer and Gardener.

Look After the Implements.

As winter approaches we cannot refrain from saying that the careful, thoughtful farmer never allows his plows, harrows, cultivators, mowing and reaping machines, hay tedders and other implements and machinery, to be exposed to the weather, or when they can be arranged by fods or stock. The products of covered place for them all where the rains and snows cannot penetrate, with either board flooring or placed upon scantling to raise them from the ground. Such portions of the iron likely to rust should be painted over slightly with any cheap oil paint, and it will need to be preserved and appearance of all implements and machinery, especially if the woodwork is also painted. When this is inconvenient the iron should be cleaned of dirt and greased with pieces of fat pork. They should also be put in good repair during the winter, in order to be ready for operating when needed in the spring. Leaving this repairing until another season opens frequently causes damaging delays which should always be provided against. There is nothing like being always ready with these things for any emergency.

Ensilage Sows.

There has been of late considerable falling off in the talk about silos and the value of ensilage as a separate food. At the beginning of the mania the preserved cornfodder in its perfectly fresh, green state was to accomplish everything unassisted. Milk, butter and cheese were to be produced, condition of the cattle maintained, and health secured solely by the feeding of ensilage; and, altogether, it was to be effected at a rate of economy that must satisfy every one at short notice that this newly-discovered method of making the most of the products of the earth at the least expense must commend itself to the favorable attention of every agriculturist.

But has it done so? We need hardly say that it has not. Ensilage by itself, as a food for even milk cows, is not recommended by those who are to be mostly experienced in the use of it. Almost all extensive feeders employ at the same time other feed, which takes away from the fresh fodder its distinctive features or qualities as a separate food. One farmer says the fodder comes out of the silo in good condition and is eaten up readily by the cattle; but he "mixes with good cut hay," which is given in two feeds per day; but to secure proper results "some concentrated feed must be added," such as cake meal, bran, &c. And this is the way the question is now treated. We don't pretend to say that this combined food is not very good—excellent—and that cattle will give plenty of milk and thrive upon it, but we beg to be allowed to say, without being much abused for it, that we doubt the economy involved, or that any labor is saved, or that any profits are obtained over the system in vogue before a silo was ever built.

Do Your Own Repairing.

We think that almost every farmer will agree with us that every farm should have its own workshop, and every cultivator of the land should understand how to use it. He may not do so when he first comes upon farming on coming of age; but after a year or so of what we should call apprenticeship, when he finds that "know how to do things" is absolutely indispensable, he will rapidly learn to attend to most of his own repairing of the ordinary machinery and machines upon his premises, instead of incurring delay, expense and uncertainty by depending upon professionals at a distance. Rather than to be without a workshop and the necessary tools, one should be erected expressly for the purpose, in a convenient spot and daily warmed in winter, so as to be ready at all times for use, in which many old jobs can be done also not immediately connected with the farm.

All ordinary wooden repairing ought to be done by the farmer and his hands during rainy days and in winter, when there is plenty of time and when the work is not so important. Every part of a wheelbarrow, except the wheel, ought to be made on the premises; new forks and handles of iron rakes, repairing even some portions of the farm machinery, building of garden and yard fences, repairing roofs, building of corncribs, hog-pens, wagon and cart shavings, making of the frames of hotbeds, and all the many jobs constantly requiring to be done about a well conducted place to numerous to mention. A person becomes very handy in the use of good tools after a short experience, and saves himself a dollar or so in coming many a time necessary for the usual demands of the farm.

Free Road Roads.

In some of the states of the West—and we shall select Ohio—hard roads, better known as turnpikes, are constructed, as we learn, under the operations of a general law, whether those residing in that state or a district or along the line of a road desire it or not. From all we can gather many who oppose these improvements at first come to like them, finding that they pay really no more in taxes than they would pay in tolls over a Pennsylvania turnpike, and in many cases as much; for a turnpike here in the East is expected not only to draw enough from the pockets of the farmers to make the road and keep it in repair, but to keep the tollgate keeper and send a good profit into the pockets of the schoolhouses in the way of dividends besides. Even those who thought the old fashioned spring mud roads good enough to pull through with three or four horses, find that the tax is less than the two extra horses required, as these one or two on a good road will do the work of three or four on, or rather in, a bad one. In short the saving of tolls, labor and wear and tear is a great thing all round.

But we find some who are not pleased with the plan, as it is but reasonable we should. The tax for road purposes is laid on according to the nearness to the road, and a mile or so back from the stoned road paying little or nothing. It seems all fair; but there are always some who, from shiftless management, undertaking too much with too little means, or who have had real misfortunes and are poor, are quite sure the old road will be enough for anybody. There, as well as here and everywhere, unfortunately have to be crowded out by their more prosperous neighbors. Improvements cannot wait for them; and we are pleased to find the feeling of the majority of Ohio farmers in regard to the Ohio free turnpike law.

How satisfactory it would be to have all our roads here hard and smooth and free of toll! We should have to pay for them, it is true in taxes, but this would be done in a lump, and time saved in stopping at toll-gates, say five hundred to a thousand times in a year, added to do the work that is to be done on the farm in hurrying seasons, sometimes securing many tons of hay from the rain, would more than compensate for every cent paid in the way of taxes. Just for a moment think the matter over, and count up the profit and loss, by adopting the Ohio plan of good roads, to say nothing of the comfort, safety and increased rate of travel.

Farming About the Rocky Mountains.

Those of us who have become habituated to green fields and shady woods—who have been helped by the rainfall and have done little of our own water the crops could not easily bring ourselves to think much of the dry regions where little but cactus and other succulent plant grows naturally; where all is gray and cheerless, and artificial watering alone produces all a human being is to eat. Yet these apparently inhospitable places are paradises for some people, and in many respects have advantages which we do not enjoy.

In the ages of the past we look to Egypt as the pioneer in the work of civilization; and yet her vast agriculture was solely artificial. There was little rain and the mighty Nile river, as the poet says, had to bleed through a thousand pores in order to make the grain and the grass to grow. Dependent solely on their own resources, they always had bread to eat; while the countries supposed to be more favored of Nature often left their people to starve.

Joseph's brethren heard the good news that there was corn in Egypt, when famine stalked all over their own fair land.

There is no danger in these days of railroads and electric telegraphs that the stories of ancient famines will ever be repeated, as "history repeats itself" in our lands. The day after the Mississippi overflowed, Massachusetts ships food for the inundated ones; and if the grasshoppers eat up the crops of Nebraska, the loss is made within a few days by the sympathies of Eastern brethren. But if over a general Eastern destruction of crops should occur, who knows but these despaired arid western plains would not be fully able to come to our rescue?

People often suppose that where crops are raised by irrigation, the land under culture must necessarily be limited; but this is not the case. At the very base of the Rocky mountains most of the farmers work forty-acre lots; many one hundred and fifty; while some are reported as having over three hundred acres in wheat. Of course this is nothing in comparison with what many Western people have in the more nature favored regions; but it is very large for artificial work, and quite large enough.

As we have said, the natural charms of nature-watered lands will ever have the greatest charms for the average man; but it is a matter of great interest to watch what other places can do and are doing, and this Colorado illustration gives a new point of view of the world, and makes, that, whatever may be local life, every part of the world has its own advantages.

Washington News.

Political and Otherwise.

The president took up his residence in the White House yesterday.

Senators Sherman, Pendleton, Dawes, Lapham, Bayard and Morgan have been appointed on the joint committee to prepare a memorial upon the death of President Garfield.

Among the appointments by the doorkeeper of the U. S. House of Representatives is Colonel H. Popham, a Virginia Readjuster, to be assistant doorkeeper, in charge of the document room.

It is understood that John Adams, nephew of J. C. Bancroft Davis, and son-in-law of ex-Senator Frelinghuysen, will be President Arthur's private secretary, and will assume his duties in a day or two.

The secretary and assistant secretary of the treasury yesterday heard a delegation from Pittsburgh, headed by Mr. Mottell, in opposition to a treasury ruling reducing the duties on steel bloom below what is claimed it should be rated at.

The compositor in the document room of the government printing office in Washington struck yesterday afternoon, because Mr. DeForest refused to continue the pay of 60 cents per thousand after midnight, which they have heretofore received.

The Washington Star believes that the president has "made up the cabinet slate." It says that within a few days a party of senators called upon the president to urge the claims of a well-known public man for a cabinet office. The president stopped discussion by saying, "Gentlemen, the matter is already closed."

Judge Advocate General Swain has finished his review of the court martial case of Cadet Whitaker, and will submit the papers, with his report, to the secretary of war next week. The matter will afterwards go to the president, and the character of the report will not be made public until after he has passed upon it.

The Virginia Legislature met yesterday in regular session. In the Senate General Wyatt M. Elliott, of Appomattox, was elected president pro tempore, and a colored man was chosen doorkeeper. In the House I. C. Fowler, of Washington county, was elected speaker, and R. H. McCall, of Pulaski, clerk. As in the Senate, a colored man was elected doorkeeper. Gov. Holliday's message was received and read.

The Boss System in Missouri.

Washington dispatch to the Times.

It is stated on good authority that Chauncey I. Filley, of Missouri, dictated the vote on the speakership of the four Republican Greenbackers from that state. As Mr. Filley is regarded as too sensible a man to have ever calculated that the Greenback caucus nominees could have him elected his action is believed to have been for its purpose the removal of an obstacle to his complete control of the patronage in his district. There are numerous post offices and other government positions to be filled in Missouri and the Greenback representatives expect to exert an important influence with the administration in the placing of them. It is said that if the Greenbackers had followed out their honest convictions and voted for the Republicans, to whom they owe their election, there would be no doubt but what, when the time came, their desires would have been to a certain extent gratified. Now that they have placed themselves upon record as sustaining a straight Greenback ticket in the House the disposition of place in Missouri will depend largely on Boss Filley's wishes. The friends of John Tracey, of Southeast Missouri, who is here as a candidate against C. C. Allen, the incumbent, for the marshaled Missouri, assert that Filley is befriending Tracey in the contest, as against Colonel Allen.

On a pleasant fall day some persons will thoughtlessly expose themselves in summer suits to a severe cold. For such, immediate relief offers itself in Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, 25 cents a bottle.

Wm. McCartney, 83 Lloyd Street, Buffalo, N. Y., fell and sprained his ankle. His employer, L. Anderson, 91 Main Street, procured some of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and says that a few applications enabled him to go to work as usual. For sale at H. B. Cochran's drug store, 137 North Queen street, Lancaster.
