IN THE HIMALAYAS.

SCENERY SURPASSING THE ALPS

The Asiatic Chamounix-Peaks That Rise in Lofty Grandeur Thirty Thousand Feet -From the Ganges Platu to Darjeeling. Key. Joseph Cook in the Independent.

Coleridge's hymn to Mount Blane is not undeserved by that glorious peak of Europe; but some yet unwritten and nobler hymn is deserved by Kinchinjunga. Darjeeling is in the Himalaya Chamonix. The overpowering fact here is, however, in that everything in the mountain scenery is on a grander than Alpine scale. From the observatory hill at Darjeeling, where I am writing, more than twelve peaks can be counted which rise above 20,000 feet and there are none below 12,000 feet in the line between earth and sky.

The snowy range stretches like an army of archangels from north to east around an eighth of the horizon.

The waterfalls call from the distant precipices. The bees hum in the grass at my feet. The air is still, crystalline, holy. The shadows of the clouds chase each other over the seas of evergreen oaks, the giddy chasms, the stealthy glaciers, the everlasting snows.

The chief peculiarity of Darjeeling is that its depths are almost as impressive as its hights. The town of white bungalows is built on the crest of a wooded ridge, some three miles long and surrounded on the east, north and south by gigantic ra-vines. As I look downward, the stupendous slopes, covered with tea plantations, pastures and forests, descend in three directions, some six thousand feet in eleven miles. From the lowest point the eye can reach in the valley of the Runjeot river, below me, to the crest of Kinchinjunga, the distance, in a vertical line, is not less than five miles.

This scenery is probably unmatched on the earth, though not on the moon, in which the telescopic mountains, thirteen miles high and rolled above our heads daily, are strangely unappreciated, and yet are not to be forgotten face to face with Everest and Kinchinjunga.

The Himalayas dazzle the Swiss Alpsnot into nothingness, nor out of sight, nor into tameness; but into a rank of incontestable inferiority.

The Alps, however, have more variety because of long trial of their solid qualities, as STANDARDS.
We seldom annouce them, and yet they come and go from Oak
Hall in large blooks. Promise the Alps, however, have more variety and beauty, although less sublimity and grandeur, than the Himalayas. In the outlook from Darjeeling, while the majesties are unapproachable by those of any other known terrestial view, one misses Hall in large blocks. Promikeenly the lakes which give such a charm nent of these are the Sawyer Suitings, for which Oak Hall to the prospect from the Rhigi, the near glaciers and avalanches of Chamonix, and the half-mile waterfalls, the gigantic trees, customers have been asking and the astounding precipices of the Yose-

Kinchinjunga, forty miles distant think we were going out of more than twice as high as Mont Blane, as seen from Geneva. Mont Blane, as Last year we handled over viewed from Chamonix, is seen from a high mountain valley, but Kinchinjunga, as viewed from the Runjeet, lifts itself more than 25,000 feet above the level of 84,000 yards, single width, and thus far this year 36,000. Sun smitten Alps before me lay,
I stood among the silent statues
And statued pinnacles muto as they.
How faintly flushed, how phantom fair,

And snowy dells in golden air."

Francet is received above the process.

Everest is properly described by no one word except its native name, Deodhunga-Darjeeling lies only some 400 miles north of Calcutta and has little snow; but its weather is often iey on days when the tropical Hoogily is enswathed in a steaming vapor bath. It is reached by a half day's railway journey, across tlat, palm-clad, deltaic Bengal, to the Ganges; a ferry over that broad, yel-low stream, which greatly resembles the Missouri in the turbidness and waywardness of its currents and especially in the blown sand of the flats in the bare portions of its bed at low water; a night's journey by narrow-gauge railway to Silligori, on the outer edge of the marshes at the foot of the hills; and then a day's travel by steam tramway across the famous jungles in these marshes and along the grand ascent through Teendaria and Kurscong.

In moving up the slopes of the Himalayas from the Ganges plain to Darjeeling, the fascinated traveler has opportunity to study the vigorous tropical vegetation at the base of the hills; the gradual change of this into the oak forests of the middle heights: the tree ferns succeeding the palms and the bamboos; the mosses festooning both the rocks and the trees the trailing plants choking many of the kings of the forest; the trickling rills in the cool ravines; the dashing mounttain brooks, with their crystal pools; the far, grand outlook over the gray, dusty plains; the gleaming, tawney rivers, on their way through the parched lowlands; the numberless curves of the iron road the audacious grades up which the engine climbs, like a thing of iife: the occasional villages of bamboo huts; the sturdy Nepalese, with their broad knives in their girdles; the savage Bhootans and Thibetians, with many of the Mongolian traits make changes gradually, beginning in their features; the tea plantations, with their capacious bungalows for the masters and rows of huts for the coolies; the small, gray, patient oxen; the rather undersized but vigorous Himalayan undersized but vigorous Himalayan ponies; the prayer flags above Buddhist villages; the slight falls of snow; and, at last, the bursting into view of Kinchinjunga itself and its companion giants. At from 12,000 to 10,000 feet above the sea the southern slope of the Himalayas produces fir trees, dwarf rhododendrons, aromatic rhododendrons, juniper, holly, currants, cherries, pears, lilaes, primroses, and violets; at from 10,000 to 8,000 and lower, oak, chestnut, olives, figs, laurel, maple, barberry, lily of the valley, and white rose; at from 8,000 to 6,000 and lower, the magnolia, peach, strawberry, and most of the flowers of Germany and England; at from 6,000 to 4,000 and lower, tree ferns, plantains, walnuts, and birches; at from 4,000 to 3,000, rice, barley, buckwheat, maize, yam, cummin, mint, and rue; at from 1,000 to the plains, figs dates, magnolias, lotus trees, ginger orehide plains, figs dates, magnolias, lotus trees, ginger, orchids, mangoes, twelve kinds of bamboos, and many varieties of palms. The whole population of the place is upward of 90,000; but so scattered are the native quarters and so exclusively do the English occupy the summit of the ridge that the main portion of the place is very British in appearance. Each house is surrounded by well-kept grounds; fine, broad roads lead along the slopes; there is bundant greenness and not a little attention to landscape gardening. A Union chapel and an English church are among the principal buildings. The number of grounds for playing lawn-tennis and other English games indicate the tastes of the leisured and wealthy proprietors of the tea plantations, which abound on all the lower slopes.

The Buddhist temple of the town is, on the whole, a repulsive place; architectur-ally ugly and morally without dignity. We saw in it a curious Buddist library, of perhaps 150 volumes; a dozen or so of untidy monks and a few savage-looking worship ers. In the vestibule stood a praying ma chine, consisting of a cylinder, about six feet high, placed upright, and filled with something like a mile's length of cloth, covered with printed prayers. This is whirled by a crank underneath it and every revolution is equivalent to the utterance of all the prayers within the cylinder. A dozen or more smaller cylinders were in the same vestibule; and yet smaller ones, of which I purchased a specimen, were in motion in the hands of the priests, as they walked about the temple. Prayer flags, as seen at Darjeeling, are strips of white cotton, about a yard in breadth and from ten to twenty feet long, attached lengthwise to poles and covered with printed prayers. Every motion of the flag in the wind is of the same devotional value as would be the utterance of the prayers inscribed upon the cloth.

The Himalayas are one abode of snow and the regions around the South pole of the earth are another, deserving this name by pre-eminence. It is affirmed on high authority that a possible accumulation of snow at the South pole, in connection with certain conjunctions of the planets, might cause an instantaneous change in the position of the axis of rotation of the earth. The result would be a deluge, and the effacement of the present continents and the formation of new ones; but it is understood by men of science that even in such an upheaval of the great deep, the tops of the Himalayas would remain above the waves, and thus form a beginning for a new career of the life of plants and animals and men in a renovated world.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

Oh, My Back!

That's a common expression and has a world of meaning. How much suffering is summed up in it.

The singular thing about it is that pain in the back is occasioned by so many things. May be caused by kidney disease, liver complaint, consumption, cold, rheumatism, dyspepsia, overwork, nervous debility, &c.

Whatever the cause, don't neglect it. Something is wrong and needs prompt attention. No medicine has yet been discovered that will so quickly and surely cure such diseases as Brown's IRON BITTERS, and it does this by commencing at the foundation, and making the blood pure and rich.

Logansport, Ind., Dec. 1, 1880. For a long time I have been a sufferer from stomach and kidney disease. My appetite was very poor and the very small amount I did eat disagreed with me. I was annoyed very much from retention of the urine. 1 tried many remedies with no success, until I used Brown's IRON BITTERS, Since I used that my stomach does not bother me any. My appetite is simply immense. My kidney trouble is no more, and my general health is such, that I feel like a new man. After the use of Brown's Iron Bitters for one month, I have gained twenty pounds in weight.

Leading physicians and elergymen use and recommend BROWN'S IRON BITTERS. It has cured others suffering as you are, and it will cure you.
