Lynch Law.

We can hardly open a newspaper nowa-days without finding in it an account than it has been for some years at this liarly subject to this lawlessness, which crop. pervades everywhere; even here in Penn. sylvania in a neighboring county a short while since we had an aggravated instance of it. A day or two ago, a man convicted of manslaughter, upon whose tes. timony two or three others had been consecretly put their prisoners on a followed in hot pursuit for over a hundred miles. In this case the law triuntil their legal conviction; then the sion. mob, not satisfied the informer should get off with a bunishment than death, slew him. To-lay we hear that a boy murdered this been lynched in Minnesota. The colant has become so common as hardly to excite remark or attention. And yet it is one which tends to the subversion of our whole system of government.

Oar laws must be vindicated in the manner which they prescribe, if our govnever do to per it to the people's spontaguilt or innocence and the execution of have from time to time put up for it. their fiat. These are the methods of anarchy, not of government; we do not need to prove this position. No one will deny that society generally must be preserved by the execution of its laws in the manner they prescribe. Yet many of those who admit this general proposition permit their feeling of abhorrence of particular crimes to cause them to look leniently upon the lawless punishment of the criminals; and even to aid and abet it.

We know of no crime that demands from the officers of the law more determined action than lynching. And yet lynchers are seldom, if ever, punished, and not often are they even arrested. Pennsylvania to-day suffers under the stain of the hanging by a mob of a criminal in one of her most populous and en-

In Missouri the willingness of the authorities to relieve themselves of criminals in unlawful ways has gone so far as to induce the governor of the state to hire assassins to slay a murderer.

What is to be the end of this? Do we not sorely need to have a deeper reverence for the law amongst us? Is it be cause of the failure of the methods of the law to vindicate them that the pecple are inspired to reject them? Certainly something is very wrong in a community which contemplates with calmness and even satisfaction the what process Capt. E. McMellen was ap- as if he felt at all secure of being nominatalmost daily lynchings which now take pointed to the Republican state committee ed.

Produce the Proof.

In undertaking to correct the E. ... ner's roorbach from Washington, that there was a "secret set-up" to make Randall the Democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania, the New Era likely falls into quite as much of an error when it says:

Don Cameron is to-day paying much more attention to setting up Hopkins for the Democratic nomination for governor than he is to the endeavor to heal the unfortunate divisions in the Republican party. It has always been the Cameron policy to look to both ends of the procession when it is forming, so that no matter which way it moves he will have his man at the head. It is well known that he is exceedingly anxious to have Hopkins nominated, and is working quietly to that end, and for a two-fold reason. He is well aware that if the Democrats nominate such an old chronic office hunter, with his wellknown Cameron sympathies, thousands of Independent Republicans who are opposed to the Cameron Republicant ticked would vote for Beaver rather ake any risks of Hopkins' election. Then, in case of Democratic success, through his obstancy in refusing to withdraw his Harrisburg ticket, "with the tail chopped off," favor of the full Republican ticket nominated at Philadelphia, Don knows that Hopkins as governor would suit him

The New Era needs to learn very little about state politics in order to know that Mr. Hopkins has never been associated with and has never had any sympathy from that part of the Democracy which is known as the "Cameron contingent." He has invariably had their opposition; and there is nothing whatever in his political record which makes it at all likely that Don Cameron is setting him up for the Democratic nomination, or that Cameron would have any less to fear from his election than from that of the other excellent gentlemen who are named in connection with this nomination, and chief among whom seem to be Judge Trunkey, of Venango; Charles R. Buckalew, of Columbia : State Senator W. M. Nelson, of Wayne; Senator J. G. Hall, of Elk; Senator S. P. Wolverton, of Northumberland; Robert E. Pattison, of Philadelphia; Eckley B. Coxe, of Luzerne, and Robert E. Monaghan, of Chester.

The New Era may be assured that the Democracy are bent upon avoiding any man set up by Cameron or preferred by him, and if it can show that Mr. Hopkins or any other of these candidates is such a man it will render effective service in disposing of him; but when it sympathies" of Mr. Hopkins, it refers to something never before, to our knowledge, broached in state politics, and un less it can produce some proofs for such a charge, it must rest under the suspicion of ignorance or misrepresentation.

REV. PLINY STEELE BOYD is not disposed to regard it as a "slur" upon the Con_ gregationalists to say that as a body they are not "soundly Calvinist." On the contrary he deems it unfortunate only for Calvinism that it is left behind by thought ful devoted Christians. "Calvinism is by no means so essential to the spiritual welfare of the churches as many have accustomed themselves to think. The Congregationalists have not waited until the last quarter of the 19th century to learn that Jesus Christ, and not John Calvin, is the true cornerstone of the Christian church. All that is of value, of permanent value to Calvinism, was taught by Jesus, the real Head of the Church ; but he never taught Calvinism. He taught a larger Gospel and broader theology than Calvinism contains. The religion of Jesus Christ is all the better adapted to the various conditions and classes of the human race by reason of its fulness. The Congregationalists have dropped that system of theology, as inade- direction of Professor Arnold, furnished is too small a cup in which to carry to the millions athirst the water of life. SHOOTING AT SATAN. Corpus Christi at a Catholic Church

N. Y. Times Hundreds of waxen tapers burned before sacred shrines in the Church of the Most Holy Trinity, Montrose avenue, E. D., Brooklyn, on Thursdoy, celebrating the feast of Corpus Christi. Young saplings, bushy, tall and green, standing upright, lined the walls and hid the pillars, giving the interior of the church the appearance of a dense growth of underbrush, with a great central glade. In this central glade were 3,000 people, choking the building to the doors. In the east and west aisles were 400 children of the Sunday school, arrayed in white and bearing small baskets of flower-leaves. In the central aisle were forty five men of the Union Guard (a military organization attached to the Most Holy Trinity church), under command of Capt. Shemsomewhat to the Eastern District schuetzen corps. A high mass, composed and directed by Leindecker, was sung by the choir, Father May, celebrant, assisted by Fathers Faesser and Kebeler. The police officers and Coroner Shiffer were soon on hand. The latter empanelled the following named gentlemen as a jury of inquest: Jacob Halbach, Jere Vondersmith, Robert Albright, John B.
