WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 7, 1882.

The Retirement Bill.

The Senate is considering a bill which retires all officers of the army who have reached the age of sixty-two. A similar law has long been in operation in the navy, and it would seem that if it is good for one branch of the military service it is good for the other. But it is a very debatable question whether it is good for either; and especially whether if officers should be retired at a fixed age, sixty-two years, is not too early a period at which to release them from active service.

The officers of the army generally favor the proposed measure; the younger ones because it gives them promotion; and those who are to be retired do not object to it because a like law applies to them all, and no reflection is cast upon the capacity of any beyond that which is due to their declining years; and as a balm for this reminder of their growing feebleness they are given a good salary with nothing to do. No doubt great injustice is done to the active men in the army by keeping the higher ranks filled with men no longer capable of doing their full duty; and so far as promotion can be made more rapidly, by weeding the active list of the aged, who are also incapable, a good thing is done both for the efficient officers and for the service. But a great many officers are still very efficient at sixty-two years and even at a much greater age; and the question is whether the service is improved by putting them away. The country ought not to pay for services which it does not get if the capacity for service remains. A retired list is good; but these only seem to be properly placed upon it who are incapacitated for duty. If we could decide that all officers, or nearly all, are thus incapacitated by sixty-two years of service, a rule retiring one at that age would be well enough. But this is not the fact; and such general incapacity can hardly be predicated of any age short of three score and ten.

We have now a retiring law which discharges from the active list all who are pronounced incapable; but it does not appear to work satisfactorily. If it was fairly and judiciously administered it ought to answer the purpose. But it is not so acted upon; the army is full of officers who do not do their duty. They do not want to be retired, because a measure of stigma attaches to them for a premature failure of their powers; they do not go out in company with those of their years. It is pleasanter to be hung in company; and they muster their influence to avoid execution, and succeed in doing it. Gen. McDowell, for instance, by reason of the political or other favor which he commands at Washington, remains on the active list, while younger and abler generals have been retired. There is rank injustice in this; and retirement will never be gracefully accepted when it is thus obnoxiously thrust only upon those who are too powerless to protect themselves.

There is a crying need that the active young officers of the army should have speedy advance in rank as an incentive to their exertions and a reward to their ambition. Grey-haired lieutenants are not an agreeable contemplation upon the army register. If it was possible promotion should be made rapid for the efficient officer and the inefficient should be retired, whatever his age. Promotion by merit should be the rule; but the practical difficulties in the way of securing it are such that probably promotion by seniority is the only recourse left. To make this promotion sufficiently rapid death must not be relied upon as the only agency in time of peace; but should all officers be cut off at the age of sixty-two? Senator Bayard proposes sixty-four as a substitute, which is something better; but it would be still better to enact that at a certain age, say fifty, and every ten years thereafter all the officers should pass under the harrow of an examination into their fitness for active duty; to the end that if unfit they may give their place, rank and enrolments to those who now do their duty for them and get none of the rewards; which is not just to them nor beneficial to the morale of the service. Weeding is good, but the weeding out of a hale officer just because of his age is a mistake. Many men are more active at seventy and eighty than others of half these years. Age is a poor criterion of physical ability.

As to Editors.

The Philadelphia Times is fond of charging against the Stalwart Republican Lancaster Examiner that it is edited by a howling Democrat. The Times is not remarkable for the accuracy of its knowledge about the editorship of the Lancaster journals, which yet it quite often imparts; but supposing that it is right in its conjecture that Mr. Hiestand has employed a Democrat to edit his journal for him, and supposing that he is wrong in doing so, is it for the Times to cast this stone? The Times has, and boasts that it has, men of both parties among its editors; why then may not the Examiner indulge in the same luxury, free at least from its animadversion? Is it because the Examiner is Stalwart and has principles, while the Times is independent, with none to speak of?

The editor in chief of the Times has been around among all the parties; that of the Examiner has staid contentedly in one; and has feathered his nest in it. That ought to make his newspaper a good Republican organ, and it may be that a Democrat is not the fittest man to grind his machine. But by the same token neither a Democrat nor a Republican is fitted to grind an Independent organ, since Independence is not their creed. It requires a mixed political creature to becomingly get out the Independent Times. He should have had an education all around the political arena and have rested nowhere so long as to have achieved a disposition to cling to any fixed principles.

The responsible editor of the Times has been well qualified to figure at the head of an Independent organ; in like measure Mr. Hiestand has been fitted to stand sponsor for a Stalwart Republican organ; and so far as we can see, if one has the right to travel outside the ranks of his party for his organ grinders, the other has an equal right; and for the Times to abuse the Examiner for it is only a case of the pot calling the kettle black. If the Examiner is now edited by a Democrat, Col. Hiestand has had better luck in getting a man qualified for the place than he had on previous occasions, when he went down to the Times office for a supply. And this suggests the query as to how the Independent Times could properly supply the Stalwart Examiner with editors from its corps, if the Examiner cannot properly go to any but Stalwart sources for its music grinders.

THE Democratic county convention to-day was well attended, discharged its duties promptly and harmoniously, nominated a fit ticket and adjourned in good time and good order.

The delegates to the state convention are representative Democrats who will go there, uninstructed and uncommitted, to act for the best interests of the whole party.

For jury commissioner, the nominee to which office at least is certain to be elected, the choice of Mr. Wm. Ellmaker is no disparagement of any of his competitors, who were worthy men; but as Mr. Ellmaker came within a few votes of being nominated three years ago, the place seemed to fall to him this year by natural political succession.

THE way it strikes an esteemed contemporary is that Mr. Blaine took a great many words to state a very short determination. "I will be president or nothing," expresses the whole matter.

GENERAL GRANT has had his alleged losses in Wall street denied through the roundabout way of a Mexican newspaper at third hand, passing through the Mexican minister in Washington and the Mexican foreign minister in Mexico.

THERE is said to be a scheme on foot to put ex Senator Conkling into Secretary Frelinghuysen's place, and Senator Don Cameron into Secretary Folger's place, the retiring secretaries being provided for by sending the former as minister to Great Britain, and by inducing the latter to accept the Republican nomination for governor of New York.

JUDGING by the bill presented Congress, the committee intended that the clouds of dust which made Yorktown intolerable to the visitors, were to have been laid by spirits of the most potent sort. The items presented Congress contain such suggestive details as 325 cases of champagne—or 3,900 bottles—68 gallons of whisky, 22 dozens of quarts of sherry, 15 gallons of brandy, $1,250 worth of cigars!

THERE is one newspaper, and only one so far as we have noticed, that endorses Senator Logan's position on the Senate military committee as the solitary opponent of the bill to do partial justice to General Fitz John Porter. It repeats the old argument as to the legality of the judgment of the original court-martial, and to the illegality of the body that, on a rehearing of the case, recommended his restoration to the army. That very conservative journal, the Philadelphia Ledger, thinks it is amazing that in view of the terrible wrong done General Porter—a wrong proved as clearly and completely as anything about the war is ever likely to be—that any man should stop to raise legal and technical objections to the righting of that wrong when a way of doing it has been pointed out.

PERSONAL.

MR. A. J. CASSATT, first vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad company, desired to retire from the exacting duties of railway management, and it is now currently reported on what appears to be trustworthy authority that he will retire some time during the present year and make an indefinite visit to Europe.

MRS. GARFIELD has $300,000 in government bonds, the result of the subscription. Then her husband's life was insured for $50,000, which she promptly received. She also was paid the salary of the president for the unoccupied first year, amounting to about $20,000. Then add to it about $30,000, the total value of Garfield's estate. She is also put on the pension list at $5,000 a year. So she is comfortable and can raise her children well.

LEAR WILL NOT OBEY.

The Chairman of Cameron's Convention Severely Criticizes Cameron's Methods.

Ex-Attorney General George Lear, who was permanent chairman of the "regular" Republican state convention at Harrisburg has written to Senator Thomas V. Cooper, chairman of the state committee, a long letter, dated "Doylestown June 3," in reference to Mr. Cooper's call for the reassembling of the convention on June 21, to nominate a candidate for congressman at-large in place of Thomas M. Marshall, who declined. Mr. Lear opens by remarking that his attention was drawn to Chairman Cooper's call by E. G. Harrison, Bucks county member of the state committee, who, although within three-quarters of an hour's ride of the Republican headquarters had no notice of any such meeting as ought to have been held to authorize Chairman Cooper's order. Mr. Lear then declares that he will not attend the convention for reasons based upon principle and policy. He goes into an elaborate explanation of the causes that have led to the Independent revolt. Appointments are made in the interest of ambitious politicians for the purpose of increasing or perpetrating their power, and conventions for the nomination of candidates are packed with delegates for the same purpose by methods inconsistent with a fair representation of the Republican masses. The justness and truth of these allegations, Mr. Lear says, were recognized and admitted by the peace conference, to which Mr. Cooper was a party. Good faith requires that the compact then made and approved by the Harrisburg convention shall be rigorously maintained in letter and spirit. Any other course will be equivalent to an attempt to obtain votes under false pretences.

A Child Drowned in a Cesspool.

In Reading, last evening a sad accident occurred, by which one child, aged seventeen months, lost its life, and another, aged seven years, made a narrow escape. The children are the daughters of Cyrus Maurer of the firm of Christian Grunder & Co., horse-collar manufacturers, residing at 1038 Elm street. The children had been playing in the yard. While their mother left them for a few moments they went into the outhouse to play with some kittens. The younger child lost its balance and fell in the cesspool, a depth of twenty feet, and was drowned before it could be rescued. The elder made a narrow escape from falling in while attempting to catch its sister.

A MEMORIAL MEETING.

STUBBS REUNION IN LANCASTER COUNTY.

One Hundred and Sixteen of the Decendants of Vincent Stubbs Assembled at the Old Homestead—Planting of a Memorial Tree—Reading of Historical Family Documents, &c.

Oxford Press.

Thursday, June 1st, will be ever recollected as a memorable epoch among the descendants of an old established family in Lancaster county. On this day, at the old homestead, among the Susquehanna hills, in Fulton township, now the residence of Thomas Stubbs, a grandson, was gathered the descendants of Vincent Stubbs, in memory of their worthy ancestor. The time of meeting was 10 o'clock a. m., when the various preparations made by the host were complete and everything in order for the arrival of the expected guests. By twelve over a hundred persons had arrived and at one o'clock the last installment reached the ground by train from Oxford. At the latter named hour the chairman of the committee on refreshments, Mrs. Mary H. Stubbs, who, by the way, deserves great credit for her good management, announced that everything was in readiness, when grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great great grandchildren, to the number of one hundred and sixteen, sat down at tables placed on the lawn, well loaded with the best things eatable of this earth.

At two o'clock all those present were assembled on the spacious porch in front of the old mansion, where a meeting was called by selecting John Coates, of Parkesburg, Chester county, as president, with Miss Bella Neel and Lewis K. Stubbs as secretaries. Dr. Chas. H. Stubbs being called on, read a paper giving a historical record of the Stubbs family from the original settler in this county down to a period cotemporaneous with the settlement on the present farm of Vincent Stubbs—whose memory was this day being celebrated. He was followed by Mrs. Priscilla Coates, who read an essay in memoriam of Dr. John Stubbs Parry and Vincent S. Barnard, worthy members of the family. She was followed by Mrs. Rebecca D. King, of Little Britain, with a brief eulogy to the memory of Mrs. Sarah Preston, another descendant of the family. Miss Neel, one of the secretaries, by request, read the original copy of the last will and testament of Thomas Stubbs, the first known of the name in this country. She was followed by Lewis K. Stubbs, who read a copy of the will of Daniel Stubbs, the first settler of the name in Lancaster county.

The exercises at the house being partially completed, the guests repaired to the site of the old mansion house where Vincent Stubbs and Priscilla Cooper began married life. Here the most impressive ceremony of the day took place. Near what was supposed to be the corner of the wall of the old building a hole had been dug and lined with a quantity of rich loam, in which a memorial tree (a walnut) selected for the occasion was planted. During the ceremony the tree was held in position by the present proprietor of the farm and his wife, while those present threw in the earth around the roots. The first assigned to this duty was the oldest descendant present, a grandchild, Mrs. Priscilla S. Walton, of Erceldoun, Chester county, who was followed in turn by Joseph C. Stubbs and Rachel B. Gatchell, of Fulton, Reuben and Vincent Stubbs of York county, Mrs. Rebecca Richards and Mrs. Sarah Lincoln, of Cecil county, Md., and many others, down to the youngest child able to throw a shovelfull of dirt. The tree having been planted and secured by a board enclosure, those present again repaired to the mansion, where they were requested to sign a memorial paper to be left with the hostess and his lady as a memento of this family reunion. This having been completed the setting sun gave warning that the day was far gone, when the guests departed for their respective homes, after having spent a pleasant time at the home of a common ancestor.

MARTIC MATTERS.

The Latest News From Down the River.

Owing to the very cold weather to which our section has been subject this spring, the different crops are in a very backward condition. The most of the corn planted is hardly visible. Very few persons have commenced planting tobacco and it is the opinion of nearly all our farmers that hardly half a crop of hay will reward their toil. The condition of the weather during the present spring has been so very cold and blustery that even our oldest inhabitants have been unable to recollect of any spring that equalled it. Overcoats have not been entirely discarded, and during the entire day fires are kept brightly burning in every house.

During the night of May 27, a dreadful thunder storm visited Martic. The war of the elements was terrific for a considerable period of time, and the rain descended in torrents. Some of the results of the storm were washed fields in every direction, and Mr. Patrick Moss had five calves struck by lightning, all of which were killed.

The school directors of Martic township met during the afternoon of the 3d inst. at the hotel in Rawlinsville for the purpose of reorganizing for the present year and for appointing the teachers to serve during the coming term. After the reorganization was effected the following teachers were appointed: For Mt. Nebo, U. S. Clarke; Rawlinsville, Fannie Stevenson; Red Hill, Ollie Robinson; Sunnyside, Effie Smith; Marticville graded to be supplied; Marticville primary, Dora McGuigan; Cedar Grove, Annie Montgomery; Crystal Brook, Lillie McGuigon; Rock Run, Edward C. Young; Bridge Valley, H. B. Hambleton. The action of the directors in appointing applicants from our own township in preference to all other applicants can not be commended too highly.

Reunion of the Ninth Penna. Vet. Vol. Cavalry.

The 13th annual reunion of the survivors of this regiment will take place in this city to-morrow. The attendance is expected to be large, although many of the comrades have gone to their eternal camp since their muster-out at Harrisburg in July, 1865. It might be well to remember that they were the only regiment of Pennsylvania cavalry which "marched down to the sea" with Gen. Sherman. And at the muster-out of Sherman's army they were retained for service in North Carolina, and were denied the privilege of participating in the grand review at Washington, D. C., but like good soldiers they quietly waited until their muster-out, which occurred as above stated.

It is hoped there will be a full turn out of the survivors of the ninth from this county, as two companies were organized here.

All soldiers and citizens are invited to be present at the reunion which takes place in the G. A. R. hall, Centre square, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon when an oration will be delivered by Maj. A. C. Reinoehl. The visiting comrades will be well taken care of in the evening, and a pleasant time is anticipated.

Headquarters of the 9th Pa. cavalry will be at the Keystone house

The Lititz and Brickerville Turnpike.

At the last meeting of the persons interested in the Brickerville pike in Lititz, it was shown that $18,000 has been subscribed, enough to construct a good portion of the road.

THE CASE AGAINST SHALLER.

Abandoned by the District Attorney.

Michael Shaller appeared at Alderman Donnelly's last evening to answer the charge of incendiarism preferred against him at the instance of District Attorney Davis. The chief of police testified that he made the complaint at the direction of Mr. Davis, and had no further knowledge of the accusation. Officer Leaman testified that he obtained a subpœna and went to the district attorney to get the names of witnesses, and that he told him he had quashed that case and ordered the alderman to abandon it, that as he had instituted the suit, he had the power to stop it. No other witnesses being present, the alderman dismissed the case.

"From An Unknown Cause."

New Era.

The investigation now pending before Alderman Barr as to the origin of the incendiary fire started by the fire bug, Alexander Lemon, is peculiar in many of its phases. The act under which the district attorney ordered the investigation was passed April 17, 1869. It makes it lawful for any mayor, alderman or justice of the peace having jurisdiction, "whenever it shall be made to appear, by the affidavit of a creditable witness, that any building or other property has been set on fire maliciously, or burned from an unknown cause," to summon a jury consisting of not less than three, who shall hear the testimony produced before them, and find and certify the facts, as far as ascertained, and the party or parties implicated shall be bound over to the court of quarter sessions for trial.

The object of this act is manifestly to aid in ascertaining the cause of the destruction or injury of property "burned from an unknown cause," or, when caused by an incendiary act, the incendiary is unknown. Neither of these conditions exists in the case now pending. The cause of the fire is known and the incendiary is in custody on his own plea of guilty, having been duly committed for trial in default of bail. Having implicated the special officer who arrested him as a party to the crime, the district attorney caused his arrest, but pending the hearing these proceedings under the act of 1869 were instituted before another alderman.

As we have before stated, all the facts bearing upon the administration of justice in the case could have been brought out in the trial of Lemon before a court and jury. Shaller, the special officer, would have been a principal witness for the commonwealth, and his cross-examination would have developed all the transactions to which he and Lemon were parties, the jury being competent to pass upon the facts. If the district attorney is sincere in his new zeal for giving the public the benefit of the almost forgotten act of 1869, there are other cases where he might invoke its application with promising effect. A quite recent example is in point. The stock of Gottschalk & Lederman's store was "burned from an unknown cause" and a great deal of mystery hangs around it in the public mind. Here is a legitimate field for the exercise of the most sagacious jury that the zealous district attorney could cause to be empanneled. In the one case the origin of the fire is known by the direct testimony of an eye witness, and emphasized by the admission of the incendiary. In the other, all is surmise and suspicion, and the suspicions may reflect unjustly upon innocent parties, who might be vindicated by an investigation under the act of 1869, and some light thrown upon what is now a dark mystery.

Why is the district attorney so jealous in the one case, and so impotent in the other? Are the business men of a crowded thoroughfare, packed with valuable property, less interested in ascertaining the origin of incendiary fires in their midst, than the owners of a tobacco shed in the Seventh ward?

BART ITEMS.

The News Around Georgetown.

Items of importance have been very scarce in Bart for some time past. The usual routine of work among the farmers has been somewhat varied by the uncommon weather. Tobacco plants are backward, few of the farmers having them ready to set out. Charles E. Stenzy was the first in this section to get a start made. He has about 2,000 plants out and looking fine.

Sales of the last crop are occasionly being made, the principal buyers being Phenekar and Rowe, of Strasburg, and John Eager, for Kendig, of Lancaster. Benjamin Fritz sold at 10 and 2, and several others among whom are Jerome Keely, B. F. Reed and Geo. Papson, prices not known. Aaron Hartman has had his crop cased amounting to 21 cases. Martin & Fritz have closed their packing house, having filled nearly all their storing rooms.

Cyrus Simmons, an old resident of Bart, died on Friday morning, June 2, aged 75. Mr. Simmons was one of the last to submit to the removal of the Orthodox Friends' place of meeting from Bart meeting-house to the new house in Christiana, he having gone several times on regular meeting days to the old place entirely alone.

The usual quiet village of Georgetown was treated to an exhibition of pugilistic abilities, on Saturday evening, June 3d, by the Knox family, Newton, Elwood, Will and some of the females of the family were present. The quarrel arose from some little occurrence during the past winter between Morris Eavenson and one of the Knoxes. Eavenson was the objective point aimed at by the Knoxes, and they (the Knoxes) were successful in giving Eavenson a few scratches. Eavenson is a young man of 16 or 18 years, and this was the first quarrel he ever got mixed into, while on the other hand the parties are old hands at the business, especially where talk will avail. The affair was a disgraceful one and one not calculated to reflect credit on any of the participants.

The Independent Movement.

The action of the Independent convention was looked forward to with interest by all parties in this neighborhood, and when the result came "to town," it had different effects on different persons. For instance, on the face of a prominent Democrat was seen a broad smile, indicating the humorous propensity was touched; on the face of an intelligent Independent there appeared a look hard to read, the only certain feature being a look of determination, while the straightouter turned livid, the lips trembled, the nerves twitched, and curses loud and deep were seen if not heard.

The Independent ticket will undoubtedly get a following in this township, and one not to be lightly considered.

A Lancaster Barber Dead in New York.

Postmaster Marshall has received the following communication inquiring after the identity and relatives of a young man who died recently in New York:

NEW YORK, June 5, 1882.

SIR: A young barber, Simon Combe, died in the Presbyterian hospital, Madison avenue and 70th street, New York city. He said he came from Lancaster, Pa. Would you be kind enough to communicate with his relatives, if he has any?

Respectfully,
P. LECKLER.

The Fire Alarm.

For the INTELLIGENCER.

The citizens and property owners are hereby notified that when any of the alarm boxes on East or West King streets are struck for fire, the whole department responds. This would have been the case at the fire Monday afternoon but for the striking of three boxes at the same time.

HENRY N. HOWELL,
Chief Engineer of Fire Department.

Messrs. John A. Coyle, city, Jacob Sneath, of Columbia, and D. F. Magee, of Little Britain, were chosen secretaries.

Two of the delegates of the Second ward were in favor of one substitute and two others of another.

On motion no substitution was received until a majority of the delegates agreed upon his substitution and finally Levi Bartle was agreed upon.

On motion of W. B. Given, esq., it was ordered that the nominations be made in the order in which they are printed in the call for the convention.

Judge Ellmaker being called upon for a speech, thanked the convention for the honor conferred, and promised if elected to see that the wheel was filled with proper names. He believed the prospects for the election of a Democratic governor were excellent, and he advised all Democrats to work unremittingly for that result. He opposed any alliance with the warring factions of the Republican party or any other faction, but to stand squarely on the Democratic platform, and if we then go down we can go down with colors flying. (applause).
