BARGAINS DE FACTO.
Rough and Tumble Data.
The mill that makes these goods runs exclusively for Oak Hall.
They are all-wool, strong as cow hide, thoroughly honest and not handsome.
One point with them is to give the greatest amount of strength and durability for the least possible price.
We have said little about them, because they have sold too fast to advertise.
We now have small lines as follows:

Men's Sack Suits,	$10.00
Large Boys' Sack Suits,	$7.50
Large Boys' Blouse Suits,	$4.50
Large Boys' Overcoats,	$7.00
Small Boys' Overcoats,	$6.00

They are BARGAINS
de facto.

We cannot speak too strongly of the solidity and goodness of these goods.

FRIDAY EVENING, JAN. 13, 1882.
LISBON'S HOLIDAY.
REJOICINGS IN HONOR OF ALFONSO.
ROYALTY ON A FROLIO.
AND GIVING PLEDGES OF AMITY.
THEIR MAJESTIES AT THE RACES.

A Great Court Ball and a Good Time Generally.
Lisbon Cable to New York Herald.
At the banquet of 120 covers Tuesday night at the Ajuda palace the magnificent table was adorned with a splendid display of plate and artistic centre pieces, with flowers, highly royal services in the liveries waited on the guests, while several bands played in a neighboring gallery.
The Queen of Portugal and King Alfonso were on the right, Dona Christina being on the right of Dom Luis, and all around the seated their respective ministers and suitors, nobles, prelates in scarlet robes, and the foreign ministers and their ladies in beautiful toilets. King Luis, in an appropriate toast, welcomed his royal visitors expressing the hope of a sincere friendship between the two nations. King Alfonso replied, making points alluding to his hope that the two peninsular countries would make closer their material interests, because their exterior policy was similar.
The feast ended at midnight and the royal guests returned to Lisbon along the banks of the Tagus by moonlight. King Luis shows marked kindness to Senor Sagasta, consulting his opinion even on questions of purely Portuguese interest.
The menu of the banquet was composed of four courses and fifteen dishes, including French, Spanish and Italian specialties, specimens of culinary art, the choicest Oporto and French and Spanish wines.
At the Race Course.
The races took place this afternoon on a course admirably situated on sloping ground, commanding a view of the mouth of the Tagus. Nothing can be conceived more imposing than the scene—the sun descending toward the horizon, the ocean calm as a lake, studded with sails, a fishing-boat going out the same time as the larger craft, the lighthouse looming on the islet in the middle of the mouth, the opposite cliffs rising picturesquely with a large lighthouse, its big white houses and tall walls standing out in bold relief on the blue line of the cliffs. Far inland could be seen the broad river and the city of Lisbon in the hazy background, while close by the city of the monarchy and church of Belem, rising behind. The race course was crowded with a vast multitude and a host of carriages, but there was not a single line team or flag. Two large stands flanked the royal pavilion, in which I noticed the two kings, their queens, the ministers, the king's father, Dom Fernando, with the Countess Edia, his morganatic wife, sitting a little apart.
King Luis is short and stout, has a florid complexion, a jolly, open face and a pleasant smile. He wears a military uniform.
He appears to be forty-three years of age.
Queen Pia is tall, slight, delicate and fair.
She seems more German than Italian.
Her complexion is pale, with dark eyes.
She was simply attired. The hair appears to be of the color of the queen.
Dom Alfonso, our young, stout, powerfully built, curly-haired prince, of nineteen and seventeen years, though they look much older. King Luis and his sons speak English and Spanish fluently and are fond of hunting and riding. Dom Fernando and Dom Augusto, the father and brother of the actual monarch. During the races the kings visited the paddock, complimenting Messrs. Garvey and Davies, the owners of the Anglo-Spanish colts that won the principal races. The scene in the paddock was animated. All was over by five o'clock.

In the Ajuda palace to night was given the court ball. Two thousand nine hundred invitations had been issued. Among the guests were the kings and queens and of the diplomatic corps. Many Spaniards and foreigners were also present.
The palace reception include guests of all parties in Portugal. The ball room was the throne room, in the upper story of the palace. The splendid hall was adorned with lovely tropical plants and a profusion of flowers covering tables and cabinets of great artistic merit. All around were other rooms furnished with taste.
A magnificent supper room had been prepared for the guests and a special room was set apart for the royal party amid palm trees and exotic plants concealing the walls.
On the staircase and in the ante-chambers were superb trophies of arms, statues, the flags of both countries, and such and such as attracted the eyes and caused as scenes extraordinary in January, when a thick fog hangs on the Tagus, hiding the view of the opposite bank. The whole palace was lighted with gas and which gave it a wonderful splendor. The right etiquette of the Portuguese court required all men to appear in uniform, in dress with knee breeches and silk stockings, much to the confusion of many who were invited. The ladies of the Portuguese nobility possess the finest diamonds imaginable, but I remarked that their taste in dress has been handsomely reformed.
There will be in future the Fine Arts Exhibition of Lisbon. By a marble paved hall with fine columns you enter a staircase hung with paintings, and on the landing reach the largest of the ball rooms. The splendid hall was adorned much to the confusion of many who were

nobility possess the finest diamonds im-
in dress has been handsomely reformed.
There will be in future the Fine
great artistic merit. All around were
other rooms furnished with taste.
A magnificent supper room had been prepared for the guests and a special room was
trees and exotic plants concealing the walls.
On the staircase and in the ante-chambers
were superb trophies of arms, statues,
gave it a wonderful splendor. The right
etiquette of the Portuguese court required
with knee breeches and silk stockings,
much to the confusion of many who were
