THURSDAY EVENING, MARCH 9, 1882.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

"BOOMING" TOWNS AND RAILROADS.

THE TENDERFEET AND THE NATIVES.

Every Man's Backyard His Private Cemetery

Special Cor. INTELLIGENCER.

The traveler by the Northern Pacific from Saint Paul north and west will see little to convince him of the truth of the statements made by officers of the company and "boomers" as to the unrivalled fertility of the country tributary to the road. The land is flat and sandy, with just enough stunted oak growing upon it to advertise its poverty, so that he who runs by rail may read. There may be, and there probably is, good land and plenty of it within easy reach of the road on both sides; but the bareness of the civil engineer leads him always to run his line through a desert if he can find one by going fifty miles out of his way. The civil engineer is a gentleman, who is employed by a railroad company, to locate its road on the most eligible route between two points to be connected. He is the hardest worked and the poorest paid of all animals on the planet, except the army mule. Hence his whole soul becomes possessed with a burning desire for vengeance. He takes it out of the passengers who travel on the road after it is built by locating his line always through the most uninviting section of the region he is working in. He thus projects his revenge with fiendish joy far into the indefinite future and lies down to die happy in the thought that no eye of passenger by his line shall ever rest on anything pleasant.

The giant pine growing on the upper Mississippi keeps a small army of loggers at work during the winter, and the business of supplying them supports quite a number of lively towns on the railroads nearest the timbered region—the towns are particularly lively when the loggers are going into and coming out of the woods.

I used the word "boomer" a little while ago. It is applied here to everything fast, everything strong, and particularly to everybody who has the lubricity of tongue and the elasticity of conscience to make the outside world and the "tenderfoot" believe that Dakota is the garden of the world. "Boom" editions of newspapers are issued, devoted to "booming" the town in which the paper is printed. All the property holders in a town are bound to "chip in" to aid in getting out these editions, which are printed by hundreds of thousands, in many languages, and scattered broadcast over two continents. Maj. Edwards, editor of the Argus, is the champion "boomer" of the Northwest, and therefore of the universe. Every number of his paper would be a "boomer" for a common editor, but as a specimen of magnificent description and emigrant-seducing pen-work his yearly "boom" edition is peerless. It must be seen to be appreciated. I will send you a copy. In justice to the Major I ought to say he has a solid foundation of fact as the groundwork of his soaring fancy. So far as I can see there is no undertow in the tide of emigration flowing into this country. The people who come stay, and staying they prosper. So when I send you the "boom" Argus you must conclude that your ignorance that makes its strong statements look so amazingly like lies.

The "tenderfoot" is the newly arrived emigrant. If from the East he is known by his clean linen, polished boots and his retiring demeanor; also by his capacity to swallow taffy. The native affects flannel, a buffalo overcoat, German socks (half an inch thick and worn out side the trousers like jack boots, reaching to the knee) and moccasins. He is not retiring. He will take a contract to build a railroad to the moon if there's "money in it" and he will come as near filling the contract as any son of Adam. He will supply any unhappy "tenderfoot" with "taffy," of which he has an unlimited supply at his tongue's end, flavored to suit any taste. He can travel over the continent with no other baggage than a pocket comb and a tooth brush; is always cheerful, always busy and always ready to talk about the advantages of the Northwest.

This railroad town of Brainerd is in the midst of a "jack pine" forest which protects it from all the winds that blow, and this gives it the pleasantest climate in Minnesota and one of the pleasantest in the country. The days are clear, cold and still and the nights gorgeous with moon and stars shining through an atmosphere entirely free from moisture. The thermometer did go 26 below zero this winter and the ice was 39 inches thick; but nobody here complains of cold weather. A thaw will cause a universal growl. A Sanitarium, with a good liar at the head of it (we would have to import one for the purpose), would make a fortune. I am not a candidate for the head place in the Brainerd sanitarium and don't want to give you any taffy, but the following fact "looks like" I might be after both. Visiting a gentleman last Sunday I noticed a small summer house in his lawn, covered with wire gauze, evidently carefully kept, and in the centre what looked to me like a grave. I asked what it meant and received for reply that his little girl was buried there. "There was no graveyard in the place for several years after we came, and so we buried our darling there where we could keep her resting place in order." Don't all come at once, you sick Lancasters; give us time to house the people we are already struggling with and for.

We have here the finest round-house in the West, 316 feet in diameter, holding 40 locomotives, machine shops, 800 feet in length and averaging over 100 in width, giant saw mills and one giant brick yard. "Bread and work for all."
This is not my boom edition either.

THE NEXT STATE CONVENTION

A TIME FOR CAREFUL DELIBERATION

Some Friendly Advice Not Charged For.

Gen. W. H. H. Davis's Doylestown Democrat.

The chairman of the Democratic state committee announces that the body will meet on the 23d day of March, to fix the time and place of holding the state convention. They should be careful not to make any mistakes. The committee had much better "make haste slowly," than to rush things. There is no necessity of the committee meeting so early to fix the date of the convention; a month later would be time enough. We hope, when the committee come together, it will fully realize the responsibility which rests upon them. The election of the Democratic ticket next fall is within the range of probabilities, and if the committee do anything to mar the prospects of success the party will not forgive them. We hope none of the candidates will have the ear of the committee; and that neither the time nor the place of holding the convention will be fixed in their interest. This has been done, and has always exercised a harmful influence; and has had the effect of starting the nominee on the political race handicapped. The rank and file of the Democratic party have the right to expect, and they do expect, that the political machinery of the party shall not be used to the interest of any candidate. Both the committee and the convention should look to the best interests of the Democratic party and tax payers, and the interest of no one man or his friends, should be considered. The fingers of the Republican bosses have now and then thrust into our state committees and conventions, and not infrequently they have helped the nomination of the weakest candidate. No doubt they will try the same experiment this year, if it behooves them to apply their shrewd tactics. The state committee, in whatever they do, should bear in mind that they are watched by the smartest and most unscrupulous set of politicians in the country, who will not only take advantage of every mistake, but some of their Democratic friends are not too good to advise mistakes in their interest. The committee, we hope, will realize the whole situation and act upon it, but do not worry. The times are so perilous that none but Democrats of tried fidelity should be placed on duty. Harrisburg Patriot.

It must be admitted that the Democracy of Pennsylvania cannot afford to indulge in any violent contest over the nomination of candidates for state offices. It has had about as much of that sort of thing as ought to fall to the lot of any political organization during an existence of a hundred years. There has not been a nomination for governor since 1857 which was made without a fierce and bitter conflict in convention. For twenty years the Democracy of the state have behaved in their state conventions as if a nomination was equivalent to election, and only to regret of their folly when the returns came in. Have they at last learned the lesson which they have been given so many opportunities to study? It would appear from the reluctance with which the voters are voting for the names in favor of any particular candidate that they now understand the necessity for prudent and cautious action. Thus far but few counties have given instructions to delegates and there is a prospect that a majority of the state convention will be committed to any particular candidate for any of the nominations which that body will be required to make. Democrats have their personal preferences and there will of course be a difference of judgment as to the propriety of nominating this or that candidate. But the fact that the party must present a united front and select its very best men to lead it if it would win the approaching political battle, must be always kept in view and should outweigh all other considerations. The Democrats of the state will therefore do well to choose their wisest and safest men to represent them in the state convention and to entrust to them the duty of selecting the standard-bearers who will lead them to victory.

For Lieutenant Governor.

Chauncey F. Black, of York, has been mentioned as a suitable person for Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor the coming fall. He is the son of the distinguished lawyer, statesman and patriot, Jeremiah S. Black, who is so well-known to our readers and to the American people. The son, Chauncey F., is also a man of marked ability, of unimpeachable character and has always supported sound and progressive Democracy. He should be nominated to see if he can't do as well as his father. He is a man of marked ability, of unimpeachable character and has always supported sound and progressive Democracy. He should be nominated to see if he can't do as well as his father.

With Honor in His Own Country.

We fully concur in the remarks of the Evening, in suggesting the nomination of our highly respected citizen, C. F. Black, esq., for the position of lieutenant-governor. Outside of the ability, honesty and sterling integrity of Mr. Black, which alone should commend him to the Democracy and to every independent voter of Pennsylvania, York county, has special claims to representation on the state ticket which should receive favorable consideration. York county is one of the most certain, reliable and undividing Democratic counties in the state, and yearly rolls up between 3,000 and 4,000 majority for the ticket, and yet it is a singular fact that we never had a representative from this county on any state ticket. This omission to doubt was owing to our modesty in the past, but the past should not be made a precedent for the future, but rather be evidence of our strong claims for recognition and representation on the next ticket—especially when we can present one so well qualified for any position as Mr. Black. The nomination of Mr. Black would also be a recognition of the services of the Democracy of Southern Pennsylvania, which have been entirely overlooked by our conventions in past years.

THE JEFFERSONIAN REVIVAL.

The Way to Get Back to Solid Reform. Harrisburg Patriot.

We publish this morning an interesting letter from James Parton, the biographer, to the Jeffersonian Democratic association of York, together with the views of that association. We ask for it the careful perusal of every Democrat in the state, as well as of every citizen who seeks that all-comprehensive reform which would be accomplished by bringing the federal government back to the simplicity, purity and frugality of the Jeffersonian period. This letter shows one thing very clearly, and that is that when the Democratic party shall become Democratic upon all questions, "recreated in the spirit of its illustrious founder," and consecrated anew to the immortal principles upon which it routed the Federalists, and carried the republic through the golden age of its history, it will receive a great and perhaps a decisive accession from the ranks of the old and honest anti-slavery men, who have co-operated with the Federalist-Republican party upon that issue alone. That bloody question is at rest forever. The passions excited by it have passed almost entirely away. The original abolitionists, who were not trading politicians or Federalists in disguise, having seen the fetters stricken from the limbs of black men, are ready to join with any party which shall honestly resist the imposition of those same fetters upon white men. Mr. Parton tells us that he has voted with the Republican party since its organization; but he is evidently prepared to co-operate with the Democrats, in the re-establishment of the tried and proved Jeffersonian system, and he believes the time is "now ripe for a revival of the simple and august principles which triumphed in 1800." Such a declaration is important when made by such a man. It means a great deal more than is seen on the surface. It is notice to the Democratic party that those Republicans really loved liberty, and who fought slavery because, like Jefferson himself, they loathed it, and dreaded the curse it promised to bring upon our own race, are not to be carried over to the side of consolidation and of empire. They desire the freedom of labor now as they did when they struck for it in the case of the enslaved black, and they will not sustain a party which proposes that the industry of the many shall be made tributary to the few in any of the countless forms which monopoly has taken and is taking, under the auspices of the Federalist Republican party.

Mr. Parton had before him, when he wrote the declaration of principles cited by the York association, from its constitution, and his acceptance of honorary membership implies his approval of it. How many men who "have voted with the Republican party since its organization," think precisely as he does? How many perceive that the mission of that party with regard to slavery being at an end, it has become the party of consolidation, of monopoly, of extravagance and corruption, as threatening to the freedom of trade and industry to the civil liberties of the people? Mr. Parton is the herald of a host. Let the Democracy plant itself unmistakably upon "the simple and august principles which triumphed in 1800," and the result cannot be doubtful. Let us recur promptly and everywhere to the name and faith of Jefferson, "planting our feet in the ancient ways," and reviving the "Democratic societies," which carried the day in the great contest, between federalism and Democracy in 1800. The example of the Democrats at York, Pittsburgh and many localities in the West cannot too speedily followed if we would render our great old party invincible for the conflict of 1881.

To trade with a severe cough or cold is certainly trading with one's health. We advise to take Dr. Eddy's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cents.

For aged men, women, weak and sickly children, without a rival. Will not cause headache. Brown's Iron Bitters. 165-174 & W.

"How do you manage," said a lady to her friend, "to appear so lively and so full of life?" "I always have Parker's Ginger Tonic handy," was the reply, "and thus keep myself and family in good health and spirits. See my list-165-174 & W."

Frightful Misery.

Mr. Wm. Pomeroy, Bangor, Me., writes: "I have for a long time suffered from continual constipation, indigestion, nervousness and causing headache and frightful cramps. Mr. Thompson (who has been lately visiting in Bangor), induced me to try the Syrup of Senna. It has perfectly cured me." Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. Cochrane, 137 North Queen Street, Lancaster.

The Country.

Who that has ever lived any time in the country but must have heard of the virtues of Burdock seed? Burdock seed is the best cure for dyspepsia, biliousness and all diseases arising from a weak or damaged liver or kidneys. Price 50c. For sale at H. B. Cochrane's drug store, 137 North Queen Street, Lancaster.

Visible Improvement.

Mr. Noah Bates, Kimira, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I had an attack of bilious fever, and never fully recovered. My digestive organs were weakened, and I would be completely prostrated for days. After using several bottles of your Burdock Blood Purifier, my improvement was so visible that I was astonished. I can now, though 61 years of age, do a fair and reasonable day's work." Price 50c. For sale at H. B. Cochrane's drug store, 137 North Queen Street, Lancaster.
