To find the cause, or causes, of the ex- June. isting inactivity one must go much deeper than the tax agitation. It is true it has had a certain affect, but it is not, as so many seem to think, the sole cause. In fact, its bearing upon trade has been infinitesimal as compared with other causes.

This can be easily shown. The tax question has been violently agitated since the session of the present Congress began, not to speak of agitation prior to that. We need go no further back than January of the present year to show what affect it has had upon the cigar business, taking the production, or rather the internal revenue receipts, as an illustration, than which no better or more con- prices. Comparatively little trade has been done in old tobacco during the past week, and packers complain that business is exceptionally dull, not one important sale having been made. Tax agitation, labor strikes, inferior goods, high prices asked for leaf and other reasons are given for the depression. Perhaps all of these causes contribute their share to the general stagnation.

In new tobacco there is some activity, though there are not many buyers in the field. Nevertheless farmers continue firm in the prices asked for crops still held, and yet there has been quite an amount taken in a quiet way. In the lower end a number of buyers have been in the field, among them a representative of a New York house, who has never bought in this market before. He bought largely and

What has caused the falling off in trade then? It seems, in view of the occurrences of the past year, especially of the last few months, rather a studid question to ask. Still there are many, who ask it without getting a satisfactory answer, if any at all.

Many shrug their shoulders and say:
"Well, if it isn't the tax agitation, then I don't know what it is."

Does not every one able to read know higher in price this year than they were. The supply of new potatoes, for an instance, has been kept up by large invoices from the South, where the crop has been good. Onions have not been more expensive. Peas have been scarce and consequently very dear, and the demand has been light. The butchers say meats have been high because they have been scarce. The present rates are more than they have been for years. The severe winter and been for years. The severe winter and the storms killed the cattle in large numbers in the West and there has been a strong demand from Europe for such as

There are other things of minor importance which have brought about the present condition of affairs, among which may, perhaps, be men tioned a falling off of exports, while some food products we have had to import at high prices or do without them.

Can any one now fail to see how much tax agitation has had to do with the present condition of trade?
