SENSIBLE THOUGHTS ON TIMELY TOPICS.

Extracts from Oscar Wilde's Last Lecture. America may claim to be the most practical nation, but in handieraft, I do not think you are a practical people. The houses of simple people, hotels and village houses, which I have seen in this counties. I have never seen so badly made things in my life-so many glaring, hideous wall papers, furniture not joined but glued, and wretchedly woven carpets.
That most artistic thing, a fire-place, is rare indeed. And then the American word, and behind him remained the girl of his choice, who had agreed to writ until stove! If they wouldn't decorate it and festoon the base with black leaden roses. and surmount it with a funereal urn! An excellent witness will sum up this case for us. The nineteenth century has witnessed well made it ought to be quite as good after years of use, and even better. The old cathedrals stand more firm and more beautiful than when first built. The old Puritan furniture is quite as strong now as a century ago. The resthetic movement depends, not on the number of grahouses, but upon the honor and attention given to handicraft.

Hints for Ladies' Dress. driven the painter to treat of knights and ladies whom we have never seen. I see no reason why black should be used as a Mentures, Sprays, Bonquets of Artificial parmanent color. It is noble only in drapery, which has almost disappeared from modern dress. More joyous colors should be used. Two things we can easily have : more joyous color and more drapery. There have been a few cras when people dressed naturally and beautifully—the Grecian, the dress of England in the time of George I., or of the time of Sir Joshua Reynolds and of Gainsborough,—these are the styles we should follow, not the dreadful fashion plates of the modern dressmaker. The hat of the last century, with its wide brim, was a beautiful background for the face ; but the modern bonnet, with its flowers and what not, is an irrational monstrosity." At this declaration there was a stir among the andience. Wearers of wide brimmed hats looked on the lecturer approvingly, but the unfortunate owners of bounets took the criticism

"Next to beautiful surroundings, an artisan needs a school of design. This should be in the noblest possible building. The designer should not be surrounded merely by four glaring white walls. Then there should be a museum, where the artisans can see designs from every age The South Kensington museum is what gives us hope for the future in England.

Soup Plates and Moonlight.

'The sense of color seems to be a little lost, because it needs to be so constantly refreshed. The designer must be able to think in color as well as in form. But he should be able to see it in the world about him. I have seen many pretty flower vases in American houses, but not a single Beautiful shaped water jar. Yet there are more beautiful shapes for water vessels than for anything else. Knick-knacks are charming, but not what we want in the present state of hundicraft. Young designers cover dinner plates with moonlights and dishes with sunsets. Don't let us eat our soup off such things, which are fit only to hang on the wall and remind us of fading beauties. One reason for mis-takes like these is forgetfulness of the fact that perspective is outside the province of the decorative artist. The imaginative artist aims to remove all sense of surface; the decorative artist to strengthen and benatify the surface alone. When he decorates a dish, he does not Intending to devote my entire attention to CUSTOM TAILORING, I have conclued to sell out my large stock of Ready Made Clothing at a figure which will certainly suit every person in want of Clothing, either for themselves or their boys. The entire stock must be sold by July 1st, the balance will then be sold at auction. Remember, these goods have mostly all been manufactured in this city, and are far surperior to any made in New York or Philadelphia. wish to create a doubt as to whether its centre drops away into a vista of hill and hollow, but he wishes to make it real and substantial."

"All the best wood carving and inlaid work I have seen in America has been in Pullman cars. But we want good decoration, not in palaces of passage, but in our rooms. Your forests in America should create a school for their use in beautiful ways. When you have your workmen of delicate hand and 'power of design, don't leave him in observity. Don't deal with salesmen, but go directly to the designer. Then you could see the craftsman as he beats the gold into leaves, like yellow rose petals, or draws it into tangled sunbeams. You art must be democratic in appealing to large numbers of people.'

Art Education of Children. "The most thorough way to elevate your decorative art is to teach it directly to your children, not only for its own sake, but as a means of education. A child is open to two influences-beauty and while dollars are wasted on gilding visited my coffee is always given me in delf, an inch and a half thick."

CHRIS AND KATY.

THE STORY OF A REUNION AFTER TWELVE YEARS SEPARATION.

Surprise and Doubt-Changes Wrought by Time - An Unexpected Sort of a Wedding-Mediation-The Trouble Happity Settled. New York Sun.

When the steamer Hohenstaufen arrived last from Bremen she brought an anxiously awaited passenger. But if anything is of speculating in "sure thing" mines, he accumulated a very handsome little fortune, which, as he gained it, he sent to a German friend on Vesey street to keep for him. A couple of months ago he wrote for Katy to come out and become his wife, and word was returned that she would come by the Hohenstaufen. .Katy's father, cious things rich people can store in their a comfortably settled farmer, sent over to the German on Vesey street what he deemed and really was a liberal sum to represent Katy in the new copartnership, and "One of the first things we must do for Katy herself was consigned to his care. the improvement of the streets through She came economically in the steerage. which the handicraftsman walks to his Chris got here from Colorado three or four work at morning and returns at eventide, days before the arrival of the steamer, and is to make some improvement in dress, spent the interval of waiting at the house Noble dress is a means of education. was going to be. When the steamer was made fast and the steerage passengers trooped out Chris and his friend were on hand to meet and greet the bride. Chris looked anxiously among the throng, and his heart sank, for nowhere could be seen any one who in the faintest degree resembled his betrothed. But his friend, who had been on a visit to Germany only three or four years ago, had seen her there, and had a better remembrance of what she really looked like, recognized Katy at once in a woman who eventually discovered him in the crowd and darted up to him with a cry of recognition. He turned to the lover beside him exclaiming in German, "Aha! Chris,here is Katy at last," and brought them face to

Now impatience and affection again took possession of Chris mere rapidly than Katy gave way to the re-awakening, and he urged an immediate marriage, to which she with some show of reluctance and evidently lingering doubt, consented. A justice of the peace was sent for, and he performed the core mony with a sapidity that fairly took Katy's breath away. She had expected a wedding at church, before a Lutheran minister with clerical costume and much a few words in a language which she did waits the warmth and sunshine far from sanctimonious aspect, rattle off not understand, by no means satisfied her that she was a lawfully married woman, and the more she thought about it the more she became dissatisfied. In that frame of mind she rushed out of the house and started for the steamer.

Chris, his friend, and several others who had been called in to the wedding, followed her, beseeching, arguing, protesting. At Busch's hotel they succeeded in arresting her flight and inducing her to enter there to talk the matter over, by assuring her that she had plenty of time to get to the steamer, as it would not return for five days. While she was held in conversation there, the friend rushed over to New York, to procure the services of Col. H. H. Hadley, in whose powers as a mediator he had great confidence. A Baptist Minister's Experience.

I am a Baptist Minister, and before I even thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine, but left a lucrative practice for my present profession, 40 years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy; "Thomas' Eelectric Oil cured me." I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas' Eelectric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria, and "Thomas' Eelectric Oil cured them," and if taken in time it will cure seven out of ten.
