MASON'S CASE.

THE DECISION OF A LEGAL CHANCE.

Advocate General Swain's Remarkable Report.
New York Sun.

The opinion of Judge Advocate General Swain in the Mason case will amaze every lawyer who makes any pretense to knowledge of criminal law, while its absurdity from a common sense point of view will be recognized by all sensible persons. The theory that Mason cannot be tried for assault with intent to kill because Guiteau happened to be out of jail at the time when the shot was fired is contrary to recognized principles of criminal practice as it is against common reason. Its recognition would lead to some novel results. On the same principle no man could be charged with a numerous intent if his victim was found to have on a coat of mail, or if the progress of the bullet was stayed by a book luckily in the pocket, or if the weapon used was not loaded with powder enough to do the deadly work. No person could be indicted for an attempt to kill by poison if he administered a dose too small or too large to cause death. No one could be held guilty of an attempt to pick a pocket when the pocket happened to be empty, or of an attempt to commit robbery when it was found that there was nothing to steal.

But these subtleties have been brushed aside by the courts which have sustained criminal indictments for attempted crimes in a score of cases like the above and others analogous to that of Mason. It is a general rule recognized, both in American and English courts, that when a man intends to commit a crime and makes the effort with what appears to him to be adequate means, he may be indicted and punished for the attempt, although, for some reason unknown to him, the accomplishment of his criminal purpose is impossible. "Where the criminal result is not accomplished," says Bishop, "simply because of obstructions in the way or because of the want of the thing to be operated upon, when the intent is of a nature to be unknown to the offender, the criminal attempt is committed." The same principle has been clearly stated by Judge Gray, now a justice of the United States supreme court, in these words: "Whenever the law makes out a case against the accomplishment of an unlawful object with the intent or purpose of accomplishing it criminal, a person taking that step with that intent or purpose, and himself capable of doing every act on his part to accomplish that object, cannot protect himself from responsibility by showing that by reason of some fact unknown to him at the time of his criminal attempt, it could not be fully carried into effect in the particular instance.

No question has ever been raised or doubt entertained that Mason fully intended to kill Guiteau. Mason even boasted in the most profane language that he did intend and try to shoot him. He had every reason to believe that his criminal purpose might prove successful. He knew that Guiteau was in the habit of standing at the window of his cell and he fired at that spot. He did all in his power to kill his intended victim, and failed only because Guiteau happened to be lying down, a fact of which the offender had neither any knowledge or suspicion. To hold that Mason was illegally convicted and sentenced on the ground that it was impossible to kill Guiteau under these circumstances is to misconceive or misrepresent the main fact in the case and to show a striking ignorance or disregard for the law governing it. It is not a fact that Mason could not possibly hurt Guiteau, for the ball might have glanced and killed him. But even if the victim was safe from all harm, Mason is none the less guilty in law of shooting with intent to kill.

The crucial issue reached and reported by the judge advocate general is not more remarkable than the attempt which he makes to give it the appearance of soundness. He quotes an old edition of Wharton and cites Wharton alone as an authority to sustain his theory. But Wharton devotes page after page of his treatise on criminal law to showing that a man may be regularly indicted for unsuccessful criminal attempts analogous to that of Mason. The very case—an obscure English one cited by a circuit judge nearly half a century ago—which the judge advocate general cites from Wharton, is questioned by Wharton himself, who further declares in the latest edition of his treatise that it does "not touch the dictum for attempts to kill." These circumstances show on the part of General Swain either a signal lack of legal knowledge and comprehension in a judge advocate general or an attempt to bolster up an erroneous opinion by specious quotations from a single authority whose views he misrepresents. Whatever may be the nature of such a report as that submitted, its natural effects must be in the nature of an imposition upon the president as well as the secretary of war.

If Mason had been illegally convicted let his sentence be set aside. If he is guilty of no offence or merits no punishment for having tried to kill a prisoner whom he was trusted to guard let him be pardoned. But let not ridicule be heaped upon our criminal procedure by setting aside the results of the trial already had and possibly preventing a new one by the civil authorities through indirect and illegal means. If there is any reasonable doubt that such will be the effect of a general recommendation made by General Swain let the opinion of the attorney general be taken on the legal question involved.

Aaron Specht, a boy of 14, of Pottsgrove, Montgomery county, while examining a loaded gun, threw the hammer back with his foot, discharging the weapon. The load tore through his fingers, badly wounding them and injuring the hand. All the fragments of the flesh were removed to the wrist.
Up in Oil City a boy fooled with a pistol, it went off and the youth's life was saved by the ball first passing through—not a Bible or some precious keepsake of his mother—but a copy of Jules Verne's "Ten Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," which he carried in his pocket.

Some thieves stole a lot of chickens from Jacob Bender, of Chester county. Jacob got mad, and extended an invitation to the thieves to come and steal the balance, when they would hear of something to their advantage. They accepted the invitation soon afterwards, and didn't leave him a feather.

Thomas Turner, aged 63 years, who was unable to drink to excess, while under the influence of liquor, fell into the Schuylkill canal above Laurel Hill locks and was drowned. His body was discovered shortly afterwards by Jacob Hahn. Deceased was father of the proprietor of the Little Ole hotel.

Profits of Silk Culture.
An Important Addition to General Farming.
To the Editor of the World.

Sir: One of the peculiarities of silk culture is that it can be divided and subdivided indefinitely: that the poor can reach it as easily as the rich. Every year, in a few weeks, in the smallest cottage, with a few acres of mulberry trees, the farmer putting into seedling the old and young members of his family can make the first year after planting $50 or $100, the second year, $150 to $300, from a mulberry grove of two to five acres of his upland soil; in the bottom, of course, it will increase faster. At Silksville, Kan., in 1876, I have set 3,000 pounds of cocoon out of six and one-half to seven acres of mulberry trees four years old, after planting only five from the seed. The dried cocoons were selling at $3 per pound, or about eighty cents gross, making altogether $2,400 for our cocoon. Out of this ten pounds of green cocoon made one pound of reeled silk; out of 3,000 pounds of cocoon we got 300 pounds of reeled silk, as beautiful and stout as the best French silks, and though a Yankee girl, having never before reeled cocoon, reeled it, got a high price in French markets that year, say $12 per pound. Out of the silks and wastes we paid one third of the expenses, which were:

First month, at 75 cents per day, six days (one boy).....	4 50
Sixty cents from the first to the second month, four days (four girls).....	4 80
Sixty cents from the second to the third month, four days (six girls).....	9 00
Sixty cents from the third to the fourth month, six days (eight girls).....	21 00
Sixty cents from the fourth to the fifth month, six days (eight girls).....	36 00
Picking cocoons, at 1 cent per pound, 30 00
Picking leaves, at 20 cents per 100 pounds (3000 pounds).....	60 00
Cost of the cocoon (at 20 cents for 100 lbs) for use of cocoonery.....	60 00
Cost of capital used for shelves, trees and incidental expenses.....	10 00
Overseer and other little expenses.....	10 00
Total expenses.....	$225 00
Net profit on cocoons only.....	$225 00

This is a large profit, and I must explain that we had first rate breeds of silk worms, eggs that made number one cocoons, first rate mulberry trees and a high price paid for silk. To doubting Thomases, let me emphasize the fact that I do not raise inferior breeds of worms; I do not feed my worms on Osage orange, black or red mulberry trees, neither do I use the white mulberry, which is the brownish one—not even on the far-famed multicaulis, whose immense failure in France, as well as the United States, killed the silk culture, already important in several of our Southern States. We use only the best kind of the Moccus Alba, the Rose and Morlett's best varieties; then also a new kind called Lou and Lou Sang.

Silk culture has two limits—no climate too far south, or too far north; both forbid it. Another limit is the economical price. It happens when this culture meets with another of some importance at the same time. Here this is not the case. In early spring, while the men are ploughing for cotton, the lady of the house with her children for three weeks, has little trouble to take the young silk worms. The last week, when work needs hurrying, there are plenty of colored boys to pick the leaves while the lady and children of the house are attending to the larvae. All this will be done in April, then will come the cash money from the silk factory for the cocoons, and this will help a good deal to enlarge the cotton and other crops for which we insist on this point: Silk culture is only an important addition to general farming.
Cochran, Miss. L. S. COCHRAN.

The Old Fireman.

"Yes, there was a heap of fun in the old engine days," sighed the fireman as he leaned back and surveyed the handsome "Amoskeag" in the centre of the floor.

"Many fights?"
"Heaps of 'em. I was fireman of No. 5 for seven years and once I figured up how many fights we had per year. I think the average was 123. I remember, young man, that I have been in 600 firemen's fights."

"Ever get badly hurt?"
"Never. It was always the other party got badly hurt. Of course I have had my jaw broken, head cracked, teeth loosened, eyes blackened and fingers broken, but nothing serious. See this car? Well, one night the foreman of No. 7 closed in that car exactly fourteen minutes by the watch, but he was a poor, consumptive foreman and couldn't have bitten through a single nail in three weeks."

"Those old firemen were very reckless."
"Well, yes. We didn't think nothing of trap doors and weak floors in those days. I was counting up my old scars the other Sunday, and I think the figures were thirty-seven, not including the big one between the shoulders, where a burning timber held me down."

"Didn't the boys used to start a blaze now and then?"
"Oh, yes."
"And I presume you took a hand in them?"

"Certainly—certainly. I was counting up the other day, and as near as I could make out I fired nineteen buildings myself, not counting school houses and churches."
"Did you ever burn any one up?"
"Well, I don't want to appear egotistical, but I can truthfully answer yes. Only yesterday I was trying to recall names and dates, and I counted up seventeen full grown people and eleven children who were burned up by my incendiary hand."

"Don't you ever feel any stings of conscience?"
"Oh, yes. The other Saturday evening I was figuring it up, and I made out the number of stings to be 12,500. There might be a few that I didn't get it, but the figures are mainly correct."

"Were you ever suspected?"
"Never, and I don't want you to say anything about it now. I am trying to live an upright life, and if I were to be hauled up on these old charges it would utterly discourage me."
"Monster, you are too wicked to live!"
"Yes, I know, but come in some time when I have more time and talk it over. Come in any time—always glad to see you."
