APPLES.

LOCAL VS. FOREIGN VARIETIES.

Many a man by Calvin Cooper, before the Lancaster Agricultural Association, March 6, 1882.

By the term foreign I do not intend to convey the idea that I allude to fruits brought from "foreign countries," but varieties from other sections of our own county.

It will doubtless be asserted, that climatic changes are taking place in all newly settled neighborhoods. The removal of forests, will, in itself, bring about changes not perceptible at the time.

The idea that I more particularly wish to impress is the common error in bringing varieties of apples from distant parts of the same State, or even the same county, for indeed what might be considered first quality in the higher altitudes of Northern Lancaster county would be of little value in the southern section, and vice versa.

It is not surprising that in the same degree of soil would not supply the requisites of its native locality. Then, too, what would flourish in the eastern section, along the Mine Hill and Welsh mountain ridges, might not be worthy of mention in the fertile valleys of the western end.

The grave error of our own vicinity might be attributed to several causes. The high price of land and a want of interest by our agriculturists in horticulture, has caused many to neglect their apple orchards, as unprofitable, and let the trees perish for the want of proper nourishment and care.

It is not surprising that in the same degree of soil would not supply the requisites of its native locality. Then, too, what would flourish in the eastern section, along the Mine Hill and Welsh mountain ridges, might not be worthy of mention in the fertile valleys of the western end.

peering to get a late winter keeper, notwithstanding the fruit can be brought and kept through the winter. When grown before the season is longer, and the latter part of the fruit is warm, they ripen so early and begins to decay before the cool weather sets in.

By the unthinking, hard-work has been considered a weed, and its luxuriant growth, unpleasant smell, etc., has rendered it, to those who know it, a nuisance, and yet the root has long been acknowledged by savants as most valuable as a diuretic, aperient and blood purifier.
