MILLIONS IN GEMS.

SEEN IN THE SULTAN'S TREASURY.

The Priceless Gems and Untold Gold of the Bankrupt Ruler of a Ruined People—The Fuuds of Islam.

The imperial treasury of Constantinople is situated within the inner court of the Seraglio, in one of the heavy stone buildings of the ancient palace. One going thither from the city must pass through three massive walls ere he enters the court where stands the treasure house, a building of dull gray stone roofed with lead, and having a height of over a massive iron. A low, arched doorway leads into the interior, two connecting chambers, each about eighteen feet square, heavily vaulted and lighted by small windows with strong iron gratings. Round each room runs a gallery, and the wall space to the ceiling is occupied by glass cases, while in the centre of each apartment is a large glass show case. There is a guard at the outer door, and at intervals of four or five feet all around the walls stand sentinels, mute and motionless, all clad in the everlasting blue broadcloth, and the fez, introduced by the last of the great Sultans, Mahmood the Reformer. One gallery is occupied with the robes and armor of the monarch as he lived. The dresses are mostly of silk, brocade and cloth of gold, and many of the figures are weighed down with jewels and magnificent armor. Prominent among them is Mohammed II., the conqueror of Constantinople, who left the mark of his glory on the pillar of the mosque of St. Sophia; the hilt of his dagger is a single emerald, two inches long and half as large. All the figures save two wear the turban bedecked with diamonds, the exceptions being little Osman II., butchered in his boyhood, and Mahmood the Reformer, whose fez is the last in the list. He appears in European broadcloth, with the red fez; the head covering, however, being ornamented with a plume of bird of paradise feathers, caught up by a great spray of diamonds. Two thrones are in the outer room. One—that of Nadir Shah, of Persia, is of fine dark wood, delicately inlaid with pearl and ivory, and having a canopy of the same material, from which is suspended a great golden bell, decorated with precious stones. The other is about as splendid and uncomfortable a seat as could be devised. It is a platform about two and one-half feet square, with a cushion of cloth of gold, embroidered with rubies and diamonds. Around three sides of the cushion is a low rail supported by miniature columns and standing some eight inches high; it is of gold studded with clusters of rubies, and the whole throne is covered with plates of gold. One cabinet is shown, the statue cradle of many sultans, which stands on its rockers like those still in use in the East. The two ends rise a foot above the mattress and are connected at the top by a bar running lengthwise as a support for the cushions. The smaller articles—there are worth $150,000 in the and are of heavy cloth of gold embroidered with seed pearls. There are bird-cages of gold, some with clocks, face downward, at the bottom; sacks of velvet, embroidered with gold and diamonds, and diamonds "samplers" of red velvet on which texts from the Koran are embroidered in diamonds; amber mouthpieces for pipes studded with diamonds and rubies; vases of crystal, agate and onyx, many encrusted with diamonds; lock-small articles—they are worth $150,000 in the and are of heavy cloth of gold embroidered with seed pearls. Manfield, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1881.

Gentlemen: I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in back and side all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the King of Medicines.
