THE NEWS OF TO-DAY.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

Death of Horace Maynard—Miscellaneous Matters.

It is stated that the U. S. fish commission will be able to distribute 50,000,000 shad fry this month.

The steamer Castalia arrived at Boston yesterday with 200 Italians, most of whom are said to be destined for the West.

Bishop Wingfield, of Northern California has declined the position of assistant bishop of Mississippi, to which he was elected.

John Corey, an old citizen of College Point, Long Island, was fatally injured on Tuesday by falling down stairs.

Two little girls, aged respectively 7 and 8 years, were killed by the low horse of a street car slipping and falling upon them in Newark, on Tuesday afternoon.

The war department is advised of the death in Paris, on Tuesday, of Captain George L. Browning, of the Seventh Infantry.

The safe of N. Howard & Son, manufacturers of gold chains and rings, in Springfield, Massachusetts, was robbed of $8,000 worth of goods on Tuesday night.

Two lads who went to school in Dover N. H., did not return as usual last evening, and it is supposed that they were in the Washington street church when the wall fell. Men are clearing away the debris.

The girls employed in the carpeting room of Higgins' carpet factory in New York, resumed work yesterday at an advance of ten per cent. Those employed in the body Brussels department are still out.

At the meeting of the New York Medical Legal society last night a paper by Dr. M. O. Keegan, on the "Analysis of the Contents of a Carriage of a J. G. Guilan," was read by Dr. W. A. Hammond. The writer claimed that the assassin was morally depraved, but not insane when he killed the president.

The striking shoemakers and plumbers in New York have indicated many non-union men to join their unions, and are confident of success. Several of the employing shoemakers have already agreed to advance the wages of their men.

The white railroad laborers at Cornwall, New York, struck yesterday for an advance of 25 cents per day, and compelled the colored men to quit work. Several arrests were made, and the colored laborers, being promised protection, returned to work. In consequence of the strike the roads on the line, showing 100 persons out of employment.

Edgar Chittenden, a young man, was shot and dangerously wounded in Indianapolis on Tuesday night, by a man named Ryan, a defeated candidate for mayor.

Chittenden had been hired for the shooting in Ryan's presence, and his successful candidate in Ryan's presence, hence the shooting. Ryan is in jail.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

A Busy Day in Both Federal Houses.

In the United States Senate, yesterday, Mr. Voorhees offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate whether improper influences had been brought to bear upon any senator in regard to the bill pending before the finance committee, to amend the laws in relation to distilled spirits in special bonded warehouses. He asked present consideration of the resolution, but Mr. Morrill objected and it went over. The bill repealing the statute prohibiting the appointment of ex-confederates in the army and navy Mr. Ingalls moved to amend so as to continue the statute, but to confine the prohibition to officers who left the army or navy to enter the Confederate service, and he moved to commit the bill and amendment.

After discussion by Messrs. Sanbury, Garland, Ingalls, Butler, Voorhees and Hawley the bill then went over until today. The court of appeals' bill was considered, but not finally acted upon. The House amendments to the bill for the sale of the Miami lands in Kansas were concurred in.

In the House Mr. Henderson, of Illinois, chairman of the committee on military, to which was referred the president's message relative to lawlessness in Arizona, reported a bill to allow the United States troops to be used as militia on any territory on requisition of the governor thereof. After some remarks by Messrs. Randall and Hewitt, the bill was ordered printed and recommitted. Bills were reported to increase the efficiency of the duties of the courts in special bonded warehouses; for the relief of Ben. Holliday; and to aid in defraying the expenses of the Centennial celebration to be held in New York next year. Mr. Updegraff, from the committee on finance, reported the election of president and vice president, presented a bill and report, which were ordered to be printed and recommitted. The House then went into committee of the whole on the tariff commission bill. Messrs. Springer, of Illinois, Blackburn, of Kentucky, Cox, of New York, and Flower, of New York, opposed the bill, and it was supported by Mr. Kenna, of West Virginia, and Burrows, of Michigan. The committee then rose. The speaker announced the enrollment of the Chinese bill, and asked his signature to it. Adjourned.

President Arthur yesterday issued a proclamation warning the lawless cowboys in Arizona to disperse peaceably before the 15th of this month.

OBITUARY.

Hon. Horace Maynard, of Tennessee.

Hon. Horace Maynard died suddenly at one o'clock yesterday morning, in Knoxville, Tenn., of heart disease. He got out of bed at that hour, telling his wife he felt ill, and dropped dead on the floor. He was born at Westboro, Mass., on August 30, 1814. He graduated in August, 1838, at Amherst college, Massachusetts, afterwards removed to Tennessee, and studied law at Knoxville under the late Judge Reese, and from October, 1838, until March, 1844, was tutor and afterwards professor in the University of East Tennessee. He then entered upon the practice of his profession as a lawyer. In 1852 Mr. Maynard began his political career as a member of the Whig national convention. The next year he was defeated as a Whig candidate for Congress, and in 1857 he was more successful as a candidate for the House on the Unionist ticket. He was re-elected on the same ticket in 1859, seven of the ten members from the state being of the same political standing. Mr. Maynard took an active part in organizing the Bell and Everett party in the campaign of 1860, but after the outbreak of the rebellion joined hands with Andrew Johnson, Parson Drownlow and the other Southern loyalists in their efforts to keep Tennessee in the Union. He continued in the House until 1873, with the exception of the period from 1865 to 1867, when he held the position of attorney general of Tennessee, by appointment from Andrew Johnson as military governor. In March 1875, immediately after his retirement from Congress, he was appointed minister to Turkey, and remained at that post until July 16, 1880. Two months previously he had been nominated by President Hayes to succeed Judge Key as postmaster general. Mr. Maynard assumed the duties of his new office on August 25, 1880, and performed them till the close of the Hayes administration.

Mysterious Shooting Affair.

Geo. Frickes, a young man, residing at New Cumberland, W. Va., while buggy riding Saturday night with a lady was dangerously wounded by a shot from a pistol, which took effect in the neck.

Frickes states that while riding along the road near a farm house a big dog came out and in attempting to shoot it he accidentally shot himself. The woman says that when she informed Frickes that she intended joining her husband at Pittsburg in a few days he became excited, and upon her repeating it he drew a pistol and shot himself as stated. Frickes' friends say that a quarrel arose between the two; that during the struggle the woman shot him, and that he says it was an accident to avoid eliminating her.

Another version is that the shooting was done by the husband of the woman. On examination it was found that the ball had entered the left side of the neck, grazing the jugular vein and impinging on the carotid artery, probably lodging near the vertebra. The doctor probed for the ball but failed to find it, as it had deflected downward after penetrating a depth of three inches. Frickes is in a critical condition and will probably die.

The Tin Kettle on Blaine's Tail.

Sad is the fate of a tin-kettle tied to the tail of a disreputable man, and without any respect either to Mr. Blaine or to the Tribune, said also is the fate of a newspaper sworn through thick and thin to follow the fortunes of a political flut.

The Tribune on the 24th of November, 1881, being under the necessity of finding some news to send to its readers, sent a creditable dispatch about the Lynch memorial sent to the United States minister at Lima, declared that Chili was "entitled to the legitimate fruits of victory in a war which was forced upon her."

The Tribune of March 27, 1882, being under the necessity of applauding Mr. Blaine's post-mortem Fourth of July speech delivered before the House committee of foreign affairs, declares that "Peru became involved in a war with Chili through the demands of a Chilean corporation composed mainly of British capitalists."

A Frontier Inquest.

Vince B. Hudson, in "Our Continent," an agitated stillness had settled upon the camp. There was that solemn stir in the air which renders the silence before a storm so oppressive, yet the day was fair. Upon the mountain slope one stood deluged with the effulgence of the sun as it face to face with the object.

It was a magnificent sight. The great magnificence of the landscape had led them into an affray with one Jim Stokes. Not that such things were rare at the gulch. Low-down folks might kill each other with impunity, but when the right to live of so useful and honored a member of society as Mr. Blaine's lady was infringed, the prominence of the party made it necessary that prompt and dignified measures be taken to preserve law and order.

A trusty messenger had brought from over the mountain a celebrated physician to conduct the autopsy, not that any doubt existed as to the manner of the august saloon keeper's death, for the fatal shot had been witnessed by a score or more of Hoosiam's first citizens, and the prisoner had already been tried according to Judge Lynch and sentenced to die at sunset, but they felt that the importance of the case and the previous standing of the parties demanded the formalities of an inquest.

The prisoner stood unbound before the unshrinking jury, who kept their revolvers leveled at him ready to fire if he stirred, while the rude instrument in the skillful hand of the famous practitioner cut and slashed right and left in tracing the complicated course of the bullet. When at last it was displayed imbedded in an entirely different place from where any had supposed it was they crowded about the demonstrator eagerly and watched his manipulations with intense interest, and when the bullet was extracted and passed among them for their inspection their excitement knew no bounds.

"I s'pose I don't see how Slim Jim ever pulled that tar!" exclaimed one.

"Dun my buttons if I du!" answered the foreman, with both hands in his trousers pockets.

"He never could do it," vouchsafed Bud Jones, the prisoner's boon companion, turning the bullet over and over contentedly and eyeing it curiously, seized with a sudden and irresistible desire to possess that identical bullet, although they should want to keep such a souvenir he could not have told, unless perhaps from a natural propensity to appropriate any and everything he got his hand upon.

"No, sir, he never could," sez I." "Couldn't, eh? I could do it myself and plug him every time in the self same spot. Here's my rifle on it, and a pile o' dust to boot. The chap says I can't be an all-fired liar, 'calded out a link individual among these bigwigs known as Noscy, from the undue prominence of that member and its proclivity to intrusiveness. Unpopular at all times, his brag and interference on this important occasion caused great commotion, and wild words were heard to be heard. 'So der I' from jury and bystanders. During this confusion Slim Jim took advantage of the momentary distraction to sink away, and once behind the chip shed ran a clear up the mountain, and ere our attentive eye below he seemed to disappear right into the setting sun.

"I take him, and ef yer miss yer fight me with the same weeping, that's all," was the courageous challenge of Bud Jones, who was laboring faithfully and persistently to direct and hold their attention from the direction taken by his fugitive friend.

But saw the corpse re. up properly and the distance passed off satisfactorily to those who had witnessed the tragedy, and Nosey prepared to give an exhibition of his boasted skill.

The first shot went plump to the mark, at which the excited crowd gathered about the strange target, with vehement expressions of wonder and commendation, all too much pre-occupied to notice Bud slip away with the coveted bullet. Four shots out of five had landed satisfactorily before Slim Jim's absence dawned upon them; then the prisoner's attorney, who had sat silent and apparently hopeless, arose and pronounced the proceedings irregular. "The prize is not only a big hare, but he ain't wanted here nohow. 'Cause Slim Jim never made them wounds. This weeping has been identified as the only tool found upon the prisoner, and ef you can show one piece of lead in that ere corpse as'll fit this ere weeping re. wit, then render guilty as aforesaid."

This argument was conclusive with the jury, who, after a futile attempt to implicate Nosey in the crime, gave verdict standing. "Deat from natural causes; said cause being a fire bullet wounds, any one on 'em naturally fatal, but the fatal one in the hands of divers and sundries parties unknown to the jury."

MEDICAL.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

NOTED MEN!

DR. JOHN F. HANCOCK, late President of the National Pharmaceutical Association of the United States, says:

"Brown's Iron Bitters has a heavy solid character of the manufacturer's—a voucher for its purity and medicinal excellence."

DR. JOSEPH ROBERTS, President Baltimore Pharmaceutical College, says:

"I endorse it as a fine medicine, reliable as a strengthening tonic, free from alcoholic poisons."

DR. J. PARRIS MOORE, Ph. D., Professor of Pharmacy, Baltimore, Pharmaceutical College, says:

"Brown's Iron Bitters is a safe and reliable medicine, positively free from alcoholic poisons, and can be recommended as a tonic for use among those who oppose alcohol."

DR. EDWARD ERIKSSON, Secretary Baltimore College of Pharmacy, says:

"I endorse it as an excellent medicine, a good alimentive agent, and a non-toxic tonic to the fullest extent."

DR. RICHARD SAPIEGOS, one of Baltimore's oldest and most reliable physicians, says:

"All who have used it praise its standard virtues, and the well known character of the house which makes it a sufficient guarantee of its being all that is claimed, for they are men who could not be induced to offer anything else but a reliable medicine for public use."

A Druggist Cured.

CLOTHING.

Not for a Day.

We look for results in the long run. A little profit more or less is a small affair in a passing season, but the outcome of a cycle of ten years is vital. This idea leads us to a continuous effort to create and hold a regular trade at Oak Hall. It is hard to carate, easy to ruin such a business.

The solid ranks of our customers can only be held by constantly giving a little better dollar's worth than can be had elsewhere. This thought has guided all our work on our Spring stock of Clothing for Men and Boys.

Details of it are dull reading and will not tell our story half so well as a short interview with one of our salesmen. Fifty odd of them are waiting to be interviewed.
