state normal school, the elder of the two societies whose friendly rivalry engages the active interest of nearly all the students, last night added another to the series of memorable anniversary celebrations which have shed lustre upon it and the history of the school. The anniversaries of the college societies and of the Page's more immediate rival are over, so that it was left to it to undertake to surpass all the previous literary events of the season, and certainly the exercises of its anni-versary suffered nothing by comparison with any that had gone before. The at tendance of old members, trustees and friends of the school was unusually large, and from an early hour yesterday afternoon until the bell summoned the audience into the chapel, the campus presented an animated scene. The trees and flowering shubs on the fine grounds in front of the literary halls are now in their spring beauty, and groups of gaily dressed promenaders and throngs of visitors, rejoicing in reunions with old friends, lent life to the scene. The honorary orators and many visiting patrons and friends of the school were hospitably received and entertained and were given every facility to inquire into and ascertain the modes of operation which have made this the first normal school of the state, and a model of practical success for the whole country.

Words of Welcome.

At 8 p. m. Prof. D. W. Bartine, of Philadelphia, presiding and with Miss Jessie F. Warfel, of Lancaster, at the secretary's desk, the exercises opened with the rendition, by Surman's orchestra, of an over-"Die Vier Haimonskinder," by ture Balfe ; prayer by Rev. David Anderson, of the Octoraro U. P. church, Bart township. The orchestra played Aronson's "March Triomphale," after which President Bartine formally extended the welcome of the society to the guests of the occasion. He dwelt upon the importance and significance of the occasion, as reuniting the parted currents of literary association and fraternity. Referring to the history, the work and the personnel of the society, he traced them from the origin of the school itself and pronounced it a most important adjunct to the main institution. Its membership has reached over 3,000 and its influence has been commensurate. Its members of nearly a whole generation delight to meet in reunion when the society invites them to such a repast as that which is spread ou such occasions. To the professors, the Normalites, the visitors from ontside the normal gates, the presiding officer extended a grace-Elegant assortment of LACE MITTS at all ful and earnest welcome. The spirit of the living teacher is the spirit of the Page ation that " all men are created free and equal.". The truth which was first as-BROWN'S IRON BITTERS. serted in 1776, was given emphatic estab-lishment in 1863. And in the elements of heroic character the boys in blue were equal to the Continentals. Of the problems which American liberty involves, a chief one is that of broad, general education, to the end that government of the people and by the people might be preserved for the people. Whatever the general government can do within the range of practical limitation should be done to promote the diffusion of general intelligence in order that we may approximate to that high culture which marked old Athens when her artisans and common people were judges of art and critics of literature. Mr. Smith deprecated the idea which had been advanced by Governor Robinson, of New York, that that diffusion of knowledge and the higher popular education produce a dangerous discontent. The spoils system was rigorously scored as a menace to American liberty and Garfield was extolled as a victim to it. Sooner (r later the people will win their fight for civil service reform against the demagogue. Liberty is not always a charmer which charms so sweetly. The revolutionary period was seven years of gloom, our civil war was four years of sorrow and after seventeen years of peace subtle dangers still confront us; but in an eloquent peroration, at which culminated the ap-plause with which the whole address had been interrupted, the orator indulged in bigh hopes for the future of the republic.

More Recitations.

Miss Crompton read Holmes' "How the Old Horse Won the Bet," and in response to loud calls related how the white bootblack blacked the black bootblack's boots. She was even more attractive and popular in this than in the former selection, and the audience, late as it was, would have been glad to recall her. The vocal trio, "Row Us Swiftly," by Miss Anna L. Stauffer, Miss Etta Lawrie and Mr. D. R. Baer, was one of the gems of the evening. Prof. J. F. Surman played a violin solo, and with a vocal quartet, "Sleep, Gentle Lady," by Misses Stauffer and Lawrie and Messrs. Baer and Sanford, the large audience which had thronged the hall was adjourned about 11:30 p. m., the entire occasion having been a pronounced success.
