A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

The season of 1881 closed one of the most brilliant and successful campaigns in the history of our trade. We congratulate our patrons and ourselves in anticipation of a lively and successful Spring Trade.

In order to meet the demand we have made extensive improvements in our room and fitted up our facilities to present our spring offering of Select and Choice FOREIGN NOVELTIES to the public in the most favorable manner. We will be able to please the most fastidious as well as the general class of trade. A special attention among our people seems to be cheap articles in clothing. There is no good in it. We have tried it and found it doesn't pay. We will wage one of our 2000 dollars will last three seasons hard wear and look good, while a $20 overcoat will hardly be recognized after one season's wear. When it is the economy in buying trash? Few persons are competent judges of the articles of clothing done up in first-class style; therefore, we have special attention to our establishments, where can be found at all times the very best as can be expected. We are offering a few HEAVY-WEIGHT at very low prices in order to close them out to make room for our new SPRING STOCK.

OVERCOATINGS

Thankful for the very liberal patronage we have enjoyed, we have moved to the Square Building in all our transactions, and show a practical and happy result during our spring campaign.

All are cordially invited to call at

CRIMINALITIES

AND OTHER FATALITIES.

THE WAY OF THE WICKED WORLD.

The Dangers which Beset People in Various Pursuits.

At Shelburne, Ontario, a verdict of willful murder has been rendered against John Smith, Jr., aged 14 years, for killing his uncle, John Smith, Sr., last week.

Mrs. Eliza Meiler, aged 42 years, her daughter, Emma Isidore, aged 19, and her son, Arthur, aged 6, perished by the burning of their house, near Walla Walla, Washington Territory.

Mrs. W. Lewis, of Red River parish, who was shot by her brother-in-law some weeks ago, died yesterday at Hotel Dieu, New Orleans. It will be remembered that, after shooting Mrs. Lewis, young Lewis blew out his brains.

Officer Jerry Smith, of the Allegheny police force, was shot and probably fatally wounded while attempting to arrest three chicken thieves on the Perryville road, a few miles from the city.

Nelson Decker started to cross Crooked lake, in Barry county, Michigan, pushing before him a cutter containing his wife and infant son. When near the middle of the lake the ice broke and all were drowned.

Respectable Offenders.

Abraham Seltzer, for many years a reputable member of the Chicago board of trade, has recently become a "financial wreck," and is accused of having swindled various members of the board out of amounts aggregating more than $20,000. His victims lose from $1,000 to $4,400 each.

Another fraud of ex-City Treasurer Palmer of Newark, N. J., has been discovered—a warrant dated September 20, 1877, for $6,706, "payable to the order of Mutual Benefit Life insurance company, for the Springfield and endorsed 'F. A. Palmer, for the Mutual Benefit insurance company.'" The officers of the company say Palmer was never authorized to endorse a check for them, and they never had any such claim against the city. By holding the check up to the light it can be seen that the original endorsement was erased and that of Palmer substituted.

The Ravages of smallpox.

Seventy-nine new cases of smallpox and 25 deaths were reported in Pittsburgh last week.

The disease has appeared in Pennington, N. J., Pittsfield, Massachusetts, and Holland, Vt.

One hundred and sixteen new cases of smallpox and fourteen deaths were reported in Cincinnati last week. There are now 188 cases in that city under treatment.

Only six new cases were reported in Pittsburgh yesterday, and five in Allegheny City.

Burned to Death.

Addie Hahson, 18 years of age, of No. 38 Allen street, Frankfort, while engaged in cooking, yesterday afternoon, met with a terrible accident. While stooping over the stove her clothing became ignited, and before aid could be rendered, she was enveloped in flames. She ran screaming into the street and then fell exhausted. She was removed into the house, where she died soon after.

Impending Starvation.

Great privations are reported in the southern part of Illinois, owing to the failure of last year's crop and starvation is the result in many localities, unless more relief is afforded. The counties suffering most are Crawford, Franklin, Gallatin, Hamilton, Jefferson, Lawrence, Marion, Perry, Saline, Union, Wabash and Wayne.

Obituary.

Major Charles A. Webb, of the Sixteenth Infantry, died at Fort McKavett, Texas, on the 1st ult., of congestion of the lungs.

Sullivan Caveno, prominent lawyer, of Lockport, New York, is dead. He was one of the three commissioners who revised the new code of civil procedure for New York state.

Miss Elizabeth Hazard, a wealthy and philanthropic lady, died at her residence in Newburgh, Rhode Island, yesterday morning. She was one of the plaintiffs in the Credit Mobilier suits against Thomas C. Durand, in 1874, and was known as a writer of poetry.

Dr. Charles F. Stansbury, a prominent physician and one time leading writer on the National Intelligencer, died suddenly in Georgetown, District of Columbia, on Wednesday. He was 61 years of age.

THE END OF TWO WEEKS.

How a Troy Man and His Wife Died from Cold and Want with $2,000 in the house.

In Troy a lawyer was called at midnight to draft a will for Lawrence Ager. The attorney found Ager and his wife at the point of death, the woman suffering from hemorrhage of the lungs. Ager informed the lawyer that he had over $2,000 to the disposal of. On Saturday Ager sent for his lawyer, and placed in his keeping four small bags containing $1,500. He had lived in privation, and no one supposed he had money. At the direction of the dying man, two pockets in his trousers were cut open and $400 in gold were found in rotten bags. He had the gold in 83 coins of the issue of 1856 and in 81 pieces issued in 1852 and 1853. An iron pot contained $43 in gold and a teapot $15. The money opportunity existed for some university student to be overlooked.

THE JEANETTE.

The following important dispatch was received direct from Lieutenant Danenhöwer, at Irkutsk:

"Our three boats left Semenovsky Island on the morning of September 12, bound for Barkin, ninety-five miles distant in the shallow water. The boat was abandoned two miles from the beach, and our party landed and reached the deserted village of Sagapp. We cached the log books and proceeded south on September 10.

Lieutenant DeLong's last record which we have found reads as follows: 'Saturday, October 1, 1881. Fourteen of the officers and men of the Jeanette reached this hut on Wednesday, September 29, and having been forced to wait for the river to freeze over, are proceeding to cross to $40 in cash and bank books representing deposits of $4,000.

Sixty Bantornes Present.

Harvard Students Appearing as Zealous Disciples of the Celebrated Esthetic.

Boston Dispatch to N. Y. Sun.

A clever use of flattery this evening failed to capture Boston for Oscar Wilde. He was received by an immense audience. Some three or four thousand people were packed into Music hall. It was given out in advance that the Harvard students intended to give the celebrated esthetic a rousing reception, and it is safe to say that three-fourths of the crowd saw the fun was in a respectable audience, in which there were no prominent persons.

The vicinity of the hall rang with the Harvard "Rah! Rah! Rah!" before the lecture, and at about 7 o'clock there entered a procession of sixty young Bantornes. The freshmen were clad in exaggerated imitation of Oscar's well-known costume, including dress coats, knee breeches, and flaring neckties of striking colors. Several wore immense wigs, and all had licks in their buttocks and carried big snowshoes. They entered as Deo thoro came upon the stage in "Patience," and took seats in the two front rows. The lecturer made his appearance shortly afterward, and received very much the same reception that had been given his imitators. On his coming in sight the great crowd broke into loud applause, which was changed to immoderate laughter by the time the lecturer had reached the desk. He had discarded the knee breeches, but otherwise his raiment was the same as that in which he has appeared in other places. Oscar was not slightly discomfited by the doubtful greeting, and quickly silenced his grinning listeners by expressing the honor he felt in appearing in Boston, which, he said, is the only city in America that has given a school of thought and philosophy to Europe. He was evidently prepared for the college boys, for he added that he was also honored at seeing about him such evidences of art. He had no doubt that these were young men sincere in their admiration of art, but for the first time in his life he breathed a silent prayer to be delivered from his disciples. He felt like quoting from Wordsworth

"Turn from these bold, bad men."

The audience applauded heartily. The young men on the front seats were squealed into leaving the hall, averaged as they were around them, but their fellow students supplied the deficiency in the way of demonstration.

Oscar proceeded with his regular lecture. The crowd listened to the dull effeminate monotone very patiently for nearly fifteen minutes, when many began to leave and the snuff-box fans in the audience began to flutter ominously. Presently the lecturer passed to drink a glass of water. After a moment a rattle of clapping and stamping began, which continued for some time after the speaker had retired. It was ready to recommence. There were quite a number of true worshippers in the audience, and they soon manifested their disapproval by vigorous hissing. The performance was several times repeated. Wilde bore it bravely for at least half an hour, evening up his torments to what he began to interrupt him after attempting to begin. He was hoarse and in rather bad voice, having to resort frequently to the glass of water by his side. This was each time made the sign of his defeat, and hissing and hissing in condemnation of it, until the lecture was finished.

The sixty Bantornes filed out as they entered. Before the audience rose to leave the hall, they were the only ones whose enjoyment of the evening's entertainment had not been as complete as they anticipated. Wilde remarked, with evident satisfaction, that "the young men rather lapsed into acquiescence," but his impressions of Boston estheticism are not entirely pleasant.

Writes as New Haven.

Oscar Wilde lectured in Peck's opera house, New Haven, to an audience of 1,200 people, including 200 Yale students, most of whom were in the galleries. There was an evident intention on the part of students to "guy" the lecturer. A mammoth snowfall was displayed in one of the front seats before Mr. Wilde began, but this was suppressed at the suggestion of an attendant. The students frequently applauded passages that called for no notice whatever, but the remainder of the audience, and for that matter, most of the students themselves, were occupied in trying to follow the lecturer and get some idea of his meaning. He was given a respectful hearing. He said that the first impulse given him and his associates in the revival of the study of beauty in England and its application to the domestic life of the people was given them through a casual meeting with John Ruskin while at Oxford. They were on the way to the river, and Ruskin asked whether esthetic development should be all about not having anything toward elevating the condition of the common people, and enunciating their taste for the beautiful? The admirers of Ruskin became enthusiastic, and devoted their energies toward the development of the ideal. A swampy evening of between two villages near Oxford, and the disciples of art began by becoming laborers, wheeling wheelbarrows and carting stone in the building of a roadway across the swamp. In another part of the lecture Mr. Wilde related to Yale's triumph in the field and on the river, and said this should not be wholly the students' ambition. A Greek statue erected in a college gymnasium should be a reminder of the ultimate object of the Grecian love for athletic sports; that the admiration for physical culture was inspired by a love for the embodied art. There was room for a distinctive school of American artistic beauty, founded upon whatever is natural to American fields and forests, there being nothing in their flowers or foliage too important or insignificant to be overlooked. A like Yale to exist for this school.

Delaware River and Lancaster Railroad.

A Railroad to be Built by the French Creek Valley, from Phoenixville to Lancaster, at an Early Date.

Post-Office Ledger.

Some men, in spite of themselves, will be favored by fortune. For more than thirty years the industry of the Valley of French Creek, in Chester county, has been praying that somebody would come along and build them a railroad that would stream and let them reap the benefit by an increase in the value of their property. Whenever the matter was discussed they all agreed that it was a good thing, and were wishing it all sorts of good luck, but whenever anyone asked them to give it substantial aid, by taking stock, they stuck their fingers in their ears and did not hear a word of it. They would not follow Jupiter's advice to the Greek market man, whose cart stuck in the mud, to "put his own shoulder to the wheel, because God helped only those who helped themselves," and thus far the road has not been built.

However, there is now good authority for saying that the line (Delaware River and Lancaster railroad) will be built, in the very near future; and before the woods will have put on their livery of green, the engineers will be locating the road, either with or without the aid of the moneyed men of the valley.

It will extend from Phoenixville to Lancaster, by way of Morgantown, Churchtown, New Holland, Bearville, and Eden. It may run by way of the Falls, or it may take up the South branch by way of Warwick, whichever route may appear most feasible, but it will not connect with the Pickering Valley road, but run into Phoenixville by another route.

The party having the matter in charge are abundantly able to do what they propose, and that the road will be built almost beyond a doubt. One thing, however, is worthy of note, and that is, how outside capital, the people along the line will not be consulted to any great extent about its location, nor where stations shall be located. The Delaware Valley company will consider mainly their own interests and convenience.

As we said before, the favors of fortune will be forced on some, but those who will be passed by will bear in mind that they refused to help themselves when they could help themselves. We may give further particulars before long.

Don't cater to it, but if you do, nothing will cure the ailments of the eye as well as Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cents.

It is the habit of fully to wait until you are in bed with disease that may last months, when you can be cured by the use of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. We have known sickly families made the healthiest by it.—Philadelphia Ledger.
