Marshall—An immaterial accident of the convention; a brilliant but eccentric lawyer, never known as a Cameronian, but, like Mr. Wolfe, willing, for a consideration for his friends, to co-operate with Mr. Cameron. In the light of his furious utterances in the past, and after Brown's rejection, Mr. Marshall can no more consistently retain a place upon the Cameron ticket than Mr. Wolfe could have done. He has always firmly refused congressional honors, and his present awk ward position will be so annoying that it will be strange if "machine" intriguing does not wriggle him off the ticket.

Rawle-Not a Cameron man himself, but the personal selection of Mr. Cameron and nominated at his peremptory comman 1 and only after a bitter struggle. It would thus appear, upon the surface, that Mr. Cameron has won a sweeping and substantial triumph. But things are not always what they seem, and the man who ruled Wednesday's so-called convention with unparalleled audacity and tyranny New York Times. will probably find set before him at an early day, a dish of Dead Sea fruit. Gen. Beaver, in his carefully prepared speech accepting the nomination for governor, Davies and Greer have simply exchangd I. O. U's. with Mr. Cameron. Senator of all his scheming, the purpose of all his trading, is to secure his own re-election to the Senate in 1884. One secret of his success in the past has been the well-kept secrecy of his plans, but in this battle he cannot blind the people as to the real sit-uation. They know that he does not care a picayune for the success of his state ticket, in whole or in part, so he carries the Republican senatorial districts in which elections are to be held this year. And he will be met and fought on that ground as he has never been fought before. Davies will be utterly unable to fulfil his contract, and Greer will probably be repudiated on the same issue. In other parts of the state it will be the same, and

and her womanly delicacy outraged by the touch of the policemen's hands upon her wrists. Were she to be received by a matron of her own sex who-after being knocked down and danced upon-would call her "dear," and invite her to walk into a sweet little cell and rest herself, the female prisoner would feel comparatively comfortable and her self-respect would be unimpaired. Of course no female prisoner would refuse to go to a cell when requested so to do by a matron. We will, therefore hever have to face the problem, How can one matron drag a prisoner down stairs whom four policemen have with difficulty been able to drag to the station house a The bill providing mattens for stationhouses is only the first of a series of measures which ought to be adopted for the preservation of the delicacy of female prisoners. It is an outrage that women should be tried by male judges and male lawyers. Nothing can be moto indelicate than to place a woman in a room half full of men and to permit a man to ask her questions, always more or less impertinent, which she must answer in a tone loud enough to be heard by mean, prying jurymen. We can imagine what Miss Blanche Douglass must suffer in being compelled to listen in the presence of men to much of the testimony which has been given in the Cramer case, but we can hardly imagine the extent to which her womanly delicacy will suffer when she

by men and in the presence of men. In the interests of feminine delicacy, women should never be examined as wit-nesses or tried as defendants except in the sole presence of women. We must have female judges, female juries and female lawyers for the benefit of female witnesses and female prisoners, and it would be well if it were forbidden, under heavy penalties, for even a female lawyer to ask any woman an impertinent question. In no other way can we preserve the delicacy of the unfortunate women who, from time to time, are compelled to appear in court, and surely they are as much entitled to the sympathy and care of our legislators as are the female prisoners in our staticn

If it is necessary to provide matrons to receive women at the station houses it is equally necessary to provide female policemen to arrest women. At present innocent and worthy drunken women are daily insulted by policemen who, even without a formal introduction, do not hesitate to speak to them on the street and to lay violent hands upon them. How can a woman preserve her self respect when she is seized by two or three strange policemen, tied in a cart, and driven to a station house? Let us put an end to this outrageous state of things by committing the business of arresting women exclusively to female policemen, armed with silk umbrellas instead of clubs, and authorized to substitute politely worded notes of invitation to attend suppers at the station houses for the present rude and disgraceful system of making arrests. It is doubtful if a true regard for female lelicacy would permit any woman to be hanged, but nothing can be more certain than that it is to the last degree indelicate to permit a man to hang a member of the gentler sex. Shall the rude hands of a hangman take the liberty of placing a noose around the blushing neck of a modest murderess, and shall her last moments be made uncomfertable by the impertinent remarks of a clergyman? She has the right by virtue of her sacred womanhood to be supplied with a hangwoman, who can without impropriety tie her ankles and
