HOW HE CAME TO KILL HIS WIFE The Dire Deed of an Harassed Husband-

Tragic Ending of Domestic Trouble. It is not often that a more remarkable story is heard in a court room than was told last week by Lawyer J. C. Lansing, of Eureka, Nev., on trial for killing his wife. When he took the witness stand the grief in his face hushed the bar and spectators into a pitying silence. He began by de-claring that he had consented to say what he would have to say about the dead only upon the urgent requirement of his coun-sel, and for the sake of his daughter. Then he gave the jury the history of his married life. Ever since 1864 it had been, he said, wretched in all ways. His wife took to liquor. She was a powerful woman -fully his equal in strength. When drunk she was violent and ferocious. She the police had to remove her by force. She burst into his office and beat him over the head with a rawhide till the blood streamed down his face. She beat his little daughter with an iron poker. "I felt like letting loose all holds," he said, "and I drank heavily, too." Once or twice he decided to leave her; once he bought poison and was on the point of swallowing it when he thought of his laughter and threw it away.

Last year matters grew worse, until night came when he did not dare to sleep under the same roof with her, and called in a neighbor. They tied her wrists and ankles with silk handkerchiefs. "I'll kill you for this, sure," she screamed. At daylight she promised to behave, and they unbound her. At her request he sent out for two bottles of champagne for her to "sober up on." He wandered about all day, shunning his acquaintances, trying to straighten himself up. "I could not be still in any place," he said. "I could not be still in any place," neither stand up nor sit down-had to walk all the time." At dusk he went home. The Chinaman had finished his work and gone for the night. His wife came through the kitchen and went down ceilar, as he supposed to get whisky; 'she often hid a bottle down there.' When she came up he spoke of going down town. "You—," she said, "I'm fixed for you, and you shan't leave this house!" He tried the door; it was locked. He turned around; his wife was right in front of him, her hand pressed to her hip. "I'll kill you. I'll kill you!" she sescamed. In a frenzy of utter nervousness and terror he caught up something-it was a kitchen chair-and struck her. He saw her lying at his feet. Then he found himself out in the street—he had no remembrance of how he got there-looking up at the dark win again in his mind until a later hour, when he was standing in front of the sheriff and uttering the words. "I have killed my

THE MALLEY TRIAL.

Eight Jurors Secured so Far-Lewis C Cas-sidy in the Case. When court adjourned yesterday eight jurors had been secured to try the Malleys and Blanche Douglass, the five additional ones being John G. Chapman, a manufacturer of New Haven; Charles B. Clark, a joiner, of Beacon Falls; George W. Woodward, a farmer, of Bethany; Robert Gates, a farmsr, of Franford, and Henry Furman, of Milford. In the two days 183 persons have been aummoned before the court. 120 of these were excused because of strong opinions formed as to the guilt or innocence of the a cused. Each of the three prisoners challenged peremptorily ten persons. The court excused twentythree who were ill or out of the state, challenged two and eight were accepted as jurors, Another panel of 100 jurors

Lewis C. Cassidy, the Philadelphia criminal lawyer, came into the court room and will assist in the defense of James, jr. Malley family are not exactly satisfied that young James' interests are being as closely looked after as they should be, hence Mr. Cassidy's appearance. It is rumored that Walter's father, Edward, who has all the money to be expended for the defense, is interested solely in saving his son, and, if necessary, would not hesitate to sacrifice young James to accomplish that end. Thus far, however, it must be said both cousins have fared alike. Messrs. Jones and Case do not at all tavor the idea of Mr. Cassidy being en gaged at this late day, and it is rumored that one of the pair talks of withdrawing from the case.

THE CIRCUS IN A STORM.

An Auxious Throng of Spectators Crowd the Ring to Escage a Drenching timid people, fearing that the tent would be blown away, rose to their feet en masse, The terrific claps of thunder, the whist-ling of the wind and the almost incessant flashes of lightning, together with the cries of the crowd, made the place a perfect nandemonium. The circus attaches feet nandemonium. The circus attaches will aid him. timid people, fearing that the tent would be blown away, rose to their feet en masse, desire to say that no doubt of the latter's bawled themselves hoarse in vain endeavors to quiet the spectators and make them resume their seats. As the rain fell in torrents, great puddles of water formed on the tent and in many places came through in bucketsful, drenching the crowd and increasing the confusion. The only persons that took a calm view of the situation were the candy butchers, who retired with the toothsome peanut and watery lemonade and returned a few seconds later loaded down with umbrellas, which they sold for a dollar apiece. Adam Forepaugh, jr., and the trained clephants were in the eastern ring when the people on the general admission side surged over the other ring, filling it completely and packing themselves to within touching distance of the performing proboscidians. From the upper seats nothing could be seen but a sea of uplifted umbrellas, on which the rain pattered musically. The circus people succeeded in clearing the rings and the remainder of the entertainment was carried out, but the soaking crowd did not take much interest in it. The concert was given in an abbreviated form, and then as the storm abated the crowd began moving out, but it was nearly midnight before the tents were empty.
