FOREST DESTRUCTION.

THE LESSON TAUGHT BY HISTORY.

How It has Been Disregarded by Congressmen, Vandals and Speculators. Gen. James S. Brisbin in New York Herald. The waste of timber goes steadily on, especially in the Western states is increas ing with astonishing rapidity. We must work away until we get some good practical results toward saving it. I have tried for years in a feeble way to have something definite done to save our forests, but the work is mighty discouraging. Forests are felled and a man cuts down a does not cut it down because he needs the fuel or wants the lumber, but because it is handy, or because he fancies it shades bird's nest that is on it, a few nuts a squirsome chestnuts. Any excuse in the world serves as sufficient cause to justify whole country is depleted of its woodlands his act of vandalism, and the axe is and vast sections rendered hopelessly laid without mercy to the root of the tree. If these individual acts of van dalism were all we had to contend with we might rest easy; but every year great companies with ponderous mills go to the heart of our forests and fell thousands of trees that have been hundreds of years growing. One firm alone in a western state runs 200 saws. No less than 1,030,000,000 feet of lumber were cut in a single year in the state of Wisconsin. At | leg breaking it below the knee.

In Pennsylvania the forests, except small portions of the Alleghenies, have been destroyed. All the remaining regions have been bought up by speculators, and the trees are merely held for a higher market. The fires and the saw mills will soon do the work and America become a treeless re-

Look at the country around the Mediterranean to the ground below, receiving severe insea, once the most populous in the world. Compare the descriptions of ancient writers with what is said of it to day. Marsh says "the vast forests have disappeared from the mountain spurs and ridges; the vegetable earth accumulated beneath the trees by the decay of leaves and fallen trunks; the soil of the alpine pastures which skirted and indented the woods and the mold of the uplands are washed away; the meadows once fertilized by irrigation are waste and approductive, because the cisterns and reservoirs that gable streams are obstructed by sand city hall or the south front, and others torrents thunder; the entrance of navibars; and harbors once marts of an extensive commerce are shoaled by deposits of the rivers at whose mouths they lie." If we admit that trees are an essential to civilization, we may as well at once say man cannot advance in improvement be yond the rudest form of pastoral life with out the use of timber. The question naturally arises, will our countrymen go on destroying an article of such absolute necessity without some regard to the source of a future supply? It did not or could not protect the live oak woods of Florida intended for the use of the navy; it did not protect its forests in Michigan, Wisconsin or Minnesota, and it is not to-day protecting its woods in Montana or Washington territories. The Congress either does not wish to be bothered with the subject of forestry or does not care about it. If it does not then desire to undertake it, will it not give it up and let the states and territo-

In pursuance of the movement to erect a monument in Philadelphia to Gen. Jno. F. Reynolds, and of the gift of $25,000 by Mr. Joseph E. Temple, of Philadelphia, for that purpose, a contract has been made with Mr. John Rozers, the sculptor, of New York, so well known by his pop-ular war groups, for the completion, within two years, of a bronze equestrian statue and a suitable pedestal. The subscription of Mr. Temple covers the actual cost of the statue, but that of the pedestal still remains to be secured. In addition to individual subscriptions and those of Grand Army posts and other military organizations, the Pennsylvania Legislature made an appropriation which, by some clerical neglect, failed to reach the governor; but neglect, failed to reach the governor; but this will be no doubt corrected at the next session. ### LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE

THE NEWS FROM OVER THE COUNTY. Bart Correspondence—Georgetown and Vicinity-Deaths of Prominent

On Wednesday, March 29, died at his residence in the village of Georgetown, Samuel Bachman, in the 91st year of his age. What an eventful period in the progress of our country and of the world the life of this aged citizen has passed through! He has lived under the admining president. He has lived to see the original states enlarged and expanded to three times their number and territory and their population increased from five to fifty millions, and the arts and sciences keep pace with our growth in territory and population. From his late residence Mr. Bachman could overlook, on an adjoining farm, the primitive log house, with its hewn oaken floors, yet standing and occupied, which was the place of his and his father's birth and the residence in early days of hi grandfather, by whom it was built one hundred and forty years ago, doubtless then in a vast forest, all of which during the life of Mr. B. has been changed, the country now being planted with pro-ductive farms and dotted with modern habitations. Our aged friend was active in business life before the days of turnpikes, canals and railroads, and long before steam became a propeling power. To recount the inventions, discoveries and improvements during the period of Mr. B's. life would be to recount an age of improvements which has no parallel in the world's history. In the war of 1812 14, Mr. B. was a drafted soldier, but was never called into active service. Sixty-two years ago he was the proprietor of the Green Tree hotel, where he resided twelve years; he removed from there to the "White Hall," at the Nickel Mines, where he opened a store and tavern, and cultivated a large farm, remaining there for more than twenty years, after which he moved to the small farm, his late residence. Fifty years ago he was one of the most active business men in Bart township. Upon the introduction of the public school system into Bart township it found an ardent friend and supporter in Mr. Bachman. No work or duties were too laborious in that cause, and despite opposition he had the pleasure of seeing the best system of public schools established the world ever knew and lived to see years after his efforts--the benefits of the free school system.

For more than seventy years he was an active and consistent member of the Mid dle Octoraro Presbyterian church, under the pastorate of Revs. Nathaniel Sample, Jos. Barr, Solomon McNair, J. M.
