MIGH PRICES OF MEAT. Scarcity of Cat le Caused by the Severe Winter of 1880-81.

People who sell meat, and more especially those who buy it, are complaining of the extraordinary prices it now commands. The butchers say a good bullock costs $100 and with steak at from 20 to 25 cents a pound they can't make any money. Housekeepers vow that it is "awful," and boarding house mistresses threaten to go back temperature, which will seriously affect to liver and bootlegs. Fabulous stories the budding fruit if it continues. Should are told of the prefits of local drovers and a warm spell set in, the benefit resulting those who had stock on hand or contracts to get it low are advised of continued light receipts at the Chicago stock yards. Our farmers who have been feeding cattle have realized largely from the sale of them. The cause of the scarcity of cattle seems to be the severe winter of 1880 and corn have not stimulated shipments to Chicago is evidence that farmers are putting it into pork, the prices which that article brings being equivalent to ninety cents for corn. The corn crop of last year was of inferior quality, but it answers well for feeding purposes and will doubtless be consumed in that way. The mar-

The funeral of Kirkpatrick Ewing took place from the Pennsylvania railroad depot this morning at 11 o'clock, and was attended by many friends and relatives. Mr. Ewing was born in Little Britain township, Lancaster county, and resided there the greater part of his life. He belonged to one of the best families in the lower end of the county, and was a brother of the late James and Sam'l Ewing. He followed farming in Little Britain township for many years, and on quitting the farm came to Laucaster and entered the brickmaking business, which he followed only family, to Mount Washington, Md., where all times, and in all seasons, is Brown's Iron his wife owned a very valuable and handsome residence. He died in Baltimore on the 23d inst., aged 81, and his remains were brought to this city for interment. He leaves a wife, two married daughters and a son, Dr. Henry Ewing, now of Mount Washington, Md.

Fell Down Stairs.

Miss Lydia Yeager, an assistant in Rote's photograph rooms, North Queen street, met with a rather painful accident late yesterday afternoon. She was descending the stairway, having in one hand a package of pictures and in the other her gossamer. Accidentally catching her heel in the stair carpet, she tripped and plunged head foremost down the stairway, striking her head and hands against the door at the foot of the stairs. She sustained a severe sprain of the wrist and was pretty badly shaken up, but had no bones broken. She was taken to her home and Dr. Atlee sent for to attend her.

Partially Paralyzed. Yesterday afternoon, between 3 and 4 o'clock, as Frederick Dinkleberg and George Darmstetter, butchers, were looking at some cattle at the Lancaster stock yards, Mr. Dinkleberg suddenly felt a strange sensation on his left side, and a moment afterwards lost all use of his left arm from the elbow to the fingers. He was taken home by Darmstetter and a physician summoned. The right side of Mr. Dinkleberg's face is also slightly affected. No part of the body except the left arm is seriously paralyzed, and it is be-lieved this will not be of long duration.

BLOOD ON THE MOON. EPITHETS IN THE COMMITTEE ROOM

Mr. Blatce Tells Congressman Belmont He is No Gentleman, and the Latter Retorts With " Bully and Coward"-

A Kemarkable Scene. Washington, April 27.—At the close Mr. Belmont's cross-examination a most exciting and unusual scene occurred in the foreign affairs committee room. Mr. Blaine stated that as Mr. Belmont, after being warned on Monday, had persisted in entirely misquoting his dispatches and putting upon them a construction utterly foreign, he was compelled to change his opinion of him, Roane, leveled his gun. Johnson made at which had heretofore been that he was a Roane and Roane fired both barrels at with Mr. Blaine in private and followed it slightly on the head, but Roane was not up with the words, "I believe that you are a bully and a coward." Mr. Blaine, addressing the committee and ignoring Mr. Belmont, replied: "Mr. Chairman, this young man has disgraced himself. He has been put forward by those who are behind him to insult me, but he is incapable of doing so."

The scene was a most remarkable one and notwithstanding the efforts of the chairman to smooth the troubled waters and obviate the necessity for any misunderstanding, the impression prevailed at the adjournment of the meeting that the dispute had by no means ended. It is the subject of comment upon all sides this

The Scene in Detail. Washington, April 27.-A great crowd ssembled and desired to obtain admission to the meeting of the foreign affairs committeee to-day, but none but members of Congress and of the press were permitted to enter. Even with this restriction, every seat in the room was occupied and standing room was at a premium.

Mr. Belmont resumed his examination of ex Secretary Blaine by calling his attention to a discrepancy in a statement yesterday-as to the use of the word ' ciaf" by Mr. Evarts. Blaine explained that Evarts in one case used the word and in another case omitted it, and added that it was of little consequence. Belmont was about to proceed, when Blaine in a somewhat excited manner called the attention of the committee to the round-about way of Belmont's questioning; that he (Belmont)had made misquotations of Blaine's dispatches and attempted by his course of questioning to vindicate himself for having made the blunder.

The chairman expressed his reluctance to put any restriction upon the course of the examination and hoped Mr. Blaine would exercise patience.

Another scene here occurred, which was started by Belmont remarking that Blaine was trying to avoid the issue. Blaine angrily inquired what issue, but Belmout also in an angry tone said he would refuse to answer any further ques tions of the witness, because he had at tempted to place him (Belmont) in a death, but it would be difficult for it to the best makes. now show witness any consideration, as characteristics in the body of drowning it he had now placed himself on a level with might make a difference how the body was any other witness. Blaine (angrily)-"What do you mesn?"

be committee and attempted to threaten, but he will not do it to me.' Blaine-" I have no more regard for our insolence than I have for that of a boy on the street." After some further confusion, Chairman Williams succeeded in quieting the troubled waters, and Belmont resumed his questions in reference to the action of the state department in behalf the Landreau claim. Mr. Dunnell interupting, protested against Belmont's style of questioning witness, but the chairman stated that something must be trusted to the honor and discretion of members and he could not commit for contempt. The question was again taken up, but nother colloquy soon took place, whereupon Representative Walker protested against the needless waste of time and the method of examination.

The chairman again expostulated and suggested the propriety of putting direct uestions. The examination then proceeded for fteen minutes without further break. Belmont insisted upon witness interpreting his dispatches relative to Peru-Chilian affairs, and Blaine began to read from one of his dispatches, when Belmont, interrupting, said it was not necessary to read the dispatches as the committee had before ihem all the dispatches. Blaine said when an ex-secretary of July.... state is being questioned in relation to his dispatches it is pertinent to the inquiry that they should be read. The chairman assented, and Blaine then read from the lispatch a question with the remark: "I do not see how I could make it plainer;

there's all there is in it. I gave no verbal nstructions whatever. Belmont's subsequent questions were lirected to an inquiry into the true intent of instructions to Minister Hurlbut, but elicited nothing new or of material inter est. When questioned about the letter of General Grant in which he said "It is about time for the United States to step in," Blaine said he was much surprised at Mr. Hurlbert bringing that letter on the witness stand. He had seen the letter before, but believed Grant did not intend it should be made public. After further questioning as to the Landrau claim, Belmont referred to the letter of instructions to Mr. Trescott, Blaine answered that he had an understanding with with Presidedt Arthur that the dispatch to Trescott should not be published until Trescott's return and it was a great sur rise to him when he heard that it had been sent to the Senate. The associated press procured it and he believed there have been more pernicious results from the improper publication of state department dispatches than have resulted from this. Mr. Trescott considered his mission inSouth America ended and from that day to this there has been no use of keeping

Here occurred the exciting colloquy etween Blaine and Belmoat, reported at the beginning of this despatch. Representative Kassan dosired before diournment to allude to the colloquy which he said all must regret. He thought that Mr. Rlaine in using the term "untruthfully" meant to imply that the rendering of the dispatches given by Belmont ded not truthfully give its meaning and did not imply the term offensively to Bel-

Chairman Williams remarked jocosely that he regreted the occurrence and trusted no fatal consequences would ensue. A general laugh followed, in which, how-ever, neither Blaine nor Belmont joined

The committee then went into executive session and the spectators quickly left the room. The secret session was devoted to the discussion of the order of business before the committee. No reference was made to the colloquy between Messrs. Blaine and Belmont.

DANVILLE, Va., April 27.—Information from Yanceyville, N. C., confirms the report of yesterday that Felix Roane, postmaster there, killed Nat Johnson and wounded George Williamson, jr. Johnson was shot twice with a gun loaded with buckshot; Williamson with a pistol. The cause of the shooting was a quarrel between Williamson's father and Roane and a fight afterwards in which Williamsor an elderly man, was beaten. The elder Williams accused Roane of being an informer for the internal revenue department, and Roane gave him the lie. After this fight the younger Williams, who lived out of town, went there, and Roane seeing him in town armed himself with a double barrel gun and pistols. When Johnson and Williamson were seen approaching Roane he ordered them to stop. Some words ensued and Roane, leveled his gun. Johnson made at him. As Johnson fell he handed his pis-An exciting colloquy ensue; which the committee were unable to interrupt.

NEW HAVEN, Comp., April 27 .- In the Malley case the direct examination of Dr. Prudden was resumed this morning. The witness said he found no characteristic signs of drowning on the body of Jennie Cramer. When cross examined the witness said he had examined ten cases of drowned persons. When he examined the body of Jennie Cramer he detected the odor of decomposition but no other smell. He found sand in the upper portion of the windpipe. Water and sand might have floated into the body after taken from the water. Exposure to the Belmont-"The witness had attempted | The froth might disappear. Half-a-dozen new Cashmere Valley shawls, $450 to $600. Those who are familiar with India shawls will know about what these are, when we say: first, that there was nothing in the advertisements of two or three New York houses two or three months ago to the effect that India shawls were reduced to one-half; and second, that these half-dozen are each about a hundred dollars below what we consider value, taking the season through. They are very harmonious shawls; rich in embroidery, of course; and very gentle in color-effect.

The real secret of those advertisements that we have mentioned is that the same houses tried last fall to make prices very employers to the striking plumbers in high; failed; and, when they The report of the Indian massacre at rectified their blunder, called it a reduction of one-half. But there are others who like to see all sorts side by side, compare store with store, and have as much money left over as they can. If they meet a poor woman at the counter, they know very well that her trade helps to sustain the store; and that the two sorts of trade co-operate to make it generous and helpful. We meant to speak of certain black goods, especially of the silk-warp Henriettas, new a month ago, since then gone, and now new again. We said of them that the finest were finer than we had ever got hold of before; and that all the grades were finer for the money than any before. We say the same again; and are confirmed by the growth of a discriminating trade.
