TO RACHEL IN RUSSIA.

BY JOAQUIN MILLER. "To bring them unto a good land and a large; unto a land flowing with milk and O thou, whose patient, peaceful blood Paints tharon's roses on thy cheek, And down thy breasts plays hide and seek Six thousand years a stainless flood. Rise up and set thy sad face hence. Rise up and come where Freedom waits Within these wide, white ocean-gates To give thee God's inheritance; To bind thy wounds in this despair : To braid thy long, strong, loosened hair.

O Rachel, weeping where the flood Of fey Volga grinds and flows Against his banks of blood-red snows-White banks made red with children's blood-Lift up thy head, be comforted; For, as thou didst on manna feed, When Russia roamed a bear in deed, And on her own toul essence fed, So shalt thou flourish as a tree

When Rusk and Cossack shall not be. Then come where yellow harvests swell: Forsake the savage land of snows; Forget the brutal Russian's blows : And come where Kings of Conscience dwell O come, Rebecca at the well ! The voice of Rachel shall be sweet. The Gleaner rest safe at the feet Of one who loves her; and the spell Of Peace that blesses Paradisc

MYRTLE'S LOVE. A Romantic Idyl of the West.

Chicago Tribune. " Myrtle, dear?"

"Yes, George, what is it?" replied the girl, glancing shyly upward. The radiant glory of a summer moon shone down upon the earth this June night, bathing in all its mellow splendor the leafy branches of the sturdy old oaks that had for centuries shaded the entrance to Castle McMurtry and laughed defiance to the fierce gales that every winter came howling down in all their cruel force and fury from the moorlands lying to the westward of the castle. On the edge of the brond demesne that stretched away to the south stood a large briffdle cow, and as the moonlight flecked with silvery lustre her starboard ribs she seemed to Myrtle a perfect picture of sweet content and almost holy calm. "Is it not a beautiful sight, dearest?" murmured the girl. "See how the moonbeams flutter down through the trees making strange lights and shadows that tlit among the shrubs and flowers in such a weird, ghostly fashion. The dell is indeed clothed in loveliness to-night, sweetheart." "Yes," said George W. Simpson, "this is the boss dell"-and then, looking down iato the pure, innocent face that was lifted to his, he took in his own broad, third base palm the little hand that erstwhile held up Myrtle's polonaise. As they stood there silently in the bosky glade George passed his arm silently but firmly around Myrtle's waist. The noble girl did not shy.

"Do you love me, sweetheart," he asked in accents that were tremulous with Myrtle's head was drooping now, and the rosy blushes of Calumet avenue innocence were chasing each other across her peachy cheeks. George drew her more closely to him. If a mosquito had tried to pass between them then it would have been bad-for the mosquito. "Can you doubt me, darling?" he whispered. "You surely must know that I love you with a wild, passionate whoa-Emma love that can never die. Do you love me a little in return?" For an instant the girl did not speak. George heard the whisking of the brindle cow's tail break in rudely upon the solemn stillness of the night, and ever and anon came the dull thud of the bullfrog as he jumped into a neighboring pond. Presently Myrtle placed her arms about his neck, and with a wistful baby's gotthe cramp look in her sweet face, she said to him: "I love you, George, with a deathless devotion that will eventually keep you broke." And with these fateful and fearlessly led the way to an ice cream

One day a farmer who was working in the field heard a great noise in the thicket and upon proceeding to the spot he discovered a clam and a jackal engaged in deally strife. The clam already had a bay window over his left eye and had lost two teeth, and the jackal was spitting blood and limping around on three legs. "Ah ! I'm glad you've come !" cried the clam, as he caught sight of the farmer.

"And so am I!" added the jackal. "And why this fierce struggle?" asked the farmer as he sat down on a stone between them. "I'll tell you in a very few words," said the clam. "This jackal went out of his way to ridicule my speech. Now, I do not want to brag, but I claim to use good grammar in my talk, and I'il leave it to you if I don't?' "That wasn't what raised the row,' protested the jackal. "I was walking along the sand when this clam made fun of my gait. I don't claim to be as graceful as a cow, but the clam had no business to say that my walk reminded him of a milk-stool running away with a barnyard."

"My friends," replied the farmer, as a hornet settled down on the back of his neck, 'you are both wrong. In the first place, if the jackal had kept to the woods the claim would never have noticed his awkward gait. In the second place, if the claim had kept his mouth shut the jackal to the woods claim had kept his mouth shut the jackal tinsanity or densumption and a premature grave.
