How Prompt Action Saved the Lives of Sev eral Hundred People in a Mississippi

Steamer-News of the Day. The steamer R. R. Springer, of the New Orleans and Cincinnati line, went up the Mississippi river on Saturday with 260 students of Nelson's business school of both sexes, mostly persons of nearly ma-ture years, on a picnic to Parker's grove, about fourteen miles up the Ohio river. The steamer, returning, arrived near the Newport railroad bridge at seven o'clock. The river is nearly forty feet high and a strong wind was blowing. The steamer had to lower her chimneys to get under the bridge. Captain Hart was at the wheel. There was some delay in lowering the chimneys on account of imperfect working machinery. The strong wind from the north struck the boat, which was high on the water on account of a light load. The captain saw the boat was drifting so as to strike the edge of the bridge pier amid-ship. He saw at a glance the peril of the position. It was too late to back against a strong current and a powerful gale. He ordered on all the steam possible and dashed ahead. The starboard side of the steamer struck the pier. All the passen gers who were on the upper deck were jostled and many thrown on their faces. The passengers rushed pell-mell to the boiler deck and huddled together. steamer grazed the pier, crushing her smith shop, barber shop, mess house, wheel house and wheel. A signal of distress was thrown out. The boat floated helplessly down the stream and struck the coal barges moored below, wrecking one so that the coal was thrown into the river to save the barge. The passengers all scrambled off, on to the coal fleet without injury except in torn clothing, scratched hands and faces and slight bruises to some of them. There was a panic at the moment, but no one jumped overboard. The time between striking the pier and colliding with the coal fleet was very brief, which was a fortunate circumstance. It was a very narrow escape from a frightful casualty. Two seconds hesitation of the captain at the wheel would have been equivalent to cutting the boat in two and losing the lives of nearly all on board. Fatal Explosion in Wisconsin.

A terrible fight took place in St. Paul's township, N. C., between two women, on account of a young man, which resulted in Francis McNair plunging a dirk knife into Jane McKellar's heart. Ladies' summer underwear; cotton, merino, lisle, cotton-andsilk, silk.

Apart from all consideration of prices, we have advantage in the largeness of our trade which it is worth your while to know about. And this is it. We can keep what few want. In underwear, this advantage shows in uncommon sizes, and in many sorts, when few would do. A lady, very large or very small, is certain to find what she wants here. That, of itself, is enough to bring multitudes here. Our stock of ladies' vests is now as follows:

Gauze cotton, 25, 30, 37%, 10 and 75 cents. Gossamer cotton, a little heavier than gauze, regular-made, $1.00 and $1.25. Cartwright & Warners' gauze merino, regular-low-neck, without sleeve $1.70 all sizes high-neck, short sleeve 1.55 all sizes pring-weight cotton (with possibly some wool, it is called merino), 50 cents; the same lighter, 75 cents; the same with more wool, lighter, 75 cents; the same with more wool, $1.25, and drawers to match at the same price. Spring-weight, three-quarters wool, $2.00; $2.25 for the larger sizes. Drawers to match at the same price.

Lisle, open-work, $2.00. Also at 75 cents (English,) Lace, $3. Silk, fine English lisle, both white and brown, $1.25; very good.

Two-thirds silk and one-third cotton (known in the trade as "Imperial Silk").
