A GAPPY NEW YEAR!

The season of 1881 closed one of the most brilliant and successful campaigns in the history of our trade. We congratulate our patrons and ourselves in anticipation of a lively and increased Spring Trade.

In order to meet the demand we have made extensive improvements in our room and otherwise extended our facil ities to present our spring offering of select and Chôice FOREIGN NOVEL-TIES to arrive about the Fust of FER-RUARY. We will be able to please the attacky. We will be able to please the most osthetic as well as the general class of trade. A great desideration among our people seems to be a cheap article in Clothing. There is no good in it. We have tried it and found it don't pay. We will wager one of our $30 Overcoats will last three seasons' hard wear and look genteel, while a $20 Overcoat will hardly be recognized after one season's wear. Where is the economy in buying trash? Few persons are competent judges of fine articles of Clothing done up in first-class style; therefore, we invite special class style; therefore, we invite special attention to our establishment, where can be found at all times the very best in the market, at prices as reasonable as can be expected. We are selling a tew HEAVY-WEIGHT

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JAN. 25, 1882.

Contemporary Witcheraft. New York World People are only too apt to believe that witchcraft has become an exploded article of the popular creed, and that outside of the Southern negroes, whose firm belief in old nails, pius and pieces of iron obtainand constant practice of Voudooism have been recently described in these columns. there are no classes holding to the faith professed by Raleigh and Bacon, Selden and Hobbs, Boyle and Moore, Sir Thomas Brown and Sir Matthew Hale. Yet there would not be the slightest difficulty experienced by any one whose reading in-cludes a moderately large list of daily newspapers, domestic and foreign, in compiling a very respectable annual volume on contemporary witcheraft and proving that a belief in the supernatural and ma-lignant attributes of crazy old crones in the vampire tastes of unquiet corpses and in the potency of charms and spells is to-day entertained by millions of people in the post significant equations of the world the most civilized countries of the world. They had an epidemic of witcheraft in Butler, Pa., a few months ago, when the fact was revealed that there were six professional "witchmasters" in the county, and that when the devil got possession of a man and was not disturbed in his tenancy for two months $5 was the smallest sum for which he could be evicted. The modus operands is to ent a circle on a white oak tree and lure the devil to it, which he does with a noise like thunder and a vehemence that splits the tree to splinters. The patient is then corked up, as it were, with prayers and charms. A case of bigamy at Eden, in this state, in March last, showed that an old man named Benedict Smith bad convinced a woman and her three daughters that they were possessed and that he alone could cure them, the cure involving their marriage to him. The ease of Catharine Sylvia, at New Bedford, in March last, proved a humbug, but was none the less interesting because of the enthusiasm with which the people accepted the theory that the girl was a witch, and it is only a little while since the Davenport, Iowa, papers chroni cled the death of "Mary; the Witch," and gave an appetizing inventory of her professional possessions, her "cabinet" containing a cat's skull, a chick en's head, bats' wings, toads' feet, spiders' webs, various bones of various animals, dried blood and eyes of owls and cats deposited in various places wrapped in paper. Leaving out of the question the Voudoo priestesses and the Spiritualist me

diums it is safe to say that the professors of witcheraft in the United States are numbered by hundreds and derive an aumual revenue from the credulous which it would take at least seven figures to ex-Though witchcraft is not so public and profitable a business in England, the beief in witches is even more generally held. around the hut, and amid their Within the last few years one case has been reported where the parson of the the whole crowd remained until it was parish was appealed to to cut a sod from the alleged witch's grave to stop her man was offered a bribe of $16.50 to report nightly promonades for evil purposes, and the burning as accidental, he informed on two young men were brought before the courts for knocking down an old woman and drawing blood from her with a knife, so as to release their sister from ber spells. At Sheffield, in November, 1880, Agnes Johnstone was sent to jail for three weeks for obtaining C5 83, from Margaret Devaney, through a promises of ruling her planet" and bring her a fortune through the agency of subterranean spirits. The witch had, her duye testified, danced with the fairies and worked with the devil for night after night. At East Deerham one William Bulwer was fined for abusing and assaulting a girl named Christiana Martins because she was a partner in the witch industry with her mother, his testimony being as follows: "Mrs. Martins is an old witch and she charmed me and I got no skep for her for three nights, and one night at 11:30 o'clock I got up because I as they went out the husband exclaimed: could not sleep and went out and found a 'walking toad' under a clod that had been dug up with a three pronged fork. She is a bad old woman. She put this toad under there to charm me and her witcheraft delies extinction. It was re daughter is just as bad, gentlemen. She would bewitch any one. She charmed me and I got no rest day or night till I found causing grievous famine, would devastate this 'walking toad' under the turf. I got the toad out and put it under a cloth and would fall. To avert this the people were took it upstairs and showed it to my told to get six black and six white beads, mother and 'throwed' it into the pit in the garden. I can bring it to you and show it to you, gentlemen. At Dudley in June last a professional witch came to grief and the jail for "selling a bottle of and to wear them around the neck, and no harm would come to them, and all the instuff to burn at midnight" to a woman who, though admitting that this practitioner was a fraud, insisted that she her self was bewitched. At Taunton the town council had last year to advertise for a new keeper and matron of the sanitary hospital, the last incumbents having resigned because one of the nurses persisted in "burning dragon's blood" so as to injure her superior's health. The husband was as firm in this belief as his wife. In North Devon a small farmer, who had been bewitched by his dead relative's spirit, had to import a white witch from Exeter to break the spell by a solemn burning of herbs and incense in a brazier, with proper incantations, and it may be added that the white witch insisted on receiving his fees and mileage in advance and stipulated that he was to be fed on fresh beef during his absence in Exeter, the farmer's enstomary diet of bacon and cheese being unfitted for the noutishment of those having to wrestle with demons and the powers of the air. The London Doily News is authority for the statement that "today in England women of bad temper and a certain originality of character deliber-ately give themselves out to be witches. They win some respect and exercise some influence. One woman has a this moment a reputation for keeping seven little familiar spirits, which leap out of her mouth, tike the red mouse from the lips of the fair witch in 'Faust.' A witch often lowers the rent of the adjacent cottages and demoralizes a whole neighborhood. The last legal execution in England for withcraft occurred in 1716, but in 1863 a reputed wizard was drowned in a pond at the village of Hedding-ham, in Essex, not forty miles from London, while in 1867 "Dr. Harris," was committed for trial at the Radnershire assizes for duping persons into the belief that their ailments were caused by their belief "witched" and for professing to cure them by giving them charms to wear suspended round their necks.

At Havay, in Belgium, in June last, a peasant not only lost his child but his cow, and consequently consulted the village wise man, or devin, who said: "Go home and to-morrow morning burn the first person that crosses your doorstep. That person will have been the cause of your ills. I will take care that God sends him." The countryman went home as directed and with the aid of his spouse presepi2-lycodeow&w they laid her. She had the wit to confess her guilt and beg for a priest, and when the priest came he liberated her, but not till she had been fearfully burned. The tribunal of Mons laid its iron hand on the culprits, sent them to jail for sixty and forty days and made them pay $60 damages to their victim. In the south of France a similar charm is in vogue. If you are worried by witches you have but to steal a new kettle, put into it all the able and boil it furiously. As soon as the metal begins to sing keep an eye on the door and the first person to enter will be the witch, obeying an irresistible impulse. Upon clubbing the witch vehemently the evil spell will be broken. At Charleroi, in Belgium, tour women were convicted recently of swindling by pretended sorcery Their practice was to select old women who had come into property and blackmail them under the threat of allowing the spirits to kill or bewitch a favorite child. One woman gave them $5,200 to secure a fortune through the death of a relative; another paid $1,400 for protection for her family, having to pay a pen-alty and apologize to the devil for being remiss in one remittance; others were bidden to expatiate their sins by pilgrimages to Jerusalem, which the leading witch undertook to perform in their stead and from which she returned with satisfactory vouchers in the form of fragments of the cross and stones from the sepulchre. [Note.-The witch wouldn't make a pil grimage unless duly primed with champagne.] There was an extra charge when the witch returned from Jerusalem with her clothes torn and her face scratched in a personal encounter with the devil. One young lady paid $1,600 for the privilege of marrying the devil, who sent her a contract in due form signed "Satan" in blood, and another $2,000 for the fiend's assistance in making a widower of the married man with whom she was in love. These four "witches," who all received severe sentences, kept house in grand style and entertained fash-

At the Russian village of Wratshevo, Novgorod, two years ago, there was a woman named Agrafena Ignatjeva, a widow, who had the reputation of being a witch, and who encouraged the belief, as it made the peasants bring her food and gifts in abundance. There were many persons in the district suffering from epilepsy, and it was popularly believed that the witch had thus punished them for offending her for in some way. One of these epileptic sufferers, a girl from a distant village, besought some peasants to burn the witch and so release her from her sufferings. At an assembly of head men and seniors of the village, it was resolved to extinguish the source of mischief. They proceeded to her hut, which they found fastened up. They broke it open, discovered the wretched woman, charged her with crime and then nailed up the window and door to prevent her escape. By this time over 200 men had assembled shouts of exultation; it was set on fire and the villagers, sixteen of whom were brought to trial. The three prime movers in the cremation were sentenced to slight penances in church, and the others were set free. The courts in Germany were called upon not long ago to decide a suit brought by a peasant and his wife against a neighbor whom they accused of having caused the death of their two little pigs by witcheraft. "You couldn't see any marks on their bodies at all," he testified. "In the evening they were healthy, ate heartily, the pigsty was locked, and in the morning one of them was already dead. The defendent crossed the yard during the night and bewitched them. I speak toyou, judge, as to a father, and I implore you to make her give you the doctor books she has got. In there it stands how to be-witch." When the suit was dismissed the "This we cannot lose; it is impossible." It may be added that while in Madagascar the missionaries have rooted out the last vestiges of idolairy, the belief in ported last winter that a dog had spoken and had announced that a hurricane, the district; that immense hailstones would descend and that even the heavens fluence of the missionaries could not prevent the converts from investing in beads. Thousands of the most prominent and intelligent persons throughout the land have testified to the true merits of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. We advise sufferers to use it. Cough Syrup, Price 25 cents,

The GREENE takes this opportunity to let his numerous triends and patrons know that in a few months he will establish offices in Washington, D. C., and hence would suggest to the afflicted, the chronic cases of discase, to test OMNIPATHY before it is too late. Dr. Greene has treated over 3,000 patients since January 1st, 1880, made up largely from those turned away as incurable by other M. D.
Over 1,000 deaths have occurred under others' practices, and not a half-dozen using his remedies. Most of the 1,500 have died prematurely. Physicians have lost their wives, brothers and sons, and druggists their wives and children during this time. Over 1,000 persons have been cured, and all benefited, by his methods with a few exceptions. His claim is simply to cure all the various ills of mankind by external applications of remedials, and that he does not make a drug shop of the stomach, and he will before leaving publish a large pamphlet containing hundreds of names of persons cured in this city and county, many of them very extraordinary. A banker's wife cured of sick head-ache of over thirty five years, and her glasses removed, reacing and sewing with natural vision.
